San Francisco Ceremony Held At San Diego Bay

SAN DIEGO — The most glamorous ferryboat ever built for Marin commuters was launched here Saturday in a $38 million venture by the Golden Gate Bridge District to entice people from their cars and into transit.

The San Francisco, the first of three $4.2 million, 735-passenger high-speed vessels to link Larkspur and Sausalito with the Ferry Building in San Francisco, slipped slowly into San Diego Bay after the predictable flood of words from dignitaries assembled for the event.

It was the first launching since 1928 of a commuter ferry built for Marin service. The last was the Golden Age, an auto ferry that ran from Hyde Street to Sausalito until 1937, then in Washington's Puget Sound until her end last year.

Other ferries have been built in recent years for bay service, but are used by Harbor Carriers for its excursions around the bay rather than for commuter service. The present Sausalito ferry was built for excursion use in San Diego.

The new ferry's racy lines and extremely luxurious interior are calculated to draw riders. "If people won't ride this, they'll never ride any ferry," said one bridge official.

Reactions to the interior generally ranged from "it looks like a space ship" to comparisons with first-class seating on jet airliners. With a beam of more than 33 feet, it resembles a wide-body jet that swallowed an extra load of seats.

Seats are wide and high enough to accommodate the largest passengers in great comfort. Some are grouped around tables at bars on both the main and upper decks, others in rows as on an airliner. Leg room is very generous.

The seats in rows have pull-down tables fitted with indentations just the right size to take a cocktail.

Large windows, carpeting and rich fabrics make it a place where the short passage will seem too short.

The third, or sun ceck, has a unique "solarium" forward, with a blue-tinted acrylic roof to fend off the wind. The speed of the ferry alone, after all, will generate a 30-mile-an-hour wind to refresh open-air fans.

The middle section of the sun deck can be covered over by canvas, and the aft is fully open. Clear acrylic panels are set below the railing around the sun deck, giving a good view of the passing bay while breaking the wind to protect passenbers.

The automatic engine room, which will be operated remotely from a wheelhouse sporting a forest of electronic controls, looks more like the innards of a rocket than of a ship. The vessel is the first passenger ferry ever powered by gas tur-

TENSE CONFRONTATION

Dominican Captivity Continues

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Seven hostages, including a U.S. woman diplomat, wound up a grueling week and a half in captivity today, pawns in a dramatic confrontation between leftist guerrillas and the Dominican government.

A flurry of government activity outside the darkened Venezuelan Consulate yesterday raised suspicions of guerrillas inside the besieged building and led to a new threat against the captives.

An ambulance drew up by the consulate and police suddenly moved newsmen back three blocks from the building. Guerrilla chief Radames Mendez Vargas, suspicious of the moves, rushed to a consulate window.

"If you take measures, we will too," he yelled at police.

U.S. Ambassador Robert Hurwitch went into a nearby Baptist church to telephone the guerrillas. He later stepped out into a patio and shouted to Mendez.

Hurwitch delivered a food package to the consulate later in the day, but the guerrillas let the box lie for a half-hour despite the ambassador's shouts of "Trust me. I guarantee it's okay."

The leftists kidnaped U.S. Embassy public affairs officer Barbara Hutchison, 47, of Newark, Del., on Sept. 27 as she was driving on a Santo Domingo street.

The guerrillas drove her to the consulate, captured the building and seized six other hostages, including the Venezuelan consul and a Spanish priest.

The guerrillas demanded $1 million ransom and safe passage out of the country for themselves and three dozen imprisoned comrades.

They threatened to execute the hostages at two-hour intervals, but four different deadlines passed without any reports of captives slain.

On Thursday, the leftists dropped the $1 million request and said the number of political prisoners released was negotiable.

Police Chief Rafael Guillermo Guzman Acosta, in the only break in official silence, said Friday he would accept only unconditional surrender.

Authorities have cut electricity and water to the consulate, but Hurwitz has brought daily supplies of food, water and medicine to the building.

Fulltime Deputy Attorney Proposed For San Rafael

By NELS JOHNSON

The San Rafael city administration has proposed that the city hire a full-time deputy city attorney, while continuing to retain elected City Atty. Fred C. Robbins part-time.

The move would cost the city $49,992 annually, not including an initial $12,000 expense for a law library and equipment, according to City Mgr. William J. Bielser. Currently, Robbins works about 60 hours monthly on city legal business, including time spent at council meetings, and commands a budget of $22,425.

The San Rafael City Council will consider the proposal at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Under Bielser's proposal, Robbins' current salary of $1,225 monthly would be cut to $242 monthly, the same stipend given city councilmen. Robbins actual duties would be reduced to "larger legal policy issues" and he would be free to "be an independent voice and serve a role in terms of checks and balances," according to the memo by Bielser.

The appointed deputy city attorney would handle day-to-day legal affairs of the city and litigation as well as redevelopment matters, Bielser states in his memo to councilmen.

(Proposals to make the city attorney an appointive rather than elective job have been defeated five times in San Rafael since 1931, most recently last June when 7,739 residents or 63 per cent of those voting wanted the attorney to continue to be an elected official, while 4,606 thought he should be appointed by the council.)

The city manager notes that the council is empowered by the city charter to employ other attorneys to take charge of any litigation or to assist the elected city attorney.

Two other ways to boost the city's legal service are purchasing additional hours from Robbins' legal office or other outside counsel, and making the city attorney post a full-time position, according to Bielser.

Bielser's calculations show that purchasing additional legal hours would cost the city $62,900 annually for legal services, and making the post full time would cost $49,788 annually.

Bielser's memo notes that legal needs of the city have grown in recent years. "Other services that are very much needed include attendance of the city attorney at planning commission meetings; analyzing and keeping staff informed on proposed legislative changes which might affect the city; keeping staff posted on newly adopted laws and their effect; taking an active role in the drafting of local legislation rather than merely receiving that which has been drafted by the staff; keeping local ordinances systematically up-to-date and, lastly, more comprehensive legal research," according to the city manager.

Bielser also says that Robbins has advised city staff he will not seek reelection in March if the city attorney post is made a full-time position.

Bielser's memo is a result of a study of the city's legal needs and services that he was directed to undertake last July by the city council. Robbins said at that time the city should pay him more money so he could spend more time on municipal matters.

Two Marin County supervisors will recommend tomorrow that the powers of the county administrator be expanded to oversee planning matters coming before the county planning commission.

The recommendation, drafted by Supervisors Gary T. Giacomini and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., proposes the administrator's office be charged with preparing planning commission agendas.

Since adoption of the county general plan, they said, there is a greater need for coordination among various departments on matters coming before the commission.

"...Land use planning as most of us know it is rapidly expanding to cover a wide range of disciplines and services," the two supervisors said, citing housing needs as an example.

Burger, Arm In Sling, Opens Term

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, his left arm in a sling because of a bicycle accident, today opened the 1974-75 Supreme Court term that will face such thorny issues as capital punishment and wiretapping.

The opening session was a ceremonial one at which 14 attorneys were admitted to practice. Then the nine justices went into private conferences to begin consideration of 992 appeals that have piled up over the summer.

Burger came to the bench dressed in the customary black robe but with his left arm in a sling underneath. Burger suffered multiple injuries Sept. 20 in a fall from a bicycle but he is able to use his hand by resting his elbow on the bench.

Burger, Arm In Sling, Opens Term

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, his left arm in a sling because of a bicycle accident, today opened the 1974-75 Supreme Court term that will face such thorny issues as capital punishment and wiretapping.

The opening session was a ceremonial one at which 14 attorneys were admitted to practice. Then the nine justices went into private conferences to begin consideration of 992 appeals that have piled up over the summer.

Burger came to the bench dressed in the customary black robe but with his left arm in a sling underneath. Burger suffered multiple injuries Sept. 20 in a fall from a bicycle but he is able to use his hand by resting his elbow on the bench.

SNOWMAN FOR ALL SEASONS

The snowman being embraced by 3-year-old Mary Lou Nielson of Helena, Mont., is not just a creature of winter. With eyes and nose made of marigolds and bachelor buttons, and a mustache from leaves of a corn stalk, the snowman belongs as much to summer and fall as it does to the snowy season, which came to Helena Saturday morning with a 1.5-inch wintry blanket. Terrorist Group Takes Credit For Second Sheraton Bombing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A group that earlier declared vengeance against a major corporation claimed responsibility for the bombing of a plush hotel during the weekend that destroyed a restroom and caused extensive damage to another, police said yesterday.

The blast went off minutes after an anonymous telephone caller, identifying himself with a group called the New World Liberation Front, warned of an impending explosion at the Sheraton Airport Inn Saturday.

More than 300 persons attending a 20-year high school class reunion were being evacuated from a ballroom-bar area near the rear of the building when the bomb went off in an unoccupied women's restroom.

The blast shattered the fixtures in the restroom, buckled the ceiling and blew a hole in the wall to an adjoining men's restroom, causing extensive damage.

There were no injuries.

The blast was almost a duplicate of a bombing of the Sheraton Palace Hotel in San Francisco last week, in which the bombers claimed to be out to punish the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., which owns the Sheraton hotel chain.

Preceding the San Francisco blast, a male caller, also identifying himself with the New World Liberation Front, warned of a bomb and told the hotel to evacuate its tenants.

Authorities combed through the rubble of the Saturday night blast, trying to determine a relationship with the San Francisco explosion. However, police declined to comment on the political aspects of the two bombings against ITT-owned facilities.

In a written communication left at a San Francisco gas station after last week's explosion, the NWLF accused ITT of creating a "reign of terror" in Chile by conspiring to overthrow the Allende government.

The two-page statement demanded that ITT "implement the release of all political prisoners" in Chile and threatened further action directed against the giant corporation if the demands were not met.

Ron Jordan, 42, a guest at the class reunion, was in the men's restroom when the bomb went off. He told police he thought a water heater had exploded.

"It was loud and it scared the living hell out of me," Jordan said. "I was stunned for a couple of seconds, then I just ran down the hall.

"There was no fire, no smoke and no heat, but it was as jarring as all hell," he said. "There was no warning."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Assassination Try Admitted

SEOUL (UPI) — A young Korean admitted today he had tried to assassinate President Park Chung-hee but he said he does not remember shooting the wife of the president and regrets that one of his bullets killed the first lady.

Moon

Moon Se-kwang, 23, a resident of Japan, went on trial for attempting to kill Park at a rally Aug. 15. Mrs. Park was fatally wounded in the attack but her husband was unhurt.

"All I remember is firing the first shot at the president," Moon said. "What happened after that I don't remember. I don't know how to apologize for the death of the first lady.

"Whatever the circumstances it cannot be forgiven that I killed an innocent lady, though I learned of her death only during the investigation," he said.

Betty Ford 'Better'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford spent several hours visiting with his wife Betty yesterday and reported she is "getting better and better every day."

The optimistic assessment came as the President and his sister-in-law, Janet Ford, left Bethesda Naval Medical Center for the White House last night. "She is getting better and better every day," Ford told reporters.

Nixon Stays Home

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon spent the weekend at his oceanside home, recovering from phlebitis and still not knowing whether he must travel to Washington to testify at a Watergate coverup trial.

Jury selection in the trial of five of Nixon's former White House associates began last week under a gag order by U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica and was to resume today. Jury selection was expected to take another two weeks, and Sirica was not expected to rule on two key issues involving Nixon until its completion — a motion by the former chief executive's attorneys to excuse Nixon from testifying at the trial, presumably because of ill health; and a request from special prosecutor Leon Jaworski that Sirica ignore the findings of Nixon's personal physician and order a court-appointed medical team to examine him.

McGovern Spends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has spent more than $1.3 million — nearly six times as much as his Republican opponent — in his bid for re-election to a third term.

Public records obtained by United Press International show McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, spent $552,711 in his re-election effort last year. His three campaign committees had $212,872 on hand in January.

His opponent, Leo K. Thorsness, a 42-year-old former Air Force officer who spent six years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam, received $270,000.

Detente Endorsed

BERLIN (UPI) — Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev says the Kremlin wants to take new steps with the United States to limit arms and improve East-West detente.

In a speech marking East Germany's 25th anniversary, the Soviet leader said yesterday agreements reached in recent years on arms cutbacks "are not working badly."

Wilson Leads Polls

LONDON (UPI) — Political leaders entered the critical last three days of Britain's national election campaign today with opinion polls showing Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor party still leading the field.

Five weekend polls gave Labor leads ranging from one to nine per cent over former Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative party.

New Constitution

BANGKOK (UPI) — King Bhumibol Adulyadej today signed a new constitution designed to return Thailand to democratic rule but voiced strong objections to some provisions which he said don't place him sufficiently above politics.

The charter was signed in time for promulgation on the Oct. 14 anniversary of the overthrow of the military dictatorship. It opens the way for general elections early next year, probably Feb. 1.

Sadat's Warning

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says the Arab world intends to use the Middle East's mounting "petrodollars" to buy its way into the superpower club.

Sadat, in an interview published yesterday by the Beirut magazine Al Usbu Al Arabi, predicted the Arabs would someday be the world's "third or fourth power."

Wild River Backers Shell Out $75,000

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Backers of the wild rivers initiative, one of 17 propositions on the November ballot, have spent nearly $75,000 in an attempt to halt construction of a dam on the Stanislaus River, according to state records.

A statement filed with the secretary of state's office Saturday showed that until July 24 the "Friends of the River" and a similar group in Sacramento spent $74,622 and received $85,143 in loans and donations.

A report from the measure's opponents was not received. A spokesman for the secretary of state's office said a statement might be in the mail, but if it were not postmarked before midnight last Friday, a $10-a-day fine could be imposed.

The spokesman said a Friends of the River statement for August and September had not been received.

The only other statement filed indicated $6,208 had been collected and $1,301 spent supporting Prop. 15, a measure that would remove a requirement that voters approve low-rent public housing projects.

The AFL-CIO was the largest donor in support of Prop. 15, providing a $5,000 loan from the Committee on Political Education, Assemblyman Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, author of legislation to put the measure on the ballot, donated $500.

The majority of the money given to the Friends of the River was collected from passengers carried down the Stanislaus River.

The group received $27,918 in loans, including four loans totaling $14,418 from Gerald H. Meral, Berkeley.

A Stockton-based group, "People of the River," opposed Prop. 17. A statement filed by treasurer T.K. Beard said all money would be transferred to a group called "Californians against Prop. 17." No statement from that group had been received by the state.

'Music School' To Be Shown

"The Music School," a new film by John Korty, will be shown at 8 p.m. Thursday in Olney Hall at the College of Marin, Kentfield.

Korty is best known for his television production of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman". "The Music School" is based on a short story by John Updike. Tickets cost $2.50 and may be obtained from the college box office.

She was standing in as hostess for her mother, and wore a bright red gown, long white gloves and a single strand of white pearls.

Ford appeared subdued as he greeted the guests after returning from a visit to his wife Betty's hospital suite in Bethesda, Md., where she is recovering from cancer surgery.

Moon

Moon Se-kwang, 23, a resident of Japan, went on trial for attempting to kill Park at a rally Aug. 15. Mrs. Park was fatally wounded in the attack but her husband was unhurt.

"All I remember is firing the first shot at the president," Moon said. "What happened after that I don't remember. I don't know how to apologize for the death of the first lady.

"Whatever the circumstances it cannot be forgiven that I killed an innocent lady, though I learned of her death only during the investigation," he said.

Betty Ford 'Better'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford spent several hours visiting with his wife Betty yesterday and reported she is "getting better and better every day."

The optimistic assessment came as the President and his sister-in-law, Janet Ford, left Bethesda Naval Medical Center for the White House last night. "She is getting better and better every day," Ford told reporters.

McGovern Spends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has spent more than $1.3 million — nearly six times as much as his Republican opponent — in his bid for re-election to a third term.

Public records obtained by United Press International show McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, spent $552,711 in his re-election effort last year. His three campaign committees had $212,872 on hand in January.

His opponent, Leo K. Thorsness, a 42-year-old former Air Force officer who spent six years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam, received $270,000.

Detente Endorsed

BERLIN (UPI) — Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev says the Kremlin wants to take new steps with the United States to limit arms and improve East-West detente.

In a speech marking East Germany's 25th anniversary, the Soviet leader said yesterday agreements reached in recent years on arms cutbacks "are not working badly."

Wilson Leads Polls

LONDON (UPI) — Political leaders entered the critical last three days of Britain's national election campaign today with opinion polls showing Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor party still leading the field.

Five weekend polls gave Labor leads ranging from one to nine per cent over former Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative party.

Nixon Stays Home

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon spent the weekend at his oceanside home, recovering from phlebitis and still not knowing whether he must travel to Washington to testify at a Watergate coverup trial.

Jury selection in the trial of five of Nixon's former White House associates began last week under a gag order by U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica and was to resume today. Jury selection was expected to take another two weeks, and Sirica was not expected to rule on two key issues involving Nixon until its completion — a motion by the former chief executive's attorneys to excuse Nixon from testifying at the trial, presumably because of ill health; and a request from special prosecutor Leon Jaworski that Sirica ignore the findings of Nixon's personal physician and order a court-appointed medical team to examine him.

New Constitution

BANGKOK (UPI) — King Bhumibol Adulyadej today signed a new constitution designed to return Thailand to democratic rule but voiced strong objections to some provisions which he said don't place him sufficiently above politics.

The charter was signed in time for promulgation on the Oct. 14 anniversary of the overthrow of the military dictatorship. It opens the way for general elections early next year, probably Feb. 1.

Sadat's Warning

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says the Arab world intends to use the Middle East's mounting "petrodollars" to buy its way into the superpower club.

Sadat, in an interview published yesterday by the Beirut magazine Al Usbu Al Arabi, predicted the Arabs would someday be the world's "third or fourth power."

Wild River Backers Shell Out $75,000

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Backers of the wild rivers initiative, one of 17 propositions on the November ballot, have spent nearly $75,000 in an attempt to halt construction of a dam on the Stanislaus River, according to state records.

A statement filed with the secretary of state's office Saturday showed that until July 24 the "Friends of the River" and a similar group in Sacramento spent $74,622 and received $85,143 in loans and donations.

A report from the measure's opponents was not received. A spokesman for the secretary of state's office said a statement might be in the mail, but if it were not postmarked before midnight last Friday, a $10-a-day fine could be imposed.

The spokesman said a Friends of the River statement for August and September had not been received.

The only other statement filed indicated $6,208 had been collected and $1,301 spent supporting Prop. 15, a measure that would remove a requirement that voters approve low-rent public housing projects.

The AFL-CIO was the largest donor in support of Prop. 15, providing a $5,000 loan from the Committee on Political Education, Assemblyman Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, author of legislation to put the measure on the ballot, donated $500.

The majority of the money given to the Friends of the River was collected from passengers carried down the Stanislaus River.

The group received $27,918 in loans, including four loans totaling $14,418 from Gerald H. Meral, Berkeley.

A Stockton-based group, "People of the River," opposed Prop. 17. A statement filed by treasurer T.K. Beard said all money would be transferred to a group called "Californians against Prop. 17." No statement from that group had been received by the state.

Susan Ford, 17, Plays Hostess

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Susan Ford, the President's 17-year-old daughter, was the hostess at the White House this weekend, welcoming the Washington diplomatic corps to a shish-kebab and champagne reception.

She was standing in as hostess for her mother, and wore a bright red gown, long white gloves and a single strand of white pearls.

Ford appeared subdued as he greeted the guests after returning from a visit to his wife Betty's hospital suite in Bethesda, Md., where she is recovering from cancer surgery.

Argentine Major Assassinated

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Four unidentified assailants today ambushed army Maj. Jaime Gimeno, a biochemist, and shot him to death as he was leaving his home in suburban Buenos Aires. His son, witnessing the attack from a first floor window of the house, shot and killed one assassin and wounded two more, police reported.

Police arrested the wounded attackers, but the fourth escaped, police said. A search of the truck used by the attacking band turned up several weapons including rifles and hand grenades, according to police reports.

The incident occurred following an offer of amnesty to the government of President Maria Estela Peron from the Marxist guerrilla group The Peoples' Revolutionary Army made last night.

The conditions appeared in a communique distributed to various Buenos Aires newspapers.

The group said in the communique that amnesty would be declared if the government would free all political prisoners, annul an antisubversion law recently put into effect with the president's approval, annul a decree signed last September by the late President Juan Peron making the group illegal.

In return, the ERP said it would give amnesty, presumably to the Argentine army, which has lost four men to ERP assassins since Sept. 18, when the group vowed to kill 16 army men for 16 ERP guerrillas who died in an army base raid in Catamarca Province in August.

The 16 raiders were executed by the army after they surrendered, according to the ERP.

The group would also release its three current hostages, two of them army officers captured in base raids this year. The third is a German business executive.

ERP leader Roberto Santucho said that the offer was being made in view of an upcoming meeting of government and military leaders called by the President over Argentina' s escalating political violence.

More than 140 persons have died in Argentina this year from guerrilla combats, bombings and political assassinations, according to an unofficial UPI compilation.

AC Transit Cuts 15 Transbay Runs

OAKLAND (UPI) — The AC Transit District cut 15 more bus trips across the Bay Bridge today, bringing to 71 the number of runs eliminated since BART began transbay service Sept. 16.

FBI Seeks Only Three

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI agent in charge of the hunt for the Symbionese Liberation Army says Patricia Hearst and Bill and Emily Harris are the only members of the terrorist group sought by his organization.

Agent Charles Bates commented yesterday on reports that code names have been discovered for nine additional SLA members and sympathizers.

"I don't know of anything of that nature," Bates said.

"If we knew of anybody involved in the crimes the SLA committed or involved to the extent of harboring them, we would get warrants."

The Chicago Tribune reported during the weekend that the code names of nine persons were found in a house once used by the SLA in Concord.

Train Kills 11 Cows

YAPHANK, N.Y. (UPI) — A commuter train collided with a herd of cows grazing on Long Island Railroad tracks last night, resulting in the deaths of 11 animals, police reported.

Ex-Governor Hodges Dies Of Seizure

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Former Gov. Luther H. Hodges Sr., who rose from a nickel-an-hour office boy to textile mill executive, governor of North Carolina and finally secretary of commerce under two presidents, died yesterday. He was 76.

Hodges died of an apparent heart attack as he strolled in the backyard of his home.

The son of a sharecropper, Hodges worked as an office boy and millhand, putting in a 60-hour week.

When he returned with a degree from the University of North Carolina in 1919, he rose steadily until he was executive vice president of Marshall Field and Co., parent firm of his hometown mill, and earned $75,000 a year on retirement in 1950 at age 52.

After amazing courthouse politicians by winning the Democratic primary nomination for lieutenant governor in 1952, a victory at that time tantamount to election, Hodges took over as governor in 1954 on the death of Gov. William B. Umstead.

He won election on his own in 1956 by a two-to-one margin over Republican Kyle Hayes.

Among his major accomplishments, one he considered his "real love" in retirement, was setting up the Research Triangle Park, a complex of research and development offices for many of the nation's leading firms which attracted $150 million in laboratories and 8,000 persons to the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area.

Survivors include his widow, Louise, whom he married after his first wife, the former Martha Backney, died in 1969 of injuries suffered in a fire; a son, Luther H. Hodges Jr. of Charlotte, chairman of North Carolina National Bank; and two daughters.

It keeps cells young and active! Earlier, two U.C. physiologists found vitamin E increases the life-span of mice. These same scientists have just demonstrated that the vitamin retards aging in humans, too, at least in a test tube.

Cells die if clogged by harmful substances called "free radicals" which are increased by pollution. But vitamin E helps our cells resist such damage so they remain young and active, the doctors say. VITAMIN E IS SPECIALLY PRICED RIGHT NOW DURING OUR FALL SALE, WHICH ENDS TOMORROW EVENING. YOU'LL FIND OTHER GREAT BARGAINS, TOO.

MYSTERIOUS PUMPKIN PRANK

"The Great Pumpkin Has struck" the lettering on this jack-o-lantern solemnly informs a curious passing pooch. Why it struck remains as mysterious as everything else about it. It was discovered in the early morning, wedged in the Independent-Journal's revolving door at Fifth and B streets in San Rafael.

Briton Doubts Drake Replica Will Make It

OAKLAND (UPI) — Harold Pattinson, the former lord mayor of Plymouth, England, says he wouldn't bet money the sailing vessel Golden Hinde II will make it to San Francisco.

Pattinson told a Society of Mayflower Descendants' luncheon Saturday the replica of Sir Francis Drake's ship has already been forced by a storm to seek refuge at Falmouth, England.

The vessel sailed from Plymouth last Tuesday to follow Drake's route to San Francisco, with one notable exception —it will pass through the Panama Canal rather than sailing around Cape Horn.

Historians believe that during Drake's 1577-1580 circumnavigation of the world, he beached and repaired the Golden Hinde on the Marin County coastline.

He Gets The Yacht, Cadillac

CHICAGO (UPI) — Donna Bradshaw, daughter of insurance magnate W. Clement Stone, and her husband, David, have agreed that she gets the Rolls Royce and $250,000 apartment, and he gets the Cadillac, yacht and limousine.

Mrs. Bradshaw, 39, charged her second husband, 47, "ripped (her) off" by mismanaging her money, and she filed suit to dissolve their $1.5 million business partnership. She also filed a divorce petition, which was put off with the temporary agreement Friday.

Mrs. Bradshaw, who estimated her wealth at $38 million, charged him with making investments without her knowledge and with marrying for "other than love." One of those investments, she charged, was $15,000 in contributions to President Nixon's 1972 presidential campaign.

Standard Time Becomes Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has signed a law returning the country to standard time for four months starting Oct. 27.

The measure, signed Saturday, amends the Emergency Daylight Saving Time Energy Conservation Act, passed last year when there was a critical fuel shortage and Congress wanted to extend daylight for the waking hours of most Americans.

Standard time will end Feb. 23, 1975.

Council To Hear Emergency Ban

The Corte Madera Town Council, meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at town hall, will discuss an emergency ordinance that would ban building on the railroad right-of-way through the town until the Corte Madera general plan is finished.

Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels said the council also will discuss rate increases proposed by Tele-Vue Systems, which operates cable television in the city.

Stabbed Inmate Dies Of Wounds

A San Quentin inmate who was stabbed by a fellow convict on Sept. 26 died today in the prison hospital. He was the eighth inmate to succumb to stab wounds at the prison this year.

Arturo M. Sanchez, 29, was reported off the critical list two days after he was stabbed in the chest and neck, but his condition apparently worsened, according to a prison spokesman. An autopsy is to be performed by the Marin County corner's office.

Sanchez, who had been at San Quentin two years, was serving 15 years to life for burglary in San Bernardino County.

He was stabbed on the fifth tier of the North Block, according to prison officials. He walked down to the first tier where he collapsed into the arms of a correctional officer.

There have been 61 stabbings at the prison this year.

bine-driven water jets. Others have been military, private or experimental.

The stern also shows that this is no ordinary boat. Three massive exhaust ports about the size of afterburners on a jet fighter stick out of the stern and below them are the three 36-inch water jets.

The jets will generate more than 50,000 pounds of thrust, or more power than most jet airliners. To do so, each engine will burn 208 gallons of fuel an hour.

The present Sausalito ferry burns 57 gallons of diesel fuel an hour, and makes 14 knots. Maximum speed of the new vessels is expected to be 28 knots, but it can be operated on one, two or three engines to conserve fuel.

Each turbine, however, will be run full bore when operating, since that's the speed at which they work best. The jets, which also steer, are above the water, thus immune from the hazards of floating debris.

Officials at Campbell Industries, which began construction of the ferry in November, 1972, said the San Francisco is 97 per cent complete. Sea trials will begin in about a month, with delivery to San Francisco Bay expected in late November, they said.

The trip up the coast will take three days, with the ferry putting into port each night because the Coast Guard will not permit it to operate on the ocean at night.

Crew testing and final outfitting, from mooring lines to toilet paper, will take another two to three weeks after the boat gets to San Francisco. The bridge district's ferry transit manager, Stanley M. Kowleski, stuck to his earlier prediction that it would be in service to Sausalito "by the first of the year."

The ferry originally was to be in service last June. Its transom declares that its home port is Larkspur, but the terminal there will not be ready until the spring of 1976, two years behind schedule. The two sister ships, Marin and Sonoma, will be completed but remain on their construction blocks at the shipyard until the Larkspur terminal is nearly ready.

The launching ceremony crew about 1, including the workers who built the ferry, their families, a troop of Cub Scouts, public officials, and even a few Marin and San Francisco citizens who had helped push for the ferry system over the past seven years.

Hundreds of balloons emblazoned "I Love the Ferry" were given to the crowd as it streamed through the gates of the shipyard, and a four-piece band attempted to enliven the endless introductions of personages with little fanfares.

After all the speeches, which almost no one could hear thanks to a poor public address system and competition from jets overhead, the bow was whacked with a bottle of champagne by Rosemary Leonoudakis, wife of the president of the bridge board, Stephan C. Leonoudakis. He long has been the prime mover behind the district's entry into the ferry business, and predicted it will take 3,000 cars off the bridge each weekday morning.

While district press agents issued advance releases declaring the launching was a "giant splash," in fact the 165-foot aluminum boat was rolled down the ways so slowly that it took five minutes before it even got wet.

Even in the water, the 165-foot ferry looked vastly bigger than the one now serving Sausalito, which is 113 feet long.

According to district plans, the present Sausalito ferry will not be used when the new one makes the runs. Crossing time will remain the same 30 minutes, since only one or two of the turbines will operate at a time.

The trip from Larkspur to San Francisco will take 32 minutes.

Still remaining to be done before the new ferry can start service is about $15,000 of work on the Sausalito float and up to $50,000 of improvements to the north side of Pier 1 in San Francisco, the temporary landing pending construction of a new terminal at the Ferry Building. Kowleski predicted both will be done by the end of December.

nearly every county department, they continued, adding that the county will become more active in housing and employment matters in the future because of federal "block grants" being approved in Washington.

The supervisors recommended that in order to achieve greater coordination all county departments "provide the administrator with the necessary staff and information on a timely basis so that he may successfully discharge the duties we are assigning. . ."

County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell, who has been responsible for preparing planning commission agendas, said today he agreed with the shift to the county administrtor.

He said County Administrator John F. Barrows carries the "umph to command input from other departments" that he as planning director lacks because the planning director is only "equal" to other department heads.

The county administrator's office is currently responsible for preparing agendas for the board of supervisors.

Von Gundell said he did not think any of his own authority over the planning staff will be weakened by the shift.

Giacomini said a recent visit to eastern counties indicated their future planning "is totally coordinated under the auspices of their boards of supervisors and their county administrators."

The proposal of creating a stronger county administrator's office was suggested in June in a controversial consultants' report to the county grand jury.

Another consultants' study, dealing with the economic impact of the county general plan, also recommended greater coordination among departments but was silent on who should do the coordinating.

While the two supervisors used the county general plan as the basis for their recommendation, there has been some criticism in recent months of Von Gundell's handling of the planning commission agenda.

Last month, for example, several commissioners questioned why he had recommended to establish "safety zones" around Hamilton Air Force Base after the county counsel's office had said the proposal, as drafted, could make the county liable for inverse condemnation suits if carried out.

The board of supervisors will consider the recommendation during tomorrow's meeting, which will start at 11 a.m. at the Civic Center.

Senator Hit For Remarks On Starvation

DENVER (UPI) — Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., says he was just being facetious. His Democratic opponent, Gary Hart, called it "disgusting."

The dispute between the two Senate candidates broke out over remarks made by Dominick last week during a discussion about the United Nations and the world food problem.

In reference to a report that Uganda leader Idi Amin may have executed as many as 250,000 of his countrymen since 1971, Dominick remarked: "Ugandans would rather eat their own people than they would food."

Hart said the statement was "incredibly insensitive" and demonstrated "an utter failure to comprehend the grave problems of poverty and malnutrition in Africa."

World Record 314-Pound Swordfish Taken

The largest swordfish on record previously was a 204-pounder caught in April, 1973.

Larry Barrett, 27, Newport Beach, said he used a 30-pound test line and a "psychedelic" lure to make the catch.

MYSTERIOUS PUMPKIN PRANK

"The Great Pumpkin Has struck" the lettering on this jack-o-lantern solemnly informs a curious passing pooch. Why it struck remains as mysterious as everything else about it. It was discovered in the early morning, wedged in the Independent-Journal's revolving door at Fifth and B streets in San Rafael.

Briton Doubts Drake Replica Will Make It

OAKLAND (UPI) — Harold Pattinson, the former lord mayor of Plymouth, England, says he wouldn't bet money the sailing vessel Golden Hinde II will make it to San Francisco.

Pattinson told a Society of Mayflower Descendants' luncheon Saturday the replica of Sir Francis Drake's ship has already been forced by a storm to seek refuge at Falmouth, England.

The vessel sailed from Plymouth last Tuesday to follow Drake's route to San Francisco, with one notable exception —it will pass through the Panama Canal rather than sailing around Cape Horn.

Historians believe that during Drake's 1577-1580 circumnavigation of the world, he beached and repaired the Golden Hinde on the Marin County coastline.

He Gets The Yacht, Cadillac

CHICAGO (UPI) — Donna Bradshaw, daughter of insurance magnate W. Clement Stone, and her husband, David, have agreed that she gets the Rolls Royce and $250,000 apartment, and he gets the Cadillac, yacht and limousine.

Mrs. Bradshaw, 39, charged her second husband, 47, "ripped (her) off" by mismanaging her money, and she filed suit to dissolve their $1.5 million business partnership. She also filed a divorce petition, which was put off with the temporary agreement Friday.

Mrs. Bradshaw, who estimated her wealth at $38 million, charged him with making investments without her knowledge and with marrying for "other than love." One of those investments, she charged, was $15,000 in contributions to President Nixon's 1972 presidential campaign.

Standard Time Becomes Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has signed a law returning the country to standard time for four months starting Oct. 27.

The measure, signed Saturday, amends the Emergency Daylight Saving Time Energy Conservation Act, passed last year when there was a critical fuel shortage and Congress wanted to extend daylight for the waking hours of most Americans.

Standard time will end Feb. 23, 1975.

Council To Hear Emergency Ban

The Corte Madera Town Council, meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at town hall, will discuss an emergency ordinance that would ban building on the railroad right-of-way through the town until the Corte Madera general plan is finished.

Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels said the council also will discuss rate increases proposed by Tele-Vue Systems, which operates cable television in the city.

Stabbed Inmate Dies Of Wounds

A San Quentin inmate who was stabbed by a fellow convict on Sept. 26 died today in the prison hospital. He was the eighth inmate to succumb to stab wounds at the prison this year.

Arturo M. Sanchez, 29, was reported off the critical list two days after he was stabbed in the chest and neck, but his condition apparently worsened, according to a prison spokesman. An autopsy is to be performed by the Marin County corner's office.

Sanchez, who had been at San Quentin two years, was serving 15 years to life for burglary in San Bernardino County.

He was stabbed on the fifth tier of the North Block, according to prison officials. He walked down to the first tier where he collapsed into the arms of a correctional officer.

A nine-inch long steel shank was found at the scene of the stabbing, but no suspect or motive was found.

There have been 61 stabbings at the prison this year.

Glamorous Ferryboat Launched In San Diego

bine-driven water jets. Others have been military, private or experimental.

The stern also shows that this is no ordinary boat. Three massive exhaust ports about the size of afterburners on a jet fighter stick out of the stern and below them are the three 36-inch water jets.

The jets will generate more than 50,000 pounds of thrust, or more power than most jet airliners. To do so, each engine will burn 208 gallons of fuel an hour.

The present Sausalito ferry burns 57 gallons of diesel fuel an hour, and makes 14 knots. Maximum speed of the new vessels is expected to be 28 knots, but it can be operated on one, two or three engines to conserve fuel.

Each turbine, however, will be run full bore when operating, since that's the speed at which they work best. The jets, which also steer, are above the water, thus immune from the hazards of floating debris.

Officials at Campbell Industries, which began construction of the ferry in November, 1972, said the San Francisco is 97 per cent complete. Sea trials will begin in about a month, with delivery to San Francisco Bay expected in late November, they said.

The trip up the coast will take three days, with the ferry putting into port each night because the Coast Guard will not permit it to operate on the ocean at night.

Crew testing and final outfitting, from mooring lines to toilet paper, will take another two to three weeks after the boat gets to San Francisco. The bridge district's ferry transit manager, Stanley M. Kowleski, stuck to his earlier prediction that it would be in service to Sausalito "by the first of the year."

The ferry originally was to be in service last June. Its transom declares that its home port is Larkspur, but the terminal there will not be ready until the spring of 1976, two years behind schedule. The two sister ships, Marin and Sonoma, will be completed but remain on their construction blocks at the shipyard until the Larkspur terminal is nearly ready.

The launching ceremony crew about 1, including the workers who built the ferry, their families, a troop of Cub Scouts, public officials, and even a few Marin and San Francisco citizens who had helped push for the ferry system over the past seven years.

Hundreds of balloons emblazoned "I Love the Ferry" were given to the crowd as it streamed through the gates of the shipyard, and a four-piece band attempted to enliven the endless introductions of personages with little fanfares.

After all the speeches, which almost no one could hear thanks to a poor public address system and competition from jets overhead, the bow was whacked with a bottle of champagne by Rosemary Leonoudakis, wife of the president of the bridge board, Stephan C. Leonoudakis. He long has been the prime mover behind the district's entry into the ferry business, and predicted it will take 3,000 cars off the bridge each weekday morning.

While district press agents issued advance releases declaring the launching was a "giant splash," in fact the 165-foot aluminum boat was rolled down the ways so slowly that it took five minutes before it even got wet.

Even in the water, the 165-foot ferry looked vastly bigger than the one now serving Sausalito, which is 113 feet long.

According to district plans, the present Sausalito ferry will not be used when the new one makes the runs. Crossing time will remain the same 30 minutes, since only one or two of the turbines will operate at a time.

The trip from Larkspur to San Francisco will take 32 minutes.

Still remaining to be done before the new ferry can start service is about $15,000 of work on the Sausalito float and up to $50,000 of improvements to the north side of Pier 1 in San Francisco, the temporary landing pending construction of a new terminal at the Ferry Building. Kowleski predicted both will be done by the end of December.

POWER

nearly every county department, they continued, adding that the county will become more active in housing and employment matters in the future because of federal "block grants" being approved in Washington.

The supervisors recommended that in order to achieve greater coordination all county departments "provide the administrator with the necessary staff and information on a timely basis so that he may successfully discharge the duties we are assigning. . ."

County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell, who has been responsible for preparing planning commission agendas, said today he agreed with the shift to the county administrtor.

He said County Administrator John F. Barrows carries the "umph to command input from other departments" that he as planning director lacks because the planning director is only "equal" to other department heads.

The county administrator's office is currently responsible for preparing agendas for the board of supervisors.

Von Gundell said he did not think any of his own authority over the planning staff will be weakened by the shift.

Giacomini said a recent visit to eastern counties indicated their future planning "is totally coordinated under the auspices of their boards of supervisors and their county administrators."

The proposal of creating a stronger county administrator's office was suggested in June in a controversial consultants' report to the county grand jury.

Another consultants' study, dealing with the economic impact of the county general plan, also recommended greater coordination among departments but was silent on who should do the coordinating.

While the two supervisors used the county general plan as the basis for their recommendation, there has been some criticism in recent months of Von Gundell's handling of the planning commission agenda.

Last month, for example, several commissioners questioned why he had recommended to establish "safety zones" around Hamilton Air Force Base after the county counsel's office had said the proposal, as drafted, could make the county liable for inverse condemnation suits if carried out.

The board of supervisors will consider the recommendation during tomorrow's meeting, which will start at 11 a.m. at the Civic Center.

Senator Hit For Remarks On Starvation

DENVER (UPI) — Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., says he was just being facetious. His Democratic opponent, Gary Hart, called it "disgusting."

The dispute between the two Senate candidates broke out over remarks made by Dominick last week during a discussion about the United Nations and the world food problem.

In reference to a report that Uganda leader Idi Amin may have executed as many as 250,000 of his countrymen since 1971, Dominick remarked: "Ugandans would rather eat their own people than they would food."

Hart said the statement was "incredibly insensitive" and demonstrated "an utter failure to comprehend the grave problems of poverty and malnutrition in Africa."

Hepatitis Hits Naval Center In San Diego

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A weekend siege of infectious hepatitis has hospitalized 17 recruits from the San Diego Naval Training Center, the Navy revealed today.

World Record 314-Pound Swordfish Taken

The largest swordfish on record previously was a 204-pounder caught in April, 1973.

Larry Barrett, 27, Newport Beach, said he used a 30-pound test line and a "psychedelic" lure to make the catch.

IMPROVING THE AVENUE

A workman puts some of the final touches on part of the Miller Avenue improvement project, a construction program which has been going on in Mill Valley for several months. Among other changes, the project removes center median strip parking from the street in the La Goma Avenue area and provides new pedestrian walkways and planting areas.

Volkswagen Defends Gas Claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arguing that European gasoline has always been expensive, Volkswagen of America Inc. today denied its advertising had exploited the energy crisis and said gas mileage claims for three of its imports actually were conservative.

The company, in a statement made public by the Federal Trade Commission, said driving tests between New York and Washington produced even better gas mileage for one Porsche model and two Audi models than the ads in question had claimed.

Volkswagen of America imports the Porsche and the Audi.

The FTC also released responses made by the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors to similar challenges of their advertising.

The challenges were made last March — when the gasoline lines were long and ads played heavily on fuel economy — as part of a continuing FTC campaign to keep big advertisers honest. In each case, the FTC demanded proof that the ads were true and the average driver could expect similar results.

The Volkswagen ad in question claimed that the 2-litre Porsche 914 got 29 miles per gallon, the Audi 100LS got 24 m.p.g., and the Audi Fox got 25 m.p.g.

Volkswagen told the FTC these figures came from the "Deutsche Industrial Norm," a set of test statistics it said had been in use for 10 years.

The company said a driving test last April from the George Washington Bridge in New York to the Washington Monument produced even higher mileage than that claimed in the ad. It said the Porsche averaged 34.4 m.p.g., the Audi Fox 32.3 m.p.g. and the Audi 100LS 27.4 m.p.g.

Volkswagen said its ad and the supporting test data had not been "creatures of the fuel shortage."

"Gasoline has always been expensive in Europe," it said, "and the consumer's interest in economical performance has been equally high."

The FTC asked Ford to explain how a commercial showing a small TV set being assembled in the back seat of a Mercury Montego proved the car was superior to others in its class.

Ford replied it was not trying to show the car to be better than others — only that it had "remarkable riding stability" and was "designed to ride like a big car."

"The company does not believe this TV commercial, explicitly or by implication, claims that the Montego's ride is superior to other automobiles in its weight or size class," Ford said.

The FTC asked GM to show why a Buick test drive from San Diego to Washington last November resulted in fuel economy typical of that which the average driver would get on a cross country trip.

GM submitted detailed information on how the test was run, where gasoline had been bought along the way and how non-professional drivers had been chosen. It said the test was designed to show that cars got better gas mileage when driven at 50 miles an hour than at 70.

Two Die As Trains Collide

MONTREAL (UPI) — Two crewmen were killed today when a commuter train collided with a freight train near a northend station.

Two other crewmen suffered minor injuries but did not require hospitalization.

IMPROVING THE AVENUE

A workman puts some of the final touches on part of the Miller Avenue improvement project, a construction program which has been going on in Mill Valley for several months. Among other changes, the project removes center median strip parking from the street in the La Goma Avenue area and provides new pedestrian walkways and planting areas.

Volkswagen Defends Gas Claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arguing that European gasoline has always been expensive, Volkswagen of America Inc. today denied its advertising had exploited the energy crisis and said gas mileage claims for three of its imports actually were conservative.

The company, in a statement made public by the Federal Trade Commission, said driving tests between New York and Washington produced even better gas mileage for one Porsche model and two Audi models than the ads in question had claimed.

Volkswagen of America imports the Porsche and the Audi.

The FTC also released responses made by the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors to similar challenges of their advertising.

The challenges were made last March — when the gasoline lines were long and ads played heavily on fuel economy — as part of a continuing FTC campaign to keep big advertisers honest. In each case, the FTC demanded proof that the ads were true and the average driver could expect similar results.

The Volkswagen ad in question claimed that the 2-litre Porsche 914 got 29 miles per gallon, the Audi 100LS got 24 m.p.g., and the Audi Fox got 25 m.p.g.

Volkswagen told the FTC these figures came from the "Deutsche Industrial Norm," a set of test statistics it said had been in use for 10 years.

The company said a driving test last April from the George Washington Bridge in New York to the Washington Monument produced even higher mileage than that claimed in the ad. It said the Porsche averaged 34.4 m.p.g., the Audi Fox 32.3 m.p.g. and the Audi 100LS 27.4 m.p.g.

Volkswagen said its ad and the supporting test data had not been "creatures of the fuel shortage."

"Gasoline has always been expensive in Europe," it said, "and the consumer's interest in economical performance has been equally high."

The FTC asked Ford to explain how a commercial showing a small TV set being assembled in the back seat of a Mercury Montego proved the car was superior to others in its class.

Ford replied it was not trying to show the car to be better than others — only that it had "remarkable riding stability" and was "designed to ride like a big car."

"The company does not believe this TV commercial, explicitly or by implication, claims that the Montego's ride is superior to other automobiles in its weight or size class," Ford said.

The FTC asked GM to show why a Buick test drive from San Diego to Washington last November resulted in fuel economy typical of that which the average driver would get on a cross country trip.

GM submitted detailed information on how the test was run, where gasoline had been bought along the way and how nonprofessional drivers had been chosen. It said the test was designed to show that cars got better gas mileage when driven at 50 miles an hour than at 70.

Two Die As Trains Collide

MONTREAL (UPI) — Two crewmen were killed today when a commuter train collided with a freight train near a northend station.

A Canadian National Railways spokesman said both victims were part of the crew of the commuter train, the only persons aboard as the train headed for its first scheduled run of the day.

Two other crewmen suffered minor injuries but did not require hospitalization.

(UPI Telephoto)

First Family Has New Dog Named Liberty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There's a new addition to the First Family, a golden retriever puppy named Liberty.

The 8-month old female, a gift from Ford's daughter Susan, 17, and White House photographer David Hume Kennerly, was displayed for photographers on the south lawn yesterday.

Ford tossed a green tennis ball but Liberty ignored it and headed for the photographers, tangling herself in legs and equipment.

"Hey," Ford called, laughing, "I thought you were a retriever."

Asked who was going to feed and groom the nation's "First Dog," Susan piped up, "Daddy."

The Fords formerly had two golden retrievers, but the last one died in August.

Liberty is pedigreed, was purchased in Minnesota and presented to a surprised Ford Saturday night when he returned from visiting his wife, Betty, in the hospital.

The puppy follows a number of White House dogs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt made his Scotch terrier famous by saying his political foes had stooped to attacking "my little dog, Fala."

Lyndon B. Johnson had two beagles, Him and Her, and angered pet fanciers when he pulled one up by its ears for a picture. Johnson also had a white mongrel named Yukie.

Most recently, Richard M. Nixon had an Irish setter called King Timahoe. His famous dog Checkers died before he became President.

Honduras Benefit Concert Slated

Mime Reggie Woods of Fairfax will present a benefit performance for the Honduras hurricane victims next Saturday at 9 p.m. at Olney Hall at the College of Marin.

Admission is $1, and food and clothing donations also will be accepted at the door.

ZAPPING ZIPPER REMOVED

Grant Grothen, 6, of Hastings, Neb., posed an unusual dental problem recently. While playing during school recess he wedged the zipper handle of his jacket in between his front teeth. Try as she might, mother, Mrs. Neil Grothen, tugged and pulled, but to no avail. A dentist said it was a first for him, then removed the zipper.

Jogging Proxmire Has Unwanted Companion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., was jogging to the Capitol, a Pan American World Airways pilot began running beside him and made a spiel for government aid to the financially troubled airline.

The incident was about 10 days ago and came to light in a conversation between Proxmire and a reporter.

"I must say I was a little annoyed that the guy was so persistent," Proxmire said.

"The first time we ran all the way from my home to my office. But the next day I saw him waiting for me again so I changed my route to avoid him. I had to go two miles out of my way — seven miles instead of five.

"On the third day, the guy was waiting for me outside the Senate Office Building," Proxmire said.

"I told him they were overdoing it and hurting their own cause."

Pan Am employees have been lobbying and crusading, saying only the government can save their airline from going bankrupt.

After President Ford rejected the airline's request for a $10.2 million monthly subsidy, the employees turned to Congress.

Proxmire said he was dead set against a government subsidy and had not changed his mind.

The senator's office identified the pilot as R. J. Brennan, stationed in Berlin. At Proxmire's suggestion, Brennan discussed the airline's difficulties with the senator's staff.

Proxmire said he was "a handsome, athletic guy" but the senator's staff said Brennan complained of difficulty keeping up with Proxmire, who jogs almost every day.

There had been a rumor that Proxmire had fallen victim to too much running on concrete and was suffering from splintered shinbones.

Not so, the senator said.

He said he had been suffering pain, while running or even walking, in his Achilles tendon, but had found a stretching exercise which relieved the problem.

"So now I stretch my legs for six minutes before I run," he said.

"There's nothing I can do. I'm just one person."

Do you really think God is going to let you get away with that?

If you feel one person is too insignificant to help make the world a better place, then work together with others at your local church or synagogue. Example: in Montana, one congregation was disturbed by the lack of adequate housing for senior citizens in the area. Through its perseverance, a non-profit building with 111 homes is now a reality. There are lots of things you can do, too. The God we worship expects more from us than sympathy and good intentions.

Start treating your brothers and sisters like brothers and sisters.

(UPI Telephoto)

First Family Has New Dog Named Liberty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There's a new addition to the First Family, a golden retriever puppy named Liberty.

The 8-month old female, a gift from Ford's daughter Susan, 17, and White House photographer David Hume Kennerly, was displayed for photographers on the south lawn yesterday.

Ford tossed a green tennis ball but Liberty ignored it and headed for the photographers, tangling herself in legs and equipment.

"Hey," Ford called, laughing, "I thought you were a retriever."

Asked who was going to feed and groom the nation's "First Dog," Susan piped up, "Daddy."

The Fords formerly had two golden retrievers, but the last one died in August.

Liberty is pedigreed, was purchased in Minnesota and presented to a surprised Ford Saturday night when he returned from visiting his wife, Betty, in the hospital.

The puppy follows a number of White House dogs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt made his Scotch terrier famous by saying his political foes had stooped to attacking "my little dog, Fala."

Lyndon B. Johnson had two beagles, Him and Her, and angered pet fanciers when he pulled one up by its ears for a picture. Johnson also had a white mongrel named Yukie.

Most recently, Richard M. Nixon had an Irish setter called King Timahoe. His famous dog Checkers died before he became President.

INDIAN DANCERS PERFORM AT SAN QUENTIN

Colorfully garbed and carrying cultural artifacts, members of the Intertribal Dancers perform for inmates and the public at an annual cultural "pow-wow" sponsored by the prison Indian inmate organization. More than 30 Indian inmates and 60 outsiders watched the 35-member group perform Saturday, according to prison officials.

Ariyoshi Rides Burns Machine To Primary Victory In Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — The political machine of Gov. John A. Burns was credited today with winning the Democratic gubernatorial nomination for acting Governor George Ariyoshi, the son of a sumo wrestler who worked his way through school as a male model.

Near-complete returns showed Ariyoshi's big lead on Maui, Hawaii and Kauai overcame the narrow edge won by Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi on Oahu, the most heavily populated island.

Ariyoshi, an attorney who never lost a political race, and former Hilo Judge Nelson K. Doi will face Republicans Randolph Crossley and Ben Dillingham, both Honolulu businessmen, in November.

The primary results in the heavily Democratic state mean Americans of Oriental ancestry undoubtedly will hold all the top offices for the first time in Hawaii's history, come November.

All three Democratic congressional incumbents — Sen. Dan Inouye and Reps. Spark Matsunaga and Patsy Mink — won easy renomination Saturday and face little opposition in the general election.

With all but a few votes tabulated, the race for governor gave Ariyoshi 71,060 votes, Fasi 61,831, and former lieutenant governor Tom Gill 59,123.

On the Republican ticket, Crossley polled 25,360 to the 5,393 votes cast for Joseph K. Hao.

In a victory statement to a cheering crowd of well-wishers, Ariyoshi called upon Democrats "to come together" and "work toward victory in November."

"Together we can create the future which will be preferred by our children and our children's children," he said.

On Oahu, Fasi, a New England immigrant who made his fortune in the scrap metal business, failed to ring up the necessary big majority needed to offset the outer island vote which the Burns machine delivered to Ariyoshi.

Fasi received only 32.7 per cent of the Honolulu vote compared to Ariyoshi's 32.3 per cent and Gill's 31.9 per cent.

Ariyoshi, 48, took over as acting governor when Burns developed cancer earlier this year. He would be the state's — and the nation's — first Japanese-American governor if elected in November.

He had the near-solid backing of the state's powerful labor unions as well as strong support among Hawaii's populous ethnic groups, including Japanese, Chinese, Fillipinos and native Hawaiians.

Hawaii's other senator is Republican Hiram Fong, of Chinese ancestry, whose term is up in 1976.

Nuclear Weapons' Presence Doubted

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's press spokesman said today he has "no doubt at all" that the United States is honoring a promise not to bring nuclear weapons into Japan.

The statement by Chief Cabinet Secretary Susumu Nikaido came after Japan's political world was rocked by testimony of a retired American admiral to Congress that U.S. Navy warships regularly visit Japanese bases armed with nuclear bombs.

The government and the ruling Liberal Democratic Party have been telling the bomb-shy Japanese public for years that although Japan is allied to the United States, it is free of American nuclear arms.

Retired Rear Adm. Gene Robert Larocque told a joint U.S. Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy last month: "At the time these nuclear armed ships call at Japanese or other foreign ports, the nuclear weapons are not removed."

Foreign ministry sources said the U.S. government was being asked to "explain" the statements of Larocque, who retired from the Navy in 1972 and was a campaign advisor for Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern in 1972.

"I have no doubt that the United States is keeping its promise," Tanaka spokesman Nikaido said. "However, the government is not in the position of being able to check every ship."

policy.

The ruling party several years ago promised that Japan would never build nuclear weapons, own them, or allow anyone to bring them into Japan. Popular fear of atom bombs has been a fact of Japanese political life since World War II when Japan became the only country in the world ever to be attacked by them.

Large Amounts Of DDT Found In Oregon Deer

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The U.S. Forest Service reported yesterday that high levels of DDT have been found in the fat of deer in an area of Oregon where the pesticide was recently sprayed.

An analysis of four deer killed by automobiles showed eight to 31 parts per million of DDT in their fatty tissues, said David Graham, of the insect and disease control division.

Federal standards allow no more than five parts per million of DDT in meat sold in stores.

"We expect levels to go higher than that," Graham said of the count in deer. He said it could go as high as 123 parts per million.

He said the high pesticide levels created no known health hazard to humans. However, hunters in Oregon, Washington and Idaho were warned last week to trim the fat away from slain deer, elk or game birds.

The use of ddt has been banned by the Environmental Protection Agency, but an exception was made last summer in order to attack a Tussock moth invasion in Pacific Northwest Forests.

The 7 p.m. show is aimed for children, but parental guidance is suggested for the 9:30 show, according to Catherine Coverdale, publicity chairman. The show will be presented Saturday nights indefinitely. Tickets are $2 and may be obtained by calling the studio.

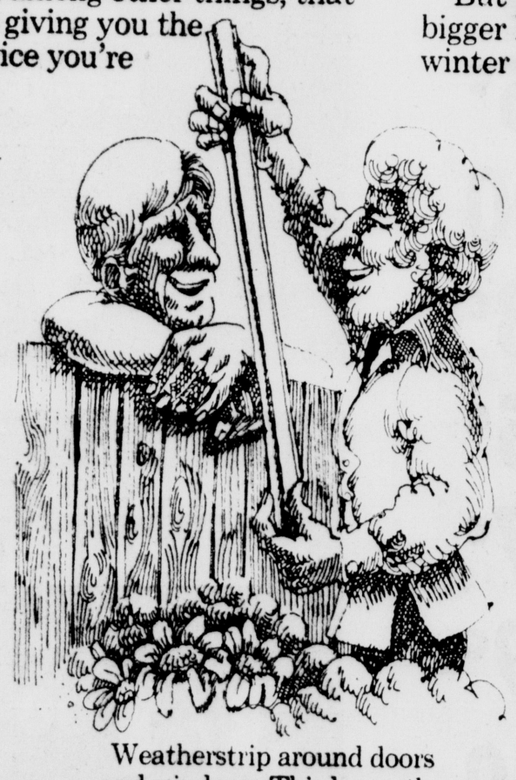
In spite of higher fuel costs, there are some things you can do to cut your heating bills this winter.

True, the cost of fuel oil and natural gas continues to climb. And that's something that we have no more control over than you do.

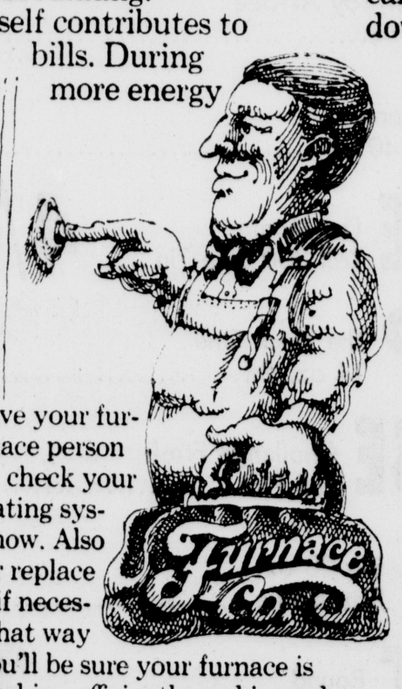
It means, among other things, that to continue giving you the kind of service you're accustomed to, we've had to increase our rates. Because we, too, use fuel oil and natural gas—to keep our generating plants running.

But winter itself contributes to bigger PG&E bills. During winter you use more energy to light and heat your home.

And while you can't control the weather—or rising fuel costs—you can save energy and help hold down your heating bills by following these simple pay-for-themselves suggestions:



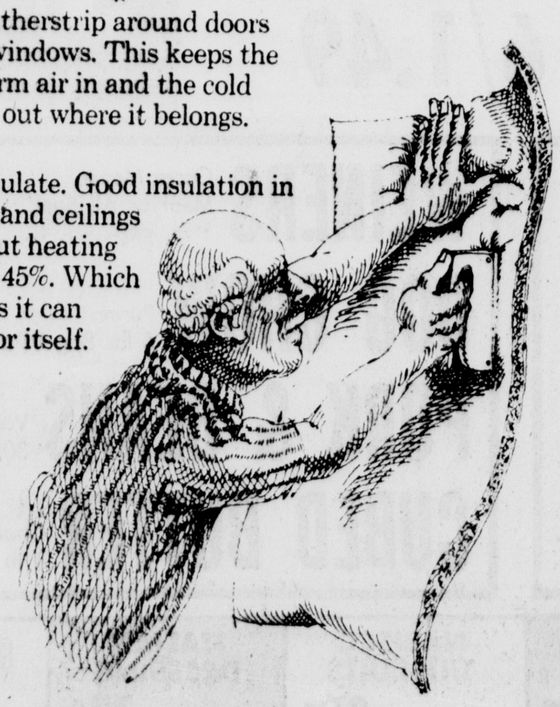
Weatherstrip around doors and windows. This keeps the warm air in and the cold air out where it belongs.

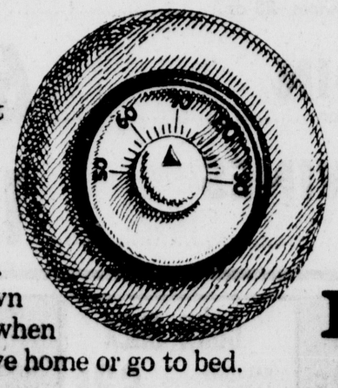


Have your furnace person check your heating system now. Also clean or replace filters if necessary. That way you'll be sure your furnace is working efficiently and is ready for winter before the first cold snap.

Shut damper when your fireplace is not in use. If you leave it open, cold air rushes in and furnace heat escapes. Also, shutting drapes over windows at night can reduce heat lost through windows by as much as 16%.

Insulate. Good insulation in walls and ceilings can cut heating up to 45%. Which means it can pay for itself.





Set your thermostat at 68° or lower. Turn it down even more when you leave home or go to bed.

(UPI Telephoto)

First Family Has New Dog Named Liberty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There's a new addition to the First Family, a golden retriever puppy named Liberty.

The 8-month old female, a gift from Ford's daughter Susan, 17, and White House photographer David Hume Kennerly, was displayed for photographers on the south lawn yesterday.

Ford tossed a green tennis ball but Liberty ignored it and headed for the photographers, tangling herself in legs and equipment.

"Hey," Ford called, laughing, "I thought you were a retriever."

Asked who was going to feed and groom the nation's "First Dog," Susan piped up, "Daddy."

The Fords formerly had two golden retrievers, but the last one died in August.

Liberty is pedigreed, was purchased in Minnesota and presented to a surprised Ford Saturday night when he returned from visiting his wife, Betty, in the hospital.

The puppy follows a number of White House dogs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt made his Scotch terrier famous by saying his political foes had stooped to attacking "my little dog, Fala."

Lyndon B. Johnson had two beagles, Him and Her, and angered pet fanciers when he pulled one up by its ears for a picture. Johnson also had a white mongrel named Yukie.

Most recently, Richard M. Nixon had an Irish setter called King Timahoe. His famous dog Checkers died before he became President.

High School Debating Still Popular

By ERNEST MURPHY

In spite of Watergate and Madison Avenue's increasing involvement in American politics, debate tournaments — in which political leaders of the future are supposed to cut their rhetorical teeth — remain exceedingly popular with the high school set.

At least that's how it looked Saturday at Casa Grande High School in Petaluma, where about two dozen Marin and Southern Sonoma youths joined more than 100 other Bay Area students in a day-long contest.

During the series of elocutionary battles the teen-agers argued the question, "Resolved: That the United States should significantly change the method of electing the president and vice president."

The 160 students were divided into 80 two-person teams, and half of the teams argued in support of the question while the others argued against it.

Each debate thus required two opposing teams, or four debaters, and three judges, who afterward voted among themselves as to which side argued most effectively in each round. Ten schools, including Terra Linda High, competed.

The tournament was won by St. Ignatius High School of San Francisco, with Berkeley High School in second place.

Chief promoter and organizer of the Petaluma tournament was Pattie Jo Tower, Casa Grande's debate coach.

Miss Tower, a wiry, fast-talking and boundlessly energetic woman, exhibits the prime attribute of a successful debate coach — she hustles.

Like most debate organizers, she at least once a year has to hustle the board of education for enough money to take her crew around to other tournaments. Forensics is like football — to play you have to travel a lot, and school buses consume costly gasoline.

One of her biggest jobs in connection with this tournament was rounding up enough judges, since so many were needed.

"We needed judges really badly and the community blessed me with at least 100," Miss Tower said, sounding slightly like a traveling revivalist reporting that the Lord blessed him with a bountiful offering that night. In either case, the blessing was more likely the result of a little hustle than the will of some benign deity.

Debate coaches don't have to know anything about debate contests — so long as they know a good argument when they hear it.

She and several coaches from other schools said the Casa Grande High debaters got no particular advantage from playing in the home stadium, so to speak.

Because of the rules of the Golden Gate Speech Association, sponsor of the tourney, it was impossible for any of the debaters from Petaluma to be judged by a friend or acquaintance. The rules are so strict, in fact, that the debaters give only their first names to the judges for scoring purposes — the judges aren't permitted to know what school they are judging.

Contributing to the lack of home court advantage is the fact that, unlike football games, debate tournaments are not held in stadiums full of fans to cheer the competitors on.

Competitive debate, rather, is a series of very formal, stand-up arguments, with each contestant speaking his piece for a precise number of minutes before yielding to an opponent, who likewise must argue within a precise time limit. When the talk is over, the judges retire to vote by secret ballot on which side argued the best.

The young contestants invariably arrived for each session armed with a portable filing cabinet under one arm and a bulging attache case under the other.

The baggage contained hundreds, sometimes even thousands, of neatly sorted filing cards, each bearing some vital piece of evidence which might conceivably come in handy during an argument or rebuttal. The contestants spent many hours in libraries gleaning the data they used in competition.

Often, the bulging files and briefcases function like the corporeal bulk of Japanese sumo wrestlers, those behemoths whose training consists largely of eating vast quantities of starchy food so that, in the ring, they can demoralize or even terrorize opponents simply by their frightening size.

The files, apparently, are more bulky these days than they used to be a few years ago.

But not everyone agrees bigger files mean better arguments.

"It's one of the more negative changes in debate," said coach David Mazzera of St. Ignatius High School in San Francisco. "More emphasis is being placed on the sheer quantity of evidence rather than on the quality of the argument."

A school's debaters are rated according to experience.

"A" teams are the most experienced, with one or more years of solid competition behind them. The "B" teams have only a little experience and the "C" teams, like the Terra Linda ones, are competing for their first season.

During the debates at Casa Grande, many of the students argued with more passion than one might expect on a topic which was arbitrarily assigned to them.

"People now are more emotionally involved in politics," Mazzera said, "and the emotion is coming through in the arguments."

Political reform, he acknowledged, is a big topic this year with high school debaters all around the nation.

The tournament Saturday was the first of several which the Golden Gate Association will hold around the Bay Area this year for its 30 to 35 member schools, Miss Tower said.

Women's Political Group Backs Meyer For Clerk

Peter C. Meyer of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County clerk, was endorsed Saturday by the Marin unit of the National Women's Political Caucus.

A spokesman for the organization reported that Meyer got a substantial majority of the vote in balloting by 42 members. Endorsement requires a vote by at least 60 per cent of members balloting. The organization has 167 members in Marin.

Meyer's opponent on the November ballot is John F. Musser Jr. of Marshall.

Also appearing at the endorsement meeting at the YWCA in San Rafael were the three candidates in the Ninth Assembly District, but none came close to getting the needed 60 per cent support to be endorsed. They are Republican A. Alan Hill, Democrat Michael Wornum, and Nancy V. Gunn, nominee of the Peace and Freedom Party.

A fund-raising sale of pumpkins, pumpkin pie, bread, cookies and apple cider will be held for Meyer from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 20 in a vacant lot next to the Raydine Ice Skating rink in Corte Madera. The theme will be "Peter Meyer's Pumpkin Patch."

Receptions for Meyer will be held 10 a.m. Thursday at the San Rafael home of Louise Matzen, 435 Cedar Hill Drive; 8 p.m. Friday at the Corte Madera home of Gary T. Ragghianti, 6 Golden Hinde Passage; 10 a.m. Oct. 15 at the Lucas Valley home of Dr. John D. Michael, 14 Rubicon Court; and 8 p.m. Oct. 15 at the Sausalito home of Raymond Roy, 123 Crescent Avenue.

CAYLOR — Thomas O. Caylor of San Francisco, Republican nominee in the Fifth Congressional District, has been endorsed for election next month by an organization that endorsed his Democratic rival in the June primary election. Caylor said the change by the California Organization of Police and Sheriffs was a "welcome reevaluation" of its earlier support of Rep. John L. Burton.

BROWN — A free reception and rally for Edmund G. Brown Jr., Democratic nominee for governor, will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Flamingo Hotel in Santa Rosa. It is his only scheduled appearance in Sonoma before next month's election.

WORNUM — Michael Wornum of Mill Valley, Democratic nominee in the Ninth Assembly District, has been endorsed by the Community Communications Workers of America, Local 9404, and by the Bay Area Typographical Union, Local 21.

Dance-Drama Will Be Given

"The Creation of Durga," a dance-drama based on Hindu mythology, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 26 at the College of Marin's Fine Arts Theater in Kentfield.

The performance will depict the rise and destruction of man's demonic nature in the divine imagination, according to a spokesman. The production represents a combination of Eastern myth and Western humor and energy.

Produced by Siva Kalpa productions, the program will be sponsored by the college's Association Students. Admission will be $2.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Society To Close Wildlife Area

The National Audubon Society will close the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary in Tiburon to boating and hunting beginning next Sunday, according to society President Elvis J. Stahr.

The closure will last until next spring in order to provide a refuge for migratory waterfowl which arrive in the bay in the fall. The reopening date will be announced later.

Buoys will mark the perimeter of the sanctuary, and Audubon Warden Philip Schaeffer will patrol the area.

Doctor Links Soft Water To Heart Attacks

CHICAGO (UPI) — Drinking soft water could add to the risk of strokes and heart attacks, a doctor reported in today's issue of the journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Andrew G. Shaper, a British medical scientist, said there is reasonable evidence that drinking of soft water is an additional factor in causing heart attacks.

Shaper said it would be premature to suggest all soft waters be hardened, but he urged caution on those with hard-water supplies who wish to soften their water.

"In particular," Shaper said, "those in hard-water areas who do soften their water suplies might regard it judicious to leave one tap still producing hard water for drinking."

High School Debating Still Popular

By ERNEST MURPHY

In spite of Watergate and 'Madison Avenue's increasing involvement in American politics, debate tournaments — in which political leaders of the future are supposed to cut their rhetorical teeth — remain exceedingly popular with the high school set.

At least that's how it looked Saturday at Casa Grande High School in Petaluma, where about two dozen Marin and Southern Sonoma youths joined more than 100 other Bay Area students in a day-long contest.

During the series of elocutionary battles the teen-agers argued the question, "Resolved: That the United States should significantly change the method of electing the president and vice president."

The 160 students were divided into 80 two-person teams, and half of the teams argued in support of the question while the others argued against it.

Each debate thus required two opposing teams, or four debaters, and three judges, who afterward voted among themselves as to which side argued most effectively in each round. Ten schools, including Terra Linda High, competed.

The tournament was won by St. Ignatius High School of San Francisco, with Berkeley High School in second place.

Chief promoter and organizer of the Petaluma tournament was Pattie Jo Tower, Casa Grande's debate coach.

Miss Tower, a wiry, fast-talking and boundlessly energetic woman, exhibits the prime attribute of a successful debate coach — she hustles.

Like most debate organizers, she at least once a year has to hustle the board of education for enough money to take her crew around to other tournaments. Forensics is like football — to play you have to travel a lot, and school buses consume costly gasoline.

One of her biggest jobs in connection with this tournament was rounding up enough judges, since so many were needed.

"We needed judges really badly and the community blessed me with at least 100," Miss Tower said, sounding slightly like a traveling revivalist reporting that the Lord blessed him with a bountiful offering that night. In either case, the blessing was more likely the result of a little hustle than the will of some benign deity.

Debate coaches don't have to know anything about debate contests — so long as they know a good argument when they hear it.

She and several coaches from other schools said the Casa Grande High debaters got no particular advantage from playing in the home stadium, so to speak.

Because of the rules of the Golden Gate Speech Association, sponsor of the tourney, it was impossible for any of the debaters from Petaluma to be judged by a friend or acquaintance. The rules are so strict, in fact, that the debaters give only their first names to the judges for scoring purposes — the judges aren't permitted to know what school they are judging.

Contributing to the lack of home court advantage is the fact that, unlike football games, debate tournaments are not held in stadiums full of fans to cheer the competitors on.

Competitive debate, rather, is a series of very formal, stand-up arguments, with each contestant speaking his piece for a precise number of minutes before yielding to an opponent, who likewise must argue within a precise time limit. When the talk is over, the judges retire to vote by secret ballot on which side argued the best.

The young contestants invariably arrived for each session armed with a portable filing cabinet under one arm and a bulging attache case under the other.

The baggage contained hundreds, sometimes even thousands, of neatly sorted filing cards, each bearing some vital piece of evidence which might conceivably come in handy during an argument or rebuttal. The contestants spent many hours in libraries gleaning the data they used in competition.

Often, the bulging files and briefcases function like the corporeal bulk of Japanese sumo wrestlers, those behemoths whose training consists largely of eating vast quantities of starchy food so that, in the ring, they can demoralize or even terrorize opponents simply by their frightening size.

The files, apparently, are more bulky these days than they used to be a few years ago.

But not everyone agrees bigger files mean better arguments.

"It's one of the more negative changes in debate," said coach David Mazzera of St. Ignatius High School in San Francisco. "More emphasis is being placed on the sheer quantity of evidence rather than on the quality of the argument."

A school's debaters are rated according to experience.

"A" teams are the most experienced, with one or more years of solid competition behind them. The "B" teams have only a little experience and the "C" teams, like the Terra Linda ones, are competing for their first season.

During the debates at Casa Grande, many of the students argued with more passion than one might expect on a topic which was arbitrarily assigned to them.

"People now are more emotionally involved in politics," Mazzera said, "and the emotion is coming through in the arguments."

Political reform, he acknowledged, is a big topic this year with high school debaters all around the nation.

The tournament Saturday was the first of several which the Golden Gate Association will hold around the Bay Area this year for its 30 to 35 member schools, Miss Tower said.

Women's Political Group Backs Meyer For Clerk

Peter C. Meyer of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County clerk, was endorsed Saturday by the Marin unit of the National Women's Political Caucus.

A spokesman for the organization reported that Meyer got a substantial majority of the vote in balloting by 42 members. Endorsement requires a vote by at least 60 per cent of members balloting. The organization has 167 members in Marin.

Meyer's opponent on the November ballot is John F. Musser Jr. of Marshall.

Also appearing at the endorsement meeting at the YWCA in San Rafael were the three candidates in the Ninth Assembly District, but none came close to getting the needed 60 per cent support to be endorsed. They are Republican A. Alan Hill, Democrat Michael Wornum, and Nancy V. Gunn, nominee of the Peace and Freedom Party.

A fund-raising sale of pumpkins, pumpkin pie, bread, cookies and apple cider will be held for Meyer from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 20 in a vacant lot next to the Raydine Ice Skating rink in Corte Madera. The theme will be "Peter Meyer's Pumpkin Patch."

Receptions for Meyer will be held 10 a.m. Thursday at the San Rafael home of Louise Matzen, 435 Cedar Hill Drive; 8 p.m. Friday at the Corte Madera home of Gary T. Ragghianti, 6 Golden Hinde Passage; 10 a.m. Oct. 15 at the Lucas Valley home of Dr. John D. Michael, 14 Rubicon Court; and 8 p.m. Oct. 15 at the Sausalito home of Raymond Roy, 123 Crescent Avenue.

Caylor of San Francisco, Republican nominee in the Fifth Congressional District, has been endorsed for election next month by an organization that endorsed his Democratic rival in the June primary election. ZAPPING ZIPPER REMOVED

Grant Grothen, 6, of Hastings, Neb., posed an unusual dental problem recently. While playing during school recess he wedged the zipper handle of his jacket in between his front teeth. Try as she might, mother, Mrs. Neil Grothen, tugged and pulled, but to no avail. A dentist said it was a first for him, then removed the zipper.

Jogging Proxmire Has Unwanted Companion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., was jogging to the Capitol, a Pan American World Airways pilot began running beside him and made a spiel for government aid to the financially troubled airline.

The incident was about 10 days ago and came to light in a conversation between Proxmire and a reporter.

"I must say I was a little annoyed that the guy was so persistent," Proxmire said.

"The first time we ran all the way from my home to my office. But the next day I saw him waiting for me again so I changed my route to avoid him. I had to go two miles out of my way — seven miles instead of five.

"On the third day, the guy was waiting for me outside the Senate Office Building," Proxmire said.

"I told him they were overdoing it and hurting their own cause."

Pan Am employees have been lobbying and crusading, saying only the government can save their airline from going bankrupt.

After President Ford rejected the airline's request for a $10.2 million monthly subsidy, the employees turned to Congress.

Proxmire said he was dead set against a government subsidy and had not changed his mind.

The senator's office identified the pilot as R. J. Brennan, stationed in Berlin. At Proxmire's suggestion, Brennan discussed the airline's difficulties with the senator's staff.

Proxmire said he was "a handsome, athletic guy" but the senator's staff said Brennan complained of difficulty keeping up with Proxmire, who jogs almost every day.

There had been a rumor that Proxmire had fallen victim to too much running on concrete and was suffering from splintered shinbones.

Not so, the senator said.

He said he had been suffering pain, while running or even walking, in his Achilles tendon, but had found a stretching exercise which relieved the problem.

"So now I stretch my legs for six minutes before I run," he said.

"There's nothing I can do. I'm just one person."

Do you really think God is going to let you get away with that?

If you feel one person is too insignificant to help make the world a better place, then work together with others at your local church or synagogue. Example: in Montana, one congregation was disturbed by the lack of adequate housing for senior citizens in the area. Through its perseverance, a non-profit building with 111 homes is now a reality. There are lots of things you can do, too. The God we worship expects more from us than sympathy and good intentions.

Start treating your brothers and sisters like brothers and sisters.

Crouse-Hinds Should Maintain Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR
and DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. I would like to know what you think of Crouse-Hinds (NYSE) for long-term growth. — A.F.

A. In view of the demand for new capacity in the petroleum and chemical industries, Crouse-Hinds as a supplier should at least maintain its five-year 19 per cent compound annual average growth rate. First-half earnings gained 27 per cent on a 35 per cent increase in sales. An 8 per cent average product line price boost should allow margins to expand in the final half lifting full-year net to about $1.90 a share. The 17 per cent increase in the dividend rate, announced late in September, supports this optimistic outlook. Incidentally, at the new 70-cent annual rate, shares yield close to 6 per cent, a generous return for a junior growth issue.

As a manufacturer of electrical safety equipment, Crouse-Hinds has benefitted from industry spending to meet requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA). However, because sales are cyclical, reflecting the level of industrial construction, investors have failed to recognize the strong growth which continues to be achieved by Crouse-Hinds. Financially clean, the company has less than $300,000 in long-term debt, a 2.8-to-1 current ratio, and only 4.4 million common shares. Some 31 per cent of the common is held by insiders and another 5 per cent is held by institutions, leaving a relatively thin floating supply. While a cutback in planned capital spending by utilities may restrict near-term price action, the shares have appeal for the long term.

Q. Which of my mutual funds would you add to at the present time? — H.H.

A. Chemical Fund, Massachusetts Investors Growth and One William Street are among the older well-known funds and have well-established track records for above-average long-term growth. In each case, net asset value is down substantially but recovery potential looks excellent. By following conservative investment policies these three funds have offered the patient investor an above-average return over the past decade.

5.7 Per Cent Bid State Bonds Bid

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — A Bank of America underwriting group, which included Wells Fargo Bank, has bought the $90 million bond issue of the State of California.

The offering consisted of $50 million clean water bonds, $25 million state beach, park, recreational and historical facilities bonds, and $15 million recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement bonds.

The group bid a premium of $26,325 over principal amount for a net interest cost to the state of 5.7026 per cent. The dollar bid was 100.029. The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 5.1 per cent in 1975 to 6.1 per cent in 1994.

NEW PONTIAC

Pontiac continues to offer comfort and convenience in its full-size lineup, which includes the Grand Safari. Several new options include a digital electric clock, headlamp-on warning system and a tone warning in place of the seat belt buzzer. Steel-belted radial tires with Radial Tuned Suspension are standard. Local dealer is Stan Wisnes Pontiac-GMC-Honda in San Rafael.

Sharp Rise In Stock Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved sharply and broadly higher early today with indications of details of President Ford's economic program to be released tomorrow. It indicated, to some extent, interest has picked up in the market where there are some bargain prices after the recent slide.

Investor enthusiasm, according to many analysts, came from a belief something solid would come out of Ford's program. There were reports during the weekend the program would contain a 5 per cent surtax on corporations and those in the higher income brackets, while it would give a break to those in the lower levels.

Ford told newsmen he thought the program was developing into a "fair" one.

National Semiconductor was the most active issue, off ¼ at 7 ½ on 266,500 shares, including a block of 239,900 shares at 7.

Chemicals, oils, electronics and computers paced the rally, along with a few other glamors.

Eastman Kodak climbed 2, and Dupont, Union Carbide, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical all around a point. Natomas, which reported an oil find offshore Indonesia last week, gained 2 ¼; Atlantic Richfield, 2 ⅛, and Superior Oil, 4. Point-sized gainers included Exxon, Getty Oil, Halliburton and Kerr-McGee.

IBM soared 5 ¾ after a delayed opening. Burroughs, Motorola, Texas Instruments and Digital Equipment each gained around a point.

Prices were higher in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. Giant Yellowknife Mines was the most active Amex issue, off ¼ at 9 ⅝ on 21,300 shares.

Silver Prices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Handy and Harman today quoted silver at $4.73 per fine ounce, down 14 cents. Engelhard quoted silver bullion at $4.73, down 14 cents and fabricated silver at $4.848 down 14.4 cents.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Wat Takeshita is on vacation. Upon his return, his column, Other People's Business, will resume.)

Expansion into cheese manufacturing has been responsible for a large increase in dividends for members of the California Cooperative Creamery (the former Petaluma Co-op), according to a report at its annaul meeting.

The co-op is expanding its operation with a new cheese plant in Tracy, now nearing completion at a total cost estimated at $7.5 million.

Clover Brand dairy products continued to be profitable for the co-op during its best year ever, reported G. M. Benedetti, president. Sales for the year exceeded $53 million, up 31 per cent over the previous year. Volume of milk increased by 16 per cent.

Adam Van Exel of Lodi and Norman Lucas of Turlock were added to the co-op's board of directors at the annual meeting, held in Petaluma. In the only other election to the board this year, Clinton Beebe of Petaluma won another term.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Crouse-Hinds Should Maintain Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR
and DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. I would like to know what you think of Crouse-Hinds (NYSE) for long-term growth. — A.F.

A. In view of the demand for new capacity in the petroleum and chemical industries, Crouse-Hinds as a supplier should at least maintain its five-year 19 per cent compound annual average growth rate. First-half earnings gained 27 per cent on a 35 per cent increase in sales. An 8 per cent average product line price boost should allow margins to expand in the final half lifting full-year net to about $1.90 a share. The 17 per cent increase in the dividend rate, announced late in September, supports this optimistic outlook. Incidentally, at the new 70-cent annual rate, shares yield close to 6 per cent, a generous return for a junior growth issue.

As a manufacturer of electrical safety equipment, Crouse-Hinds has benefitted from industry spending to meet requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA). However, because sales are cyclical, reflecting the level of industrial construction, investors have failed to recognize the strong growth which continues to be achieved by Crouse-Hinds. Financially clean, the company has less than $300,000 in long-term debt, a 2.8-to-1 current ratio, and only 4.4 million common shares. Some 31 per cent of the common is held by insiders and another 5 per cent is held by institutions, leaving a relatively thin floating supply. While a cutback in planned capital spending by utilities may restrict near-term price action, the shares have appeal for the long term.

Q. Which of my mutual funds would you add to at the present time? — H.H.

A. Chemical Fund, Massachusetts Investors Growth and One William Street are among the older well-known funds and have well-established track records for above-average long-term growth. In each case, net asset value is down substantially but recovery potential looks excellent. By following conservative investment policies these three funds have offered the patient investor an above-average return over the past decade.

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — A Bank of America underwriting group, which included Wells Fargo Bank, has bought the $90 million bond issue of the State of California.

The offering consisted of $50 million clean water bonds, $25 million state beach, park, recreational and historical facilities bonds, and $15 million recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement bonds.

The group bid a premium of $26,325 over principal amount for a net interest cost to the state of 5.7026 per cent. The dollar bid was 100.029. The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 5.1 per cent in 1975 to 6.1 per cent in 1994.

Sharp Rise In Stock Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved sharply and broadly higher early today with indications of details of President Ford's economic program to be released tomorrow. It indicated, to some extent, interest has picked up in the market where there are some bargain prices after the recent slide.

Investor enthusiasm, according to many analysts, came from a belief something solid would come out of Ford's program. There were reports during the weekend the program would contain a 5 per cent surtax on corporations and those in the higher income brackets, while it would give a break to those in the lower levels.

Ford told newsmen he thought the program was developing into a "fair" one.

National Semiconductor was the most active issue, off ¼ at 7 ½ on 266,500 shares, including a block of 239,900 shares at 7.

Chemicals, oils, electronics and computers paced the rally, along with a few other glamors.

Eastman Kodak climbed 2, and Dupont, Union Carbide, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical all around a point. Natomas, which reported an oil find offshore Indonesia last week, gained 2 ¼; Atlantic Richfield, 2 ⅛, and Superior Oil, 4. Point-sized gainers included Exxon, Getty Oil, Halliburton and Kerr-McGee.

IBM soared 5 ¾ after a delayed opening. Burroughs, Motorola, Texas Instruments and Digital Equipment each gained around a point.

Prices were higher in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. Giant Yellowknife Mines was the most active Amex issue, off ¼ at 9 ⅝ on 21,300 shares.

Silver Prices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Handy and Harman today quoted silver at $4.73 per fine ounce, down 14 cents. Engelhard quoted silver bullion at $4.73, down 14 cents and fabricated silver at $4.848 down 14.4 cents.

Creamery Dividends Rise With More Into Cheese

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Wat Takeshita is on vacation. Upon his return, his column, Other People's Business, will resume.)

Expansion into cheese manufacturing has been responsible for a large increase in dividends for members of the California Cooperative Creamery (the former Petaluma Co-op), according to a report at its annaul meeting.

William Van Dam, the co-op's economist, reported that cheese manufacturing "placed us in the position of being able to capitalize on the extremely strong cheese markets of last winter . . . We were able to realize, for several months, profits in excess of 75 cents per hundredweight."

The co-op is expanding its operation with a new cheese plant in Tracy, now nearing completion at a total cost estimated at $7.5 million.

Clover Brand dairy products continued to be profitable for the co-op during its best year ever, reported G. M. Benedetti, president. Sales for the year exceeded $53 million, up 31 per cent over the previous year. Volume of milk increased by 16 per cent.

Adam Van Exel of Lodi and Norman Lucas of Turlock were added to the co-op's board of directors at the annual meeting, held in Petaluma. In the only other election to the board this year, Clinton Beebe of Petaluma won another term.

REAL ESTATE BOARD — Eight round-table discussions are scheduled for the Marin County Board of Realtors' weekly meeting at 8 a.m. tomorrow at the Holiday Inn, San Rafael. Hayes Culpepper, William Brannan, Mildred Vail, Bruce Pohoriles, Henry Hicks, Sue Schaefer, Harold Graves, and Roy Claxton will be discussion leaders.

CORRECTION — All Together Now, the newly opened San Rafael business including apparel, plants, antiques, and macrame, is at 1205 Third Street, not Fourth Street as was mistakenly reported in this column last Wednesday.

INDIAN DANCERS PERFORM AT SAN QUENTIN

Colorfully garbed and carrying cultural artifacts, members of the Intertribal Dancers perform for inmates and the public at an annual cultural "pow-wow" sponsored by the prison Indian inmate organization. More than 30 Indian inmates and 60 outsiders watched the 35-member group perform Saturday, according to prison officials.

Ariyoshi Rides Burns Machine To Primary Victory In Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — The political machine of Gov. John A. Burns was credited today with winning the Democratic gubernatorial nomination for acting Governor George Ariyoshi, the son of a sumo wrestler who worked his way through school as a male model.

Near-complete returns showed Ariyoshi's big lead on Maui, Hawaii and Kauai overcame the narrow edge won by Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi on Oahu, the most heavily populated island.

Ariyoshi, an attorney who never lost a political race, and former Hilo Judge Nelson K. Doi will face Republicans Randolph Crossley and Ben Dillingham, both Honolulu businessmen, in November.

The primary results in the heavily Democratic state mean Americans of Oriental ancestry undoubtedly will hold all the top offices for the first time in Hawaii's history, come November.

All three Democratic congressional incumbents — Sen. Dan Inouye and Reps. Spark Matsunaga and Patsy Mink — won easy renomination Saturday and face little opposition in the general election.

With all but a few votes tabulated, the race for governor gave Ariyoshi 71,060 votes, Fasi 61,831, and former lieutenant governor Tom Gill 59,123.

On the Republican ticket, Crossley polled 25,360 to the 5,393 votes cast for Joseph K. Hao.

In a victory statement to a cheering crowd of well-wishers, Ariyoshi called upon Democrats "to come together" and "work toward victory in November."

"Together we can create the future which will be preferred by our children and our children's children," he said.

On Oahu, Fasi, a New England immigrant who made his fortune in the scrap metal business, failed to ring up the necessary big majority needed to offset the outer island vote which the Burns machine delivered to Ariyoshi.

Fasi received only 32.7 per cent of the Honolulu vote compared to Ariyoshi's 32.3 per cent and Gill's 31.9 per cent.

Ariyoshi, 48, took over as acting governor when Burns developed cancer earlier this year. He would be the state's — and the nation's — first Japanese-American governor if elected in November.

He had the near-solid backing of the state's powerful labor unions as well as strong support among Hawaii's populous ethnic groups, including Japanese, Chinese, Fillipinos and native Hawaiians.

Hawaii's other senator is Republican Hiram Fong, of Chinese ancestry, whose term is up in 1976.

Nuclear Weapons' Presence Doubted

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's press spokesman said today he has "no doubt at all" that the United States is honoring a promise not to bring nuclear weapons into Japan.

The statement by Chief Cabinet Secretary Susumu Nikaido came after Japan's political world was rocked by testimony of a retired American admiral to Congress that U.S. Navy warships regularly visit Japanese bases armed with nuclear bombs.

The government and the ruling Liberal Democratic Party have been telling the bomb-shy Japanese public for years that although Japan is allied to the United States, it is free of American nuclear arms.

Retired Rear Adm. Gene Robert Larocque told a joint U.S. Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy last month: "At the time these nuclear armed ships call at Japanese or other foreign ports, the nuclear weapons are not removed."

Foreign ministry sources said the U.S. government was being asked to "explain" the statements of Larocque, who retired from the Navy in 1972 and was a campaign advisor for Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern in 1972.

"I have no doubt that the United States is keeping its promise," Tanaka spokesman Nikaido said. "However, the government is not in the position of being able to check every ship."

policy.

The ruling party several years ago promised that Japan would never build nuclear weapons, own them, or allow anyone to bring them into Japan. Popular fear of atom bombs has been a fact of Japanese political life since World War II when Japan became the only country in the world ever to be attacked by them.

Large Amounts Of DDT Found In Oregon Deer

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The U.S. Forest Service reported yesterday that high levels of DDT have been found in the fat of deer in an area of Oregon where the pesticide was recently sprayed.

An analysis of four deer killed by automobiles showed eight to 31 parts per million of DDT in their fatty tissues, said David Graham, of the insect and disease control division.

Federal standards allow no more than five parts per million of DDT in meat sold in stores.

"We expect levels to go higher than that," Graham said of the count in deer. He said it could go as high as 123 parts per million.

He said the high pesticide levels created no known health hazard to humans. However, hunters in Oregon, Washington and Idaho were warned last week to trim the fat away from slain deer, elk or game birds.

The use of ddt has been banned by the Environmental Protection Agency, but an exception was made last summer in order to attack a Tussock moth invasion in Pacific Northwest Forests.

In spite of higher fuel costs, there are some things you can do to cut your heating bills this winter.

True, the cost of fuel oil and natural gas continues to climb. And that's something that we have no more control over than you do.

It means, among other things, that to continue giving you the kind of service you're accustomed to, we've had to increase our rates. Because we, too, use fuel oil and natural gas—to keep our generating plants running.

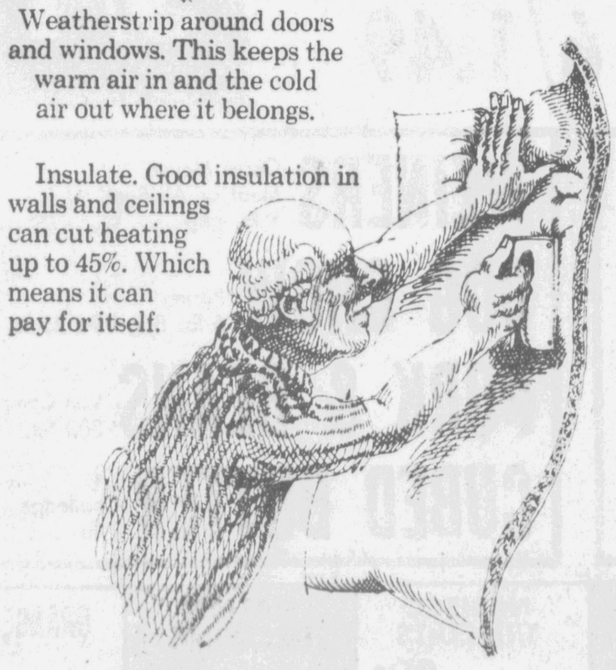
But winter itself contributes to bigger PG&E bills. During winter you use more energy to light and heat your home.

And while you can't control the weather—or rising fuel costs—you can save energy and help hold down your heating bills by following these simple pay-for-themselves suggestions:

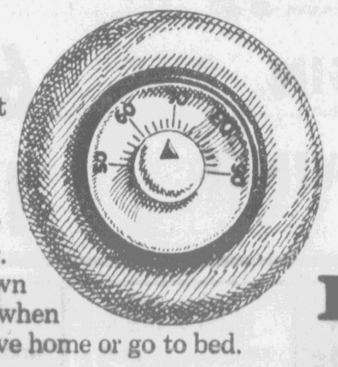
Weatherstrip around doors and windows. This keeps the warm air in and the cold air out where it belongs.

Have your furnace person check your heating system now. Also clean or replace filters if necessary. That way you'll be sure your furnace is working efficiently and is ready for winter before the first cold snap.

Shut damper when your fireplace is not in use. If you leave it open, cold air rushes in and furnace heat escapes. Also, shutting drapes over windows at night can reduce heat lost through windows by as much as 16%.



Insulate. Good insulation in walls and ceilings can cut heating up to 45%. Which means it can pay for itself.



Set your thermostat at 68° or lower. Turn it down even more when you leave home or go to bed.

NEW PRESIDENTS

Dominic J. Selmi (left) and Robert L. Fisher have been installed as presidents of Marin Kiwanis clubs. Gale Warnings Dropped After Wind Rips Coast

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — A low pressure system eased its grip on portions of the Florida east coast today, but not before gale force winds, heavy rains and high seas associated with it combined to wreck structures in Vero Beach and Port Canaveral.

Gale warnings were dropped this morning south of Ponce de Leon inlet to Vero Beach as the low moved northward along northeastern Florida and into Georgia. Forecasters said warnings remained in effect from Ponce de Leon Inlet to Savannah, Ga.

In Vero Beach, one motel was evacuated and the concrete flooring of the famous Ocean Grill Restaurant collapsed into the high surf.

No injuries were reported in the restaurant collapse.

Not Critical Of Planning —Proctor

Thomas K. Procter, incumbent member of the Marin Hospital District board who is running for reelection in the Nov. 5 election, today clarified his views on developing new facilities at Marin General Hospital.

He said the board is working toward developing the ambulatory care and "surgicenter" type of health care (for less serious surgery), thus minimizing the costly overnight use of hospital rooms to the greatest extent possible.

A statement attributed to Proctor in Friday's Independent-Journal made it appearthat he was critical of the hospital's surgical facilities, Procter said. He said he was not.

Procter, who lives in Belvedere, is currently a consultant with Coldwell Banker and Co. and is also a land counsellor, both for the Trust for Public Lands and for the site committee of the Theater for the Performing Arts in San Francisco.

Art Reception Is Scheduled

The Dominican College art department will hold a reception for faculty, students and the public next Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. in the faculty lounge of the college library.

Art Department Chairman Masatoyo Kishi said there will be a slide show of faculty art work and a film made by a teacher at the college.

Scouts Investigated In Labor Violation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — The Boy Scouts are under investigation for possible violations of Arkansas' child labor laws for selling refreshments during football games at War Memorial Stadium.

Arkansas law prohibits children under 14 from being in any remunerative occupation, except during school vacations when they may be employed in businesses owned or controlled by their parents or guardians.

Glen Smith, support services director for the Quapaw Council, said scouts under 14 participated in the selling of concessions.

"My honest opinion is that it's a direct violation of the law," said Joseph Kirby, acting director of the State Labor Department.

Kirby said he had the authority to "order them (the scouts) to cease and desist" selling concessions, but he wasn't sure such action would be "advisable."

"What I want to know is why it's been going on all these years without anyone investigating it. I want to talk to as many past labor directors as possible to determine if they had a policy of just turning their backs on it," said Kirby, who was named acting director last month.

There might be some question on whether the selling of concessions is a "remunerative job. The way the scouts operate makes that a tricky question," he said.

Scout earnings from the concession sales go to the troops, in most cases. Smith said the money was used to buy camping gear or to help send boys to camp but they were not supposed to make any personal gain."

"I think hiring a youngster under 14 is negligence per se... period," Kirby said. "The law specifically prohibits it."

Child Stable After Being Hit By Car

A 2-year-old Petaluma child was listed in stable condition today in the intensive care unit of Hillcrest Hospital, where she was treated for severe head injuries and bruises suffered yesterday when hit by a car near her home.

Melanie H. Rogers, of 855 Cottage Court, was struck at about 4:20 p.m. when David H. Watson, 28, of 859 Cottage Court, backed his car out of his driveway. He later told police he did not see the child.

When Watson felt something go bump at the rear of his car he got out and found Melanie underneath, badly bruised on the arms and legs and bleeding from the head. The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Rogers, then rushed her to the hospital.

THE $225,000 DOLLAR

The Idler U.S. silver dollar, one of the most famous of the 15 known authentic coins bearing the 1804 date, is held by Kent Froseth of Minneapolis-based Continental Coin Galleries, which paid a record $225,000 for it Friday.

High School Debating Still Popular

By ERNEST MURPHY

In spite of Watergate and Madison Avenue's increasing involvement in American politics, debate tournaments — in which political leaders of the future are supposed to cut their rhetorical teeth — remain exceedingly popular with the high school set.

At least that's how it looked Saturday at Casa Grande High School in Petaluma, where about two dozen Marin and Southern Sonoma youths joined more than 100 other Bay Area students in a day-long contest.

During the series of elocutionary battles the teen-agers argued the question, "Resolved: That the United States should significantly change the method of electing the president and vice president."

The 160 students were divided into 80 two-person teams, and half of the teams argued in support of the question while the others argued against it.

Each debate thus required two opposing teams, or four debaters, and three judges, who afterward voted among themselves as to which side argued most effectively in each round. Ten schools, including Terra Linda High, competed.

The tournament was won by St. Ignatius High School of San Francisco, with Berkeley High School in second place.

Chief promoter and organizer of the Petaluma tournament was Pattie Jo Tower, Casa Grande's debate coach.

Miss Tower, a wiry, fast-talking and boundlessly energetic woman, exhibits the prime attribute of a successful debate coach — she hustles.

Like most debate organizers, she at least once a year has to hustle the board of education for enough money to take her crew around to other tournaments. Forensics is like football — to play you have to travel a lot, and school buses consume costly gasoline.

One of her biggest jobs in connection with this tournament was rounding up enough judges, since so many were needed.

"We needed judges really badly and the community blessed me with at least 100," Miss Tower said, sounding slightly like a traveling revivalist reporting that the Lord blessed him with a bountiful offering that night. In either case, the blessing was more likely the result of a little hustle than the will of some benign deity.

Debate coaches don't have to know anything about debate contests — so long as they know a good argument when they hear it.

She and several coaches from other schools said the Casa Grande High debaters got no particular advantage from playing in the home stadium, so to speak.

Because of the rules of the Golden Gate Speech Association, sponsor of the tourney, it was impossible for any of the debaters from Petaluma to be judged by a friend or acquaintance. The rules are so strict, in fact, that the debaters give only their first names to the judges for scoring purposes — the judges aren't permitted to know what school they are judging.

Contributing to the lack of home court advantage is the fact that, unlike football games, debate tournaments are not held in stadiums full of fans to cheer the competitors on.

Competitive debate, rather, is a series of very formal, stand-up arguments, with each contestant speaking his piece for a precise number of minutes before yielding to an opponent, who likewise must argue within a precise time limit. When the talk is over, the judges retire to vote by secret ballot on which side argued the best.

The young contestants invariably arrived for each session armed with a portable filing cabinet under one arm and a bulging attache case under the other.

The baggage contained hundreds, sometimes even thousands, of neatly sorted filing cards, each bearing some vital piece of evidence which might conceivably come in handy during an argument or rebuttal. The contestants spent many hours in libraries gleaning the data they used in competition.

Often, the bulging files and briefcases function like the corporeal bulk of Japanese sumo wrestlers, those behemoths whose training consists largely of eating vast quantities of starchy food so that, in the ring, they can demoralize or even terrorize opponents simply by their frightening size.

The files, apparently, are more bulky these days than they used to be a few years ago.

But not everyone agrees bigger files mean better arguments.

"It's one of the more negative changes in debate," said coach David Mazzera of St. Ignatius High School in San Francisco. "More emphasis is being placed on the sheer quantity of evidence rather than on the quality of the argument."

A school's debaters are rated according to experience.

"A" teams are the most experienced, with one or more years of solid competition behind them. The "B" teams have only a little experience and the "C" teams, like the Terra Linda ones, are competing for their first season.

During the debates at Casa Grande, many of the students argued with more passion than one might expect on a topic which was arbitrarily assigned to them.

"People now are more emotionally involved in politics," Mazzera said, "and the emotion is coming through in the arguments."

Political reform, he acknowledged, is a big topic this year with high school debaters all around the nation.

The tournament Saturday was the first of several which the Golden Gate Association will hold around the Bay Area this year for its 30 to 35 member schools, Miss Tower said.

Dance-Drama Will Be Given

"The Creation of Durga," a dance-drama based on Hindu mythology, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 26 at the College of Marin's Fine Arts Theater in Kentfield.

The performance will depict the rise and destruction of man's demonic nature in the divine imagination, according to a spokesman. The production represents a combination of Eastern myth and Western humor and energy.

Produced by Siva Kalpa productions, the program will be sponsored by the college's Association Students. Admission will be $2.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Women's Political Group Backs Meyer For Clerk

Peter C. Meyer of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County clerk, was endorsed Saturday by the Marin unit of the National Women's Political Caucus.

A spokesman for the organization reported that Meyer got a substantial majority of the vote in balloting by 42 members. Endorsement requires a vote by at least 60 per cent of members balloting. The organization has 167 members in Marin.

Meyer's opponent on the November ballot is John F. Musser Jr. of Marshall.

Also appearing at the endorsement meeting at the YWCA in San Rafael were the three candidates in the Ninth Assembly District, but none came close to getting the needed 60 per cent support to be endorsed. They are Republican A. Alan Hill, Democrat Michael Wornum, and Nancy V. Gunn, nominee of the Peace and Freedom Party.

A fund-raising sale of pumpkins, pumpkin pie, bread, cookies and apple cider will be held for Meyer from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 20 in a vacant lot next to the Raydine Ice Skating rink in Corte Madera. The theme will be "Peter Meyer's Pumpkin Patch."

Receptions for Meyer will be held 10 a.m. Thursday at the San Rafael home of Louise Matzen, 435 Cedar Hill Drive; 8 p.m. Friday at the Corte Madera home of Gary T. Ragghianti, 6 Golden Hinde Passage; 10 a.m. Oct. 15 at the Lucas Valley home of Dr. John D. Michael, 14 Rubicon Court; and 8 p.m. Oct. 15 at the Sausalito home of Raymond Roy, 123 Crescent Avenue.

CAYLOR — Thomas O. Caylor of San Francisco, Republican nominee in the Fifth Congressional District, has been endorsed for election next month by an organization that endorsed his Democratic rival in the June primary election. Caylor said the change by the California Organization of Police and Sheriffs was a "welcome reevaluation" of its earlier support of Rep. John L. Burton.

BROWN — A free reception and rally for Edmund G. Brown Jr., Democratic nominee for governor, will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Flamingo Hotel in Santa Rosa. It is his only scheduled appearance in Sonoma before next month's election.

WORNUM — Michael Wornum of Mill Valley, Democratic nominee in the Ninth Assembly District, has been endorsed by the Community Communications Workers of America, Local 9404, and by the Bay Area Typographical Union, Local 21.

Doctor Links Soft Water To Heart Attacks

CHICAGO (UPI) — Drinking soft water could add to the risk of strokes and heart attacks, a doctor reported in today's issue of the journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Andrew G. Shaper, a British medical scientist, said there is reasonable evidence that drinking of soft water is an additional factor in causing heart attacks.

Shaper said it would be premature to suggest all soft waters be hardened, but he urged caution on those with hard-water supplies who wish to soften their water.

"In particular," Shaper said, "those in hard-water areas who do soften their water suplies might regard it judicious to leave one tap still producing hard water for drinking."

Society To Close Wildlife Area

The National Audubon Society will close the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary in Tiburon to boating and hunting beginning next Sunday, according to society President Elvis J. Stahr.

The closure will last until next spring in order to provide a refuge for migratory waterfowl which arrive in the bay in the fall. The reopening date will be announced later.

Buoys will mark the perimeter of the sanctuary, and Audubon Warden Philip Schaeffer will patrol the area.

Mormon Leader Praises Church's Righteousness

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) — restating the doctrine of their fundamentalist founders — called on their 3.3 million members to stay with the goals of righteousness and maintain their singularity.

LDS President Spencer W. Kimball closed the three-day 144th semi-annual general conference of the Mormon Church here yesterday, urging the church's followers to persist against the winds of fashion and sexual temptation.

"If we can create in our families a strong, steady current flowing toward our goal of righteous life, we and our children may be carried forward in spite of the contrary winds of hardship, disappointment, temptation and fashion," Kimball said.

"The winds of fashion push those about who are insecure and who require the feeling that they are 'in.' The winds of sexual temptation drive some to destroy themselves.

"Bad companions, addicting drugs, the arrogance of profanity, pornography, all these and more act as influences pushing us if we are not being carried forward by a steady current towards a righteous life."

Kimball said that even righteous parents may not succeed in holding their children to the ways of the church.

N. Eldon Tanner, Kimball's first counselor in the LDS first presidency, spoke out against "worldliness."

"Pornography, fornication, adultery and homosexuality are permitted and practiced in the world today to such an extent that we are truly following the ways of Sodom and Gomorrah," Tanner said.

"The use of alcohol and tobacco in the home give license to the children to do the same, and to indulge in other drugs and narcotics which result too often in their leaving the home."

Gordon B. Hinckley, a member of the LDS Council of the Twelve Apostles, said the church's own peculiarity sets the religious group apart as an example to the rest of the world.

Hinckley said the LDS church's strict disciplines in a permissive society make Mormons seem peculiar, but that calls attention to LDS members and allows the lay members to set an example.

"As the growing permissive attitude toward sex continues to spread, the doctrine of the church, as consistently taught for more than a century, will become increasingly singular and even strange to many," Hinckley said.

The LDS apostle said unless the world changes its course, and if Mormons continue to follow the teachings of the church, "we shall increasingly become a peculiar and distinctive people of whom the world will take note."

Honduras Economy Hurt By Hurricane, Ford Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two U.S. foreign aid experts told President Ford today that Hurricane Fifi, which caused an estimated $500 million in damages in Honduras last month, had also dealt a severe blow to the Honduran economy.

The White House said the two officials, who just returned from Honduras, told Ford that "devastation was great" and the Honduras economy was "severely set back," particularly in regard to destruction of the banana trees which provide Honduras with its major export.

The White House also said the Agency for International Development (AID) plans a $5 million grant and loans of between $10-15 million for rehabilitation programs in the Latin American country.

The report to Ford was delivered at a mid-morning meeting by AID officials Herman Kleine and Russell McClure, who went to Honduras at Ford's instruction to assess the destruction and determine what further assistance the United States might provide.

The White House said the two officials concluded that a substantial proportion of the country's banana trees were destroyed and it will take 18 months to two years to replace them.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Crouse-Hinds Should Maintain Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR
and DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. I would like to know what you think of Crouse-Hinds (NYSE) for long-term growth. — A.F.

A. In view of the demand for new capacity in the petroleum and chemical industries, Crouse-Hinds as a supplier should at least maintain its five-year 19 per cent compound annual average growth rate. First-half earnings gained 27 per cent on a 35 per cent increase in sales. An 8 per cent average product line price boost should allow margins to expand in the final half lifting full-year net to about $1.90 a share. The 17 per cent increase in the dividend rate, announced late in September, supports this optimistic outlook. Incidentally, at the new 70-cent annual rate, shares yield close to 6 per cent, a generous return for a junior growth issue.

As a manufacturer of electrical safety equipment, Crouse-Hinds has benefitted from industry spending to meet requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA). However, because sales are cyclical, reflecting the level of industrial construction, investors have failed to recognize the strong growth which continues to be achieved by Crouse-Hinds. Financially clean, the company has less than $300,000 in long-term debt, a 2.8-to-1 current ratio, and only 4.4 million common shares. Some 31 per cent of the common is held by insiders and another 5 per cent is held by institutions, leaving a relatively thin floating supply. While a cutback in planned capital spending by utilities may restrict near-term price action, the shares have appeal for the long term.

Q. Which of my mutual funds would you add to at the present time? — H.H.

A. Chemical Fund, Massachusetts Investors Growth and One William Street are among the older well-known funds and have well-established track records for above-average long-term growth. In each case, net asset value is down substantially but recovery potential looks excellent. By following conservative investment policies these three funds have offered the patient investor an above-average return over the past decade.

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — A Bank of America underwriting group, which included Wells Fargo Bank, has bought the $90 million bond issue of the State of California.

The offering consisted of $50 million clean water bonds, $25 million state beach, park, recreational and historical facilities bonds, and $15 million recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement bonds.

The group bid a premium of $26,325 over principal amount for a net interest cost to the state of 5.7026 per cent. The dollar bid was 100.029. The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 5.1 per cent in 1975 to 6.1 per cent in 1994.

Sharp Rise In Stock Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved sharply and broadly higher early today with indications of details of President Ford's economic program to be released tomorrow. It indicated, to some extent, interest has picked up in the market where there are some bargain prices after the recent slide.

Investor enthusiasm, according to many analysts, came from a belief something solid would come out of Ford's program. There were reports during the weekend the program would contain a 5 per cent surtax on corporations and those in the higher income brackets, while it would give a break to those in the lower levels.

Ford told newsmen he thought the program was developing into a "fair" one.

National Semiconductor was the most active issue, off ¼ at 7 ½ on 266,500 shares, including a block of 239,900 shares at 7.

Chemicals, oils, electronics and computers paced the rally, along with a few other glamors.

Eastman Kodak climbed 2, and Dupont, Union Carbide, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical all around a point. Natomas, which reported an oil find offshore Indonesia last week, gained 2 ¼; Atlantic Richfield, 2 ⅛, and Superior Oil, 4. Point-sized gainers included Exxon, Getty Oil, Halliburton and Kerr-McGee.

IBM soared 5 ¾ after a delayed opening. Burroughs, Motorola, Texas Instruments and Digital Equipment each gained around a point.

Prices were higher in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. Giant Yellowknife Mines was the most active Amex issue, off ¼ at 9 ⅝ on 21,300 shares.

Silver Prices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Handy and Harman today quoted silver at $4.73 per fine ounce, down 14 cents. Engelhard quoted silver bullion at $4.73, down 14 cents and fabricated silver at $4.848 down 14.4 cents.

Creamery Dividends Rise With More Into Cheese

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Wat Takeshita is on vacation. Upon his return, his column, Other People's Business, will resume.)

Expansion into cheese manufacturing has been responsible for a large increase in dividends for members of the California Cooperative Creamery (the former Petaluma Co-op), according to a report at its annaul meeting.

William Van Dam, the co-op's economist, reported that cheese manufacturing "placed us in the position of being able to capitalize on the extremely strong cheese markets of last winter . . . We were able to realize, for several months, profits in excess of 75 cents per hundredweight."

The co-op is expanding its operation with a new cheese plant in Tracy, now nearing completion at a total cost estimated at $7.5 million.

Clover Brand dairy products continued to be profitable for the co-op during its best year ever, reported G. M. Benedetti, president. Sales for the year exceeded $53 million, up 31 per cent over the previous year. Volume of milk increased by 16 per cent.

Adam Van Exel of Lodi and Norman Lucas of Turlock were added to the co-op's board of directors at the annual meeting, held in Petaluma. In the only other election to the board this year, Clinton Beebe of Petaluma won another term.

REAL ESTATE BOARD — Eight round-table discussions are scheduled for the Marin County Board of Realtors' weekly meeting at 8 a.m. tomorrow at the Holiday Inn, San Rafael. Hayes Culpepper, William Brannan, Mildred Vail, Bruce Pohoriles, Henry Hicks, Sue Schaefer, Harold Graves, and Roy Claxton will be discussion leaders.

CORRECTION — All Together Now, the newly opened San Rafael business including apparel, plants, antiques, and macrame, is at 1205 Third Street, not Fourth Street as was mistakenly reported in this column last Wednesday.

HOW ABOUT A PATCH OF CROCHET? — Mary Walker of Greenbrae (left) smiles her approval as partner Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos pins a patch of crochet to garment they're preparing. Both wear garments they have made.

PART-TIME BUSINESS

Old Jeans Become New Designs

By BETH ASHLEY

Jeans are the single most popular article of clothing in America. Right?

So why not use jeans material to make patchwork clothing; you'd make a pile of money. Right?

Well, not exactly, but two Bay Area housewives, one from Greenbrae, are having the time of their lives producing blue denim skirts, vests, bras, purses and bikinis out of other people's leftover jeans.

They're making a moderate amount of money, but mostly they're indulging their native talents and fulfilling a wish they had many years ago to "go into business together."

MARY WALKER of Greenbrae is a former art teacher who deserted her easel for a 50-year-old sewing machine. Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos, a former Greenbrae neighbor, is using her business and buying skills to design salable items and to buy the necessities of their business: lining materials and cast-off jeans.

Both have been long interested in primitive and folk art, and each has a small collection of folk crafts.

They call their enterprise "A Joy Forever," an allusion no doubt to the durability of the recycled clothing.

The germ of the idea for their business came from a story Mrs. Walker was writing (she is the author of a juvenile novel, now out in paperback, called "Bread and Roses."). In it, a woman makes an elaborate quilt from bits of material stolen by pirates. "I really got carried away," she said.

"THEN ONE DAY I saw a young woman wearing a skirt she'd made by splitting the inner seams of a pair of jeans and inserting a long V of material. It was the first one I'd seen that looked really attractive and I thought 'that could be fun!' I called Rosemary the next day and said, 'How would you like . . .' and she said 'Sure.' "

That was a year ago.

The first items they made were for friends — and then for friends of friends. It took hours and hours and bales of jeans to learn how to make a skirt that would hang right and be an artistic success, Mrs. Walker said. She also had the drawback of a 17-year-old featherweight sewing machine that could barely make its way through the tough, multi-layered jeans material. (She later replaced it with an old but sturdy commercial machine.)

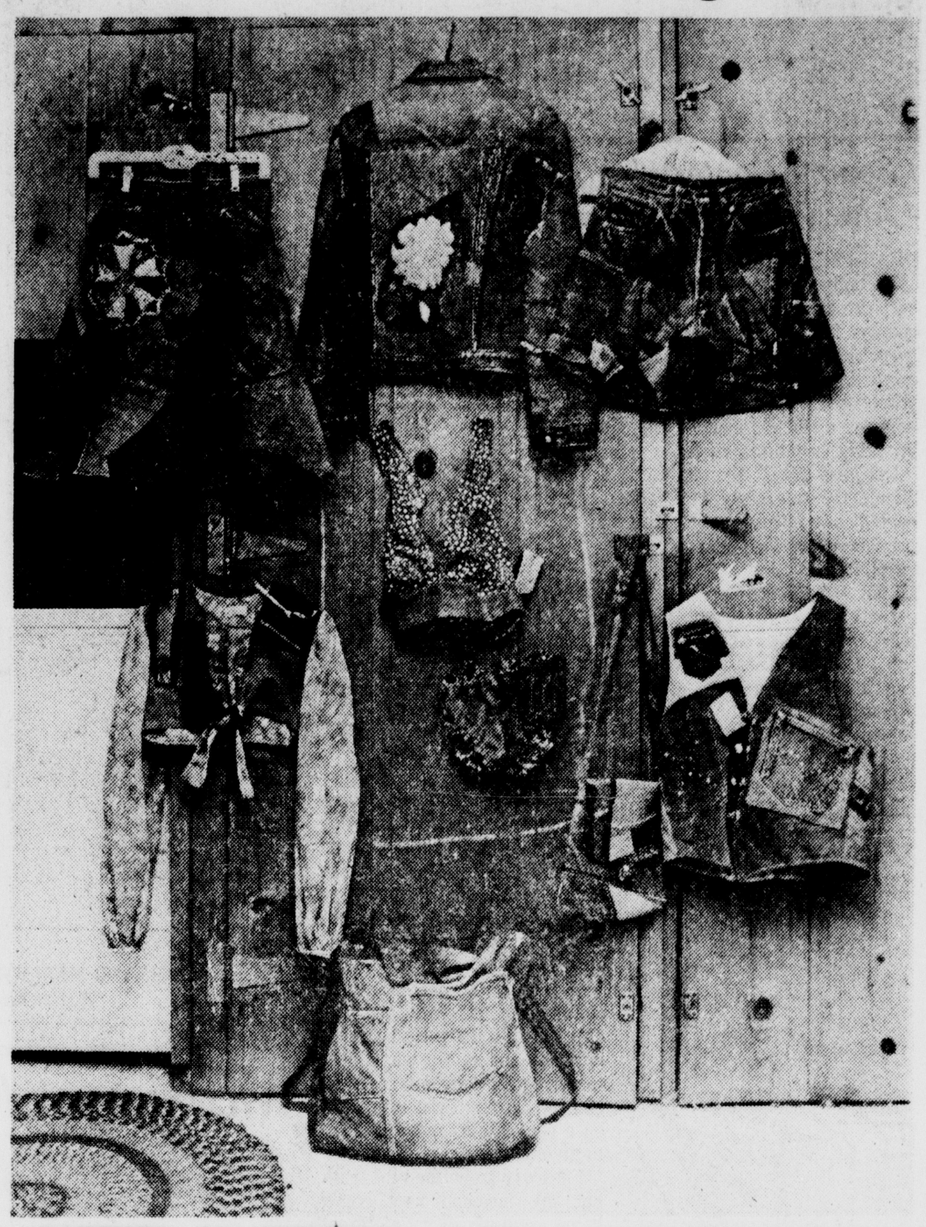
THE FIRST long skirts they made had as many as 300 patches in them. Mrs. Walker shook her head at her folly, and added: "And we sold them for $20!" For her, the fun has always been in the "art" of patchwork. The skirt she was wearing had an elegant sunburst.

Designs have gotten simpler now, just to keep up with orders, and prices are higher: jeans, even cast-offs, are hard to find. "I spend half my life in thrift shops looking for them," Mrs. Caswell said. "And the price of them is way up."

Mrs. Walker said, "I can't tell you how grateful I am to the friends and neighbors who have been saving me jeans scraps — you know, cut-off pant legs, shreds of old jeans. They've kept us going."

More than half their sales now come through commercial outlets: three stores in Larkspur and one in San Anselmo carry their work. Often, the pair will attend craft shows and fairs to show and sell. "I had a wonderful selling at a rock festival in Angel's Camp," said Mrs. Walker, and Mrs. Caswell sold enormous amounts of jeans patchwork at the recent Art Deco show in San Francisco.

THEIR MOST POPULAR item right now is "school skirts," a simplified version of their patchwork miniskirts. A school skirt has around 12 patches, and sells for a more moderate price than the regulation mini that features as many as 30.



PATCHES ON PATCHES — There is a wide variety of clothing and carry-alls that Mary Walker of Greenbrae and her partner Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos make from castoff jeans.

Best-sellers during the summer were halter tops and bikinis.

They're trying men's vest now, to see if they'll sell.

"We only want to work part time," Mrs. Walker explained. "We haven't put the vests in the stores yet, because what would we do if we suddenly got an order for a dozen?

"We don't want that kind of pressure. It's only fun when we can make one of a kind. Every patchwork we do is different."

She said it takes her three days to make a long skirt "if I have nothing else to do."

A school skirt takes somewhere between one and three hours.

ON SOME of their patches, the women have added fancywork. They pay a woman in Novato to set stones in patches. High school girls and a woman friend make embroidery on patches. Mrs. Walker's mother in Texas paints floral and animal designs on patches.

The variations are endless.

So are the possibilities. Mrs. Caswell said she has made book covers (with pockets) for her schoolboy son's textbooks, a patchwork backpack for another son, and is in the middle of making a blue jeans bedspread for another (she has four sons).

The women say both of their families have been supportive: Mrs. Walker is the mother of three sons ages 13 through 18, and is the wife of anesthesiologist Tom Walker; Mrs. Caswell, whose sons range from 16 to 25, is the wife of a management consultant. "The only time my boys complain is if I set up my sewing machine in front of the refrigerator," said Mrs. Walker.

THE WOMEN themselves seem happy with what they're doing, although Mrs. Walker concedes nervously that she sometimes spends as much as 30 hours a week at her "part-time job." But they speak proudly of patchwork as an ancient art, and "about the only one we can say came from our foremothers. All the other arts — leather and pewter and furniture making — came from our forefathers."

"Sometimes someone will say to me, 'Arent you afraid people will see a skirt of yours and steal your idea?' " said Mrs. Walker. "And I just laugh and say, 'If they want to work that hard, they're welcome to it.' "

Dominic J. Selmi (left) and Robert L. Fisher have been installed as presidents of Marin Kiwanis clubs. At the joint installation last week, Selmi assumed leadership of the San Rafael club and Fisher the Novato Club. Their identities were reversed in captions accompanying the Independent-Journal report on Saturday.

Gale Warnings Dropped After Wind Rips Coast

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — A low pressure system eased its grip on portions of the Florida east coast today, but not before gale force winds, heavy rains and high seas associated with it combined to wreck structures in Vero Beach and Port Canaveral.

Gale warnings were dropped this morning south of Ponce de Leon inlet to Vero Beach as the low moved northward along northeastern Florida and into Georgia. Forecasters said warnings remained in effect from Ponce de Leon Inlet to Savannah, Ga.

In Vero Beach, one motel was evacuated and the concrete flooring of the famous Ocean Grill Restaurant collapsed into the high surf.

No injuries were reported in the restaurant collapse.

Not Critical Of Planning —Proctor

Thomas K. Procter, incumbent member of the Marin Hospital District board who is running for reelection in the Nov. 5 election, today clarified his views on developing new facilities at Marin General Hospital.

He said the board is working toward developing the ambulatory care and "surgicenter" type of health care (for less serious surgery), thus minimizing the costly overnight use of hospital rooms to the greatest extent possible.

A statement attributed to Proctor in Friday's Independent-Journal made it appearthat he was critical of the hospital's surgical facilities, Procter said. He said he was not.

Procter, who lives in Belvedere, is currently a consultant with Coldwell Banker and Co. and is also a land counsellor, both for the Trust for Public Lands and for the site committee of the Theater for the Performing Arts in San Francisco.

Art Reception Is Scheduled

The Dominican College art department will hold a reception for faculty, students and the public next Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. in the faculty lounge of the college library.

Art Department Chairman Masatoyo Kishi said there will be a slide show of faculty art work and a film made by a teacher at the college.

Scouts Investigated In Labor Violation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — The Boy Scouts are under investigation for possible violations of Arkansas' child labor laws for selling refreshments during football games at War Memorial Stadium.

Arkansas law prohibits children under 14 from being in any remunerative occupation, except during school vacations when they may be employed in businesses owned or controlled by their parents or guardians.

Glen Smith, support services director for the Quapaw Council, said scouts under 14 participated in the selling of concessions.

"My honest opinion is that it's a direct violation of the law," said Joseph Kirby, acting director of the State Labor Department.

Kirby said he had the authority to "order them (the scouts) to cease and desist" selling concessions, but he wasn't sure such action would be "advisable."

"What I want to know is why it's been going on all these years without anyone investigating it. I want to talk to as many past labor directors as possible to determine if they had a policy of just turning their backs on it," said Kirby, who was named acting director last month.

There might be some question on whether the selling of concessions is a "remunerative job. The way the scouts operate makes that a tricky question," he said.

Scout earnings from the concession sales go to the troops, in most cases. Smith said the money was used to buy camping gear or to help send boys to camp but they were not supposed to make any personal gain."

"I think hiring a youngster under 14 is negligence per se... period," Kirby said. "The law specifically prohibits it."

Child Stable After Being Hit By Car

A 2-year-old Petaluma child was listed in stable condition today in the intensive care unit of Hillcrest Hospital, where she was treated for severe head injuries and bruises suffered yesterday when hit by a car near her home.

Melanie H. Rogers, of 855 Cottage Court, was struck at about 4:20 p.m. when David H. Watson, 28, of 859 Cottage Court, backed his car out of his driveway. He later told police he did not see the child.

When Watson felt something go bump at the rear of his car he got out and found Melanie underneath, badly bruised on the arms and legs and bleeding from the head. The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Rogers, then rushed her to the hospital.

Beauty Contest Judges Can't Always Dig Into The Past

DEAR HELEN:

Recently my husband and I sat through a picking of a county fair queen. We were surprised to see a girl in the contest who, while in high school in another county, came between a teacher and his wife, breaking up the marriage.

Needless to say, the girl won. Should the committee have accepted a contestant who had been involved in a scandal? — SPECTATOR

DEAR SPECTATOR:

Let's put it this way: If the teacher was allowed to keep his job, the case is evidently closed. If the marriage wasn't already in trouble, a high school girl couldn't have toppled it. Moreover, why blame the girl entirely when the man — an adult — may have been the seducer?

It isn't beauty contest committee's duty to uncover past "scandals" which would be dificult to prove, and could very well have gossip as their base. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You used the word "machismo" recently. I've seen it and "macho" used a lot but they're not in my dictionary. What do they mean? — T.G.T.

DEAR T.:

Machismo is charisma with hair on the chest: swashbuckling manliness plus a certain bold charm. Okay? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I found something in my husband's coat pocket that a married man shouldn't be carrying around with him! He's been out late a few times lately, so I had reason to suspect. In a fury, I sprinkled cayenne pepper in the box and shook it around real good.

However, I got contrite, called Tom at work and told him what I'd done. He burst out laughing and said it was a good thing, because he'd bought the box for a friend who was going on a convention, and was about to give it to him.

I'll never know the real truth, but my husband now comes home promptly every night and is very loving. Did I do right? — HAPPY NOW

DEAR H.N.:

Whatever you (almost) did to whom, it worked — for you. So yes, you did right. But watch that temper! — H.

PERSONAL TO "FURIOUS": I believe it was Ronald Reagan who said, "Forgive your enemies, nothing makes them madder!" — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Recently my marriage of 12 years came to an end. The reason: As a husband, I failed to realize how important my wife was.

My wife would still be with me if I hadn't treated her as a live-in maid. How much time would it have taken when I returned from work to give her a hug and tell how how nice she looked (even if she wasn't gussied up — after all, our three children don't leave her much time). And why didn't I compliment her on the dinner, rather than gripe if it was ten minutes late?

I always said I was too tired to go out and excused myself by making HER feel guilty: I was the breadwinner, so what did SHE do all day? I can't remember when we just talked together over a leisurely dinner in town.

And I never told her "Thank you" for the beautiful children, the way she cared for us, for her love and patience. Come to think of it, I never even told her I loved her — until it was too late.

You can't help me, but if you print my letter, maybe a husband like me may get the message before it's too late for him too. — ONE WHO KNOWS

Mormon Leader Praises Church's Righteousness

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) — restating the doctrine of their fundamentalist founders — called on their 3.3 million members to stay with the goals of righteousness and maintain their singularity.

LDS President Spencer W. Kimball closed the three-day 144th semi-annual general conference of the Mormon Church here yesterday, urging the church's followers to persist against the winds of fashion and sexual temptation.

"If we can create in our families a strong, steady current flowing toward our goal of righteous life, we and our children may be carried forward in spite of the contrary winds of hardship, disappointment, temptation and fashion," Kimball said.

"The winds of fashion push those about who are insecure and who require the feeling that they are 'in.' The winds of sexual temptation drive some to destroy themselves.

"Bad companions, addicting drugs, the arrogance of profanity, pornography, all these and more act as influences pushing us if we are not being carried forward by a steady current towards a righteous life."

Kimball said that even righteous parents may not succeed in holding their children to the ways of the church.

N. Eldon Tanner, Kimball's first counselor in the LDS first presidency, spoke out against "worldliness."

"Pornography, fornication, adultery and homosexuality are permitted and practiced in the world today to such an extent that we are truly following the ways of Sodom and Gomorrah," Tanner said.

"The use of alcohol and tobacco in the home give license to the children to do the same, and to indulge in other drugs and narcotics which result too often in their leaving the home."

Gordon B. Hinckley, a member of the LDS Council of the Twelve Apostles, said the church's own peculiarity sets the religious group apart as an example to the rest of the world.

Hinckley said the LDS church's strict disciplines in a permissive society make Mormons seem peculiar, but that calls attention to LDS members and allows the lay members to set an example.

"As the growing permissive attitude toward sex continues to spread, the doctrine of the church, as consistently taught for more than a century, will become increasingly singular and even strange to many," Hinckley said.

The LDS apostle said unless the world changes its course, and if Mormons continue to follow the teachings of the church, "we shall increasingly become a peculiar and distinctive people of whom the world will take note."

Honduras Economy Hurt By Hurricane, Ford Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two U.S. foreign aid experts told President Ford today that Hurricane Fifi, which caused an estimated $500 million in damages in Honduras last month, had also dealt a severe blow to the Honduran economy.

The White House said the two officials, who just returned from Honduras, told Ford that "devastation was great" and the Honduras economy was "severely set back," particularly in regard to destruction of the banana trees which provide Honduras with its major export.

The White House also said the Agency for International Development (AID) plans a $5 million grant and loans of between $10-15 million for rehabilitation programs in the Latin American country.

The report to Ford was delivered at a mid-morning meeting by AID officials Herman Kleine and Russell McClure, who went to Honduras at Ford's instruction to assess the destruction and determine what further assistance the United States might provide.

The White House said the two officials concluded that a substantial proportion of the country's banana trees were destroyed and it will take 18 months to two years to replace them.

Style Decrees Skirts But Pants Are Still In

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The arbiters of style decree that this is the year women get out of pants and into skirts.

Whether they succeed in the switch depends not so much on their dictates as on the changes in society involving both sexes. Matter of fact, men might end up in skirts.

This is the viewpoint put forth by fashion historian Moira Johnston.

"It is not just women's limited role that is being challenged but the values and priorities of an entire civilization," says Ms. Johnston. "The barricades phase of this revolution liberation began for women when they put on jeans, hoping by a symbolic "taking-on-of-pants' to absorb male power and privilege by osmosis.

"Armed with the pill, these women fighting a large bank for the right not to wear 'cute' uniforms or take the bank's charm course . . .

"There are some signs though that as soon as basic goals have been achieved, women might not want pants; men might end up in some form of skirt . . .

"Some women are convinced that long skirts can be freer than pants as long as they're not stretched over hoops or dragging coronation trains."

Ms. Johnston's review of style changes through the centuries and the forces that created them is featured in the current issue of the "Journal of Home Economics," official publication of the American Home Economics Association (AHEA). She is based in San Francisco.

She reviews the way women got where they are in dress "for thousands of years women of many cultures have been willing participants in their own mutilation . . . hidden under a cloak of words like fashion, modesty and femininity.

Ms. Johnston writes that, "We have seen pants as male symbols for so long that it's hard for us to grasp the fact that it's a peculiar thing to have happened."

Men have not always worn pants in the rest of the world "for thousands of years the wrapped skirt has draped the hips of men in Egypt, the Middle East, Africa, Southeast Asia and many other regions," she says.

As for today, she continues, "Men are coming to meet women more than halfway as the business suit comes to seem a hollow shell.

"It is the aggressive, trousers-wearing men of science and reason who have brought the world to the brink of environmental and spiritual crisis. Suddenly the so-called 'feminine' characteristics are beginning to look like the answer, not the problem."

Misspent Youth Could Be Aid

A so-called misspent youth may be the most profitable investment a young person can make, according to author James A. Michener. Attributing his career as a writer to a general lack of direction during college years and an unwillingness to "settle down" after that, Michener believes you have until age age 35 to decide finally on what you are going to do, and any exploration you pursue in the process will in the end turn out to have been creative.

Some Products May Disappear

Americans accustomed to living in the land of plenty need to take another look at their shopping lists and find substitutes for many products. Even items that don't disappear altogether may be hard to find, and the consumer will need ingenuity and patience to come up with alternatives, according to a recent magazine article.

Shoppers will face periodic shortages in food and higher prices; a scarcity of do-it-yourself tools and supplies, and a shortage of wood and paper products, the article said.

Exercise Could Dull Appetite

In contrast to the belief that exercise makes you so hungry that you'll eat more than usual and put on weight, an October Reader's Digest article reveals that physically taxing exercise just before a meal can dull the appetite and cause caloric intake to fall below expenditure.

Quoting the Harvard School of Public Health, the article notes that as little as one half-hour of moderate exercise each day can take off as much as 26 pounds in a year if you don't increase your caloric intake.

Style Decrees Skirts But Pants Are Still In

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The arbiters of style decree that this is the year women get out of pants and into skirts.

Whether they succeed in the switch depends not so much on their dictates as on the changes in society involving both sexes. Matter of fact, men might end up in skirts.

This is the viewpoint put forth by fashion historian Moira Johnston.

"It is not just women's limited role that is being challenged but the values and priorities of an entire civilization," says Ms. Johnston. "The barricades phase of this revolution liberation began for women when they put on jeans, hoping by a symbolic "taking-on-of-pants' to absorb male power and privilege by osmosis.

"Armed with the pill, these women fighting a large bank for the right not to wear 'cute' uniforms or take the bank's charm course . . .

"There are some signs though that as soon as basic goals have been achieved, women might not want pants; men might end up in some form of skirt . . .

"Some women are convinced that long skirts can be freer than pants as long as they're not stretched over hoops or dragging coronation trains."

Ms. Johnston's review of style changes through the centuries and the forces that created them is featured in the current issue of the "Journal of Home Economics," official publication of the American Home Economics Association (AHEA). She is based in San Francisco.

She reviews the way women got where they are in dress "for thousands of years women of many cultures have been willing participants in their own mutilation . . . hidden under a cloak of words like fashion, modesty and femininity.

Ms. Johnston writes that, "We have seen pants as male symbols for so long that it's hard for us to grasp the fact that it's a peculiar thing to have happened."

Men have not always worn pants in the rest of the world "for thousands of years the wrapped skirt has draped the hips of men in Egypt, the Middle East, Africa, Southeast Asia and many other regions," she says.

As for today, she continues, "Men are coming to meet women more than halfway as the business suit comes to seem a hollow shell.

"It is the aggressive, trousers-wearing men of science and reason who have brought the world to the brink of environmental and spiritual crisis. Suddenly the so-called 'feminine' characteristics are beginning to look like the answer, not the problem."

Misspent Youth Could Be Aid

A so-called misspent youth may be the most profitable investment a young person can make, according to author James A. Michener. Attributing his career as a writer to a general lack of direction during college years and an unwillingness to "settle down" after that, Michener believes you have until age age 35 to decide finally on what you are going to do, and any exploration you pursue in the process will in the end turn out to have been creative.

Shoppers will face periodic shortages in food and higher prices; a scarcity of do-it-yourself tools and supplies, and a shortage of wood and paper products, the article said.

Exercise Could Dull Appetite

In contrast to the belief that exercise makes you so hungry that you'll eat more than usual and put on weight, an October Reader's Digest article reveals that physically taxing exercise just before a meal can dull the appetite and cause caloric intake to fall below expenditure.

Quoting the Harvard School of Public Health, the article notes that as little as one half-hour of moderate exercise each day can take off as much as 26 pounds in a year if you don't increase your caloric intake.

HOW ABOUT A PATCH OF CROCHET? — Mary Walker of Greenbrae (left) smiles her approval as partner Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos pins a patch of crochet to garment they're preparing. Both wear garments they have made.

PART-TIME BUSINESS

Old Jeans Become New Designs

By BETH ASHLEY

Jeans are the single most popular article of clothing in America. Right?

So why not use jeans material to make patchwork clothing; you'd make a pile of money. Right?

Well, not exactly, but two Bay Area housewives, one from Greenbrae, are having the time of their lives producing blue denim skirts, vests, bras, purses and bikinis out of other people's leftover jeans.

They're making a moderate amount of money, but mostly they're indulging their native talents and fulfilling a wish they had many years ago to "go into business together."

MARY WALKER of Greenbrae is a former art teacher who deserted her easel for a 50-year-old sewing machine. Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos, a former Greenbrae neighbor, is using her business and buying skills to design salable items and to buy the necessities of their business: lining materials and cast-off jeans.

Both have been long interested in primitive and folk art, and each has a small collection of folk crafts.

They call their enterprise "A Joy Forever," an allusion no doubt to the durability of the recycled clothing.

The germ of the idea for their business came from a story Mrs. Walker was writing (she is the author of a juvenile novel, now out in paperback, called "Bread and Roses."). In it, a woman makes an elaborate quilt from bits of material stolen by pirates. "I really got carried away," she said.

"THEN ONE DAY I saw a young woman wearing a skirt she'd made by splitting the inner seams of a pair of jeans and inserting a long V of material. It was the first one I'd seen that looked really attractive and I thought 'that could be fun!' I called Rosemary the next day and said, 'How would you like . . .' and she said 'Sure.' "

That was a year ago.

The first items they made were for friends — and then for friends of friends. It took hours and hours and bales of jeans to learn how to make a skirt that would hang right and be an artistic success, Mrs. Walker said. She also had the drawback of a 17-year-old featherweight sewing machine that could barely make its way through the tough, multi-layered jeans material. (She later replaced it with an old but sturdy commercial machine.)

THE FIRST long skirts they made had as many as 300 patches in them. Mrs. Walker shook her head at her folly, and added: "And we sold them for $20!" For her, the fun has always been in the "art" of patchwork. The skirt she was wearing had an elegant sunburst.

Designs have gotten simpler now, just to keep up with orders, and prices are higher: jeans, even cast-offs, are hard to find. "I spend half my life in thrift shops looking for them," Mrs. Caswell said. "And the price of them is way up."

Mrs. Walker said, "I can't tell you how grateful I am to the friends and neighbors who have been saving me jeans scraps — you know, cut-off pant legs, shreds of old jeans. They've kept us going."

More than half their sales now come through commercial outlets: three stores in Larkspur and one in San Anselmo carry their work. Often, the pair will attend craft shows and fairs to show and sell. "I had a wonderful selling at a rock festival in Angel's Camp," said Mrs. Walker, and Mrs. Caswell sold enormous amounts of jeans patchwork at the recent Art Deco show in San Francisco.

THEIR MOST POPULAR item right now is "school skirts," a simplified version of their patchwork miniskirts. A school skirt has around 12 patches, and sells for a more moderate price than the regulation mini that features as many as 30.

Best-sellers during the summer were halter tops and bikinis.

They're trying men's vest now, to see if they'll sell.

"We only want to work part time," Mrs. Walker explained. "We haven't put the vests in the stores yet, because what would we do if we suddenly got an order for a dozen?

"We don't want that kind of pressure. It's only fun when we can make one of a kind. Every patchwork we do is different."

She said it takes her three days to make a long skirt "if I have nothing else to do."

A school skirt takes somewhere between one and three hours.

ON SOME of their patches, the women have added fancywork. They pay a woman in Novato to set stones in patches. High school girls and a woman friend make embroidery on patches. Mrs. Walker's mother in Texas paints floral and animal designs on patches.

The variations are endless.

So are the possibilities. Mrs. Caswell said she has made book covers (with pockets) for her schoolboy son's textbooks, a patchwork backpack for another son, and is in the middle of making a blue jeans bedspread for another (she has four sons).

The women say both of their families have been supportive: Mrs. Walker is the mother of three sons ages 13 through 18, and is the wife of anesthesiologist Tom Walker; Mrs. Caswell, whose sons range from 16 to 25, is the wife of a management consultant. "The only time my boys complain is if I set up my sewing machine in front of the refrigerator," said Mrs. Walker.

THE WOMEN themselves seem happy with what they're doing, although Mrs. Walker concedes nervously that she sometimes spends as much as 30 hours a week at her "part-time job." But they speak proudly of patchwork as an ancient art, and "about the only one we can say came from our foremothers. All the other arts — leather and pewter and furniture making — came from our forefathers."

"Sometimes someone will say to me, 'Arent you afraid people will see a skirt of yours and steal your idea?' " said Mrs. Walker. "And I just laugh and say, 'If they want to work that hard, they're welcome to it.' "

PATCHES ON PATCHES — There is a wide variety of clothing and carry-alls that Mary Walker of Greenbrae and her partner Rosemary Caswell of Los Altos make from castoff jeans.

Dry Food Packages Are Overfilled

Most packages of dry foods, such as cereals, candies, dessert mixes, and noodle products, are actually overfilled, according to a recent survey by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The survey, which included more than 11,000 dry foods, showed that, on the average, the packages contained 4 per cent more than was declared on the labels.

Irish Travel Film Slated Oct. 21

"Ireland," a feature-length color travel film, will be shown Oct. 21 at 8:15 p.m. in Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center in San Rafael.

It will be narrated by its producer, Chris Borden, former San Francisco radio personality and announcing school owner, who sold his business in 1965 to devote fulltime to producing travel films.

The film was shot in Dublin, Galway, Donegal, Cork, Bantry Bay, Killarney, Glendalough and small villages. Its highlight is segments of a 360-mile boat trip on the Shannon River from Limerick to the border of Northern Ireland.

Singers Solo

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Animals no longer can get into the act at the Cincinnati Summer Opera. For 51 years the opera was staged in a pavilion at the zoo, where caged animals often howled along with the singer. Programs now are performed at the downtown Music Hall.

The film is the first of seven to be shown at the Civic Center by Explorama of San Francisco. Others, whose dates have not been set, are: "Europe's Mini Countries" (Monaco, Andorra, San Marino, Liechtenstein); "Switzerland Today," "Inside Passage to Alaska," "Romance of Romania," "Norway" and "Magic of Venice."

Tickets cost $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for children, and a season ticket for all seven films costs $19.50. They are available from the theater box office, the Holiday Inn in San Rafael, Macy's and Explorama, 609 Sutter Street, San Francisco.

Increasing Addiction To Heroin Seen

The chairman of the House health subcommittee holding the hearings warned of another period of hard drug use "which may well surpass the nightmares of the early '70s."

Dr. Robert DuPont, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention, reported "an unexpected increase in heroin addiction in some smaller cities like Macon, Ga.; Des Moines, Iowa, and Jackson, Miss.," in recent months.

"This has led us to speculate that drug use radiates out from the major population centers, and can be expected to hit some smaller cities, and eventually perhaps even some rural areas, after a reasonably predictable time lag," DuPont told the subcommittee.

Committee Chairman Paul Rogers, D-Fla., opened the oversight hearings on drug abuse by reporting what he said were dramatic figures indicating the national epidemic of drug use, including heroin, opium and cocaine, is having a resurgence.

Rogers said one report indicated the number of heroin addicts has increased from 300,000-350,000 earlier this year to 600,000-800,000.

New York City Ballet Dancers To Appear In Marin Oct. 19

Two young principal dancers with the New York City Ballet will appear with the Marin Civic Ballet at 8 p.m. Oct. 19 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building in San Rafael.

They are Kay Mazzo and Helgi Tomasson. They will appear in Tchaikovsky's, "Pas de Deux" and John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes." Both were choreographed by George Balanchine.

Miss Mazzo was born in Chicago and received her training there and New York City. When she was 9 years old, she danced in "The Nutcracker" with the New York City Ballet. She became soloist in 1965 with the company and principal dancer in 1969.

Tomasson was born in Reykjavik, Iceland, and started ballet studies at the age of 10, the only boy in the dance school of the National Theater of Reykjavik. He studied at the School of American Ballet. He danced with the Robert Joffrey Ballet in a cross-country tour. Later he joined the Harkness Ballet.

In June 1969, he represented the United States in the first International Ballet Competition in Moscow, competing with 77 other dancers from 19 countries, placing second in the solo division.

TRAVEL — Irish children singing carols at Mansion House in Dublin are among the scenes captured by Chris Borden in his travel film "Ireland," to be shown Oct. 21 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building. The film is the first of seven to be shown there by Explorama of San Francisco.

Irish Travel Film Slated Oct. 21

"Ireland," a feature-length color travel film, will be shown Oct. 21 at 8:15 p.m. in Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center in San Rafael.

It will be narrated by its producer, Chris Borden, former San Francisco radio personality and announcing school owner, who sold his business in 1965 to devote fulltime to producing travel films.

The film was shot in Dublin, Galway, Donegal, Cork, Bantry Bay, Killarney, Glendalough and small villages. Its highlight is segments of a 360-mile boat trip on the Shannon River from Limerick to the border of Northern Ireland.

Singers Solo

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Animals no longer can get into the act at the Cincinnati Summer Opera. For 51 years the opera was staged in a pavilion at the zoo, where caged animals often howled along with the singer. Programs now are performed at the downtown Music Hall.

The film is the first of seven to be shown at the Civic Center by Explorama of San Francisco. Others, whose dates have not been set, are: "Europe's Mini Countries" (Monaco, Andorra, San Marino, Liechtenstein); "Switzerland Today," "Inside Passage to Alaska," "Romance of Romania," "Norway" and "Magic of Venice."

Tickets cost $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for children, and a season ticket for all seven films costs $19.50. They are available from the theater box office, the Holiday Inn in San Rafael, Macy's and Explorama, 609 Sutter Street, San Francisco.

Increasing Addiction To Heroin Seen

The chairman of the House health subcommittee holding the hearings warned of another period of hard drug use "which may well surpass the nightmares of the early '70s."

Dr. Robert DuPont, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention, reported "an unexpected increase in heroin addiction in some smaller cities like Macon, Ga.; Des Moines, Iowa, and Jackson, Miss.," in recent months.

"This has led us to speculate that drug use radiates out from the major population centers, and can be expected to hit some smaller cities, and eventually perhaps even some rural areas, after a reasonably predictable time lag," DuPont told the subcommittee.

Committee Chairman Paul Rogers, D-Fla., opened the oversight hearings on drug abuse by reporting what he said were dramatic figures indicating the national epidemic of drug use, including heroin, opium and cocaine, is having a resurgence.

Rogers said one report indicated the number of heroin addicts has increased from 300,000-350,000 earlier this year to 600,000-800,000.

New York City Ballet Dancers To Appear In Marin Oct. 19

Two young principal dancers with the New York City Ballet will appear with the Marin Civic Ballet at 8 p.m. Oct. 19 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building in San Rafael.

They are Kay Mazzo and Helgi Tomasson. They will appear in Tchaikovsky's, "Pas de Deux" and John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes." Both were choreographed by George Balanchine.

Miss Mazzo was born in Chicago and received her training there and New York City. When she was 9 years old, she danced in "The Nutcracker" with the New York City Ballet. She became soloist in 1965 with the company and principal dancer in 1969.

Tomasson was born in Reykjavik, Iceland, and started ballet studies at the age of 10, the only boy in the dance school of the National Theater of Reykjavik. He studied at the School of American Ballet. He danced with the Robert Joffrey Ballet in a cross-country tour. Later he joined the Harkness Ballet.

In June 1969, he represented the United States in the first International Ballet Competition in Moscow, competing with 77 other dancers from 19 countries, placing second in the solo division.

Tickets for the program, which includes the world premiere of "Tape Suite" choreographed by Ruthanna Boris, are $4 to $6 and may be obtained at the Marin Veterans Memorial Box Office, Macy's and all Bay Area agencies.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Beauty Contest Judges Can't Always Dig Into The Past

DEAR HELEN:

Recently my husband and I sat through a picking of a county fair queen. We were surprised to see a girl in the contest who, while in high school in another county, came between a teacher and his wife, breaking up the marriage.

Needless to say, the girl won. Should the committee have accepted a contestant who had been involved in a scandal? — SPECTATOR

DEAR SPECTATOR:

Let's put it this way: If the teacher was allowed to keep his job, the case is evidently closed. If the marriage wasn't already in trouble, a high school girl couldn't have toppled it. Moreover, why blame the girl entirely when the man — an adult — may have been the seducer?

It isn't beauty contest committee's duty to uncover past "scandals" which would be dificult to prove, and could very well have gossip as their base. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You used the word "machismo" recently. I've seen it and "macho" used a lot but they're not in my dictionary. What do they mean? — T.G.T.

DEAR T.:

Machismo is charisma with hair on the chest: swashbuckling manliness plus a certain bold charm. Okay? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I found something in my husband's coat pocket that a married man shouldn't be carrying around with him! He's been out late a few times lately, so I had reason to suspect. In a fury, I sprinkled cayenne pepper in the box and shook it around real good.

However, I got contrite, called Tom at work and told him what I'd done. He burst out laughing and said it was a good thing, because he'd bought the box for a friend who was going on a convention, and was about to give it to him.

I'll never know the real truth, but my husband now comes home promptly every night and is very loving. Did I do right? — HAPPY NOW

DEAR H.N.:

Whatever you (almost) did to whom, it worked — for you. So yes, you did right. But watch that temper! — H.

PERSONAL TO "FURIOUS": I believe it was Ronald Reagan who said, "Forgive your enemies, nothing makes them madder!" — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Recently my marriage of 12 years came to an end. The reason: As a husband, I failed to realize how important my wife was.

My wife would still be with me if I hadn't treated her as a live-in maid. How much time would it have taken when I returned from work to give her a hug and tell how how nice she looked (even if she wasn't gussied up — after all, our three children don't leave her much time). And why didn't I compliment her on the dinner, rather than gripe if it was ten minutes late?

I always said I was too tired to go out and excused myself by making HER feel guilty: I was the breadwinner, so what did SHE do all day? I can't remember when we just talked together over a leisurely dinner in town.

And I never told her "Thank you" for the beautiful children, the way she cared for us, for her love and patience. Come to think of it, I never even told her I loved her — until it was too late.

You can't help me, but if you print my letter, maybe a husband like me may get the message before it's too late for him too. — ONE WHO KNOWS

GRAPE FESTIVAL ATTRACTS MOB

Throngs of people jam the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, site of Saturday's annual Sunny Hills Grape Festival, where huge displays of balloons massed like bunches of grapes adorned the hall. Outside were additional booths. Chairman Edna Frush of Greenbrae said the festival attendance and receipts were the largest in the 75-year history of the event, but the exact figures were not available. Some products, like the jars of chutney, were so popular they were sold out within an hour.

Conservationists To Be Honored At Public Picnic

Bay Area conservationists will hold a public picnic on Angel Island Saturday to honor the founding of the Marin Conservation League 40 years ago and the four Marin women who launched the league.

The picnic, beginning at noon and ending at 4 p.m. on a knoll above Ayala Cove, will climax a two-month membership drive held by the league to commemorate its anniversary.

About 4,500 invitations to the picnic were mailed out, according to league President Robert F. Raab of San Anselmo, but anyone may attend. Representatives from federal, state and local government are expected.

Ceremonies will begin at 2 p.m. with an address by the event's chairman, Putnam Livermore, son of one of the league founders, the late Caroline (Mrs. Norman B.) Livermore. He will talk on his boyhood memories of the founders.

Then a group of large-leafed maple trees will be planted as a special "Founders' Grove" on the hillside above Ayala Cove. A plaque at the Grove will give the names of the founders: Mrs. Livermore; the late Mrs. Helen Van Pelt and Mrs. Portia (John F.) Forbes, and Mrs. Sepha (Albert J.) Evers, now of San Francisco.

Mrs. Evers, now in her 80s, will attend.

The grove's first four trees will be put in the ground by the founders' sons: Livermore; David Van Pelt of Nicasio, a Marin County planning consultant and former league director; William D. Evers, a San Francisco attorney and chairman of the state Bay Conservation and Development Commission, and John D. Forbes, a professor at the University of Virginia.

During the ceremonies, league officials will receive a State Senate resolution commending the league and a framed commendation from the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

The league was founded in 1934 as the Marin Planning Survey Committee by the four women who were concerned then about the effect of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge on sparsely populated Marin.

With fellow workers, the four raised $2,500 to pay for a study setting up the county planning department and Marin's first zoning ordinance in 1935.

The league went on to work for acquiring such state parks as Samuel P. Taylor, Stinson Beach, Tomales Bay and Angel Island, where the highest peak eventually was renamed Mount Caroline S. Livermore.

It also worked for establishment of the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary; Point Reyes National Seashore; Kent Island County Park in Bolinas Lagoon, and the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Today these parks are visited annually by 10 million persons.

Picnickers have been asked to pack lunches and bring their children, according to league officials. Barbecue pits will be ready with hot coals for those wishing to cook out. The island snack bar, which serves sandwiches and beverages will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

There will be entertainment by strolling musicians and free lemonade for children.

Many guests are expected to arrive by private boat. Others may take the Angel Island State Park ferry which travels every 30 minutes between Tiburon and the island from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

San Rafael Man Reports To Jail To Serve Term

A San Rafael man who admitted taking part in a Fairfax armed robbery reported to Marin County jail Saturday to begin serving a one-year jail sentence.

Robert Scott Morey, 23, a picture frame maker, is eligible to move to the county's honor farm and join the work furlough program under an order by Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best.

Morey pleaded guilty last month to participating in the robbery of $16 from a Fairfax couple in their home Aug. 27.

Police said Morey and two other men, all armed and wearing ski masks, robbed Stephen C. Kida and Leslie A. Bessette. The others were not found.

Fence, Tule Elk Herd Questioned

By BARBARA HOSMER

Why build a seven-foot high wooden fence? What if the tule elk swim away?

Why keep non-native deer if the goal is to return Point Reyes National Seashore to its native condition?

These were among questions citizens put to National Park Service officials Saturday at a public meeting on its preliminary draft for a long-range resource management plan for Point Reyes National Seashore.

The Citizen's Advisory Commission of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area and some 50 largely environmentally-concerned persons met at Point Reyes Station at park service bidding to react to a preliminary plan for the seashore.

They hit mainly upon proposed introduction of a small herd of tule elk, an endangered species once native to West Marin, and a two-mile, seven-foot tall fence to confine them to the northerly Tomales point peninsula.

"What's to prevent the elk from swimming across Tomales Bay like the deer do?" asked several of the audience.

"That's how the last ones left the county in the 1850s," conceded park biologist Richard Brown, who worked on the park service plan and reviewed it with the public and commission.

But, said Brown, a long-term study by an inter-agency tule elk task force determined that Tomales Point has the habitat that the elk might require and that they lived in the area once. It would be an experimental step, he conceded, but a forward step, he said.

"I think the elk are exciting," said Commissioner Peter Haas, "but I sense from the audience that the fence concept may be critical."

Brown said the proposed fence was mandatory, according to the study committee, because the elk otherwise could compete with ranch cattle for grazing land on the seashore and also there could be damage to the animals, an endangered species. "It's the fence or no elk."

Seashore Supt. John L. Sunsing added that the state seemed adamant about a seven-foot high fence, but, he said, in canyon areas out of sight it could be metal. It had been planned to be partially hidden by brush areas, park service officials said.

Height and material for the fence was set by the State Department of Fish and Game, said Brown. Estimated cost is $80,000, including study pen and corral.

He said that the seashore and a site at San Luis refuge in Los Padres National Forest were the two recommended by the tule elk study committee.

The idea of having Nonnative (exotic) deer at the seashore was questioned by Commissioner Edgar Wayburn as inconsistent with the park service's proposed goal of returning the seashore to its natural state as much as possible.

A member of the audience wondered why the deer wouldn't be removed along with the proposed partial eradication of the aggressive exotic Scotch Broom. Others defended the esthetic appeal of the nonnative deer, numbering some 700 animals.

"How would you keep the deer at their present level?" asked Elizabeth Whitney from the audience.

Brown replied that the State Fish and Game Department "is competent at removing excess animals." He said that every month the state takes some from the seashore to Sacramento for study.

"What happens then? Are they returned?" asked a member of the audience.

"They give them to St. Anthony's dining room," Brown answered. The audience sat momentarily silent.

Rampant, aggressively-growing Scotch Broom, which the park service proposes to stamp out, came in for praise and damnation from the audience, some defending its yellow blooms, others hating "the weed."

The finest effect would be to allow more native vegetation to take over the grassland areas, said Brown. He added that native coyote brush could be expected to flourish and the probable long-term effect of the proposed prescribed burn in specified areas and Scotch Broom-hunt would be more forest area at Point Reyes National Seashore.

Agencies, Citizens Consulted In Preparing Point Reyes Plan

To prepare the preliminary draft of the proposed natural resources management plan for Point Reyes National Seashore, the National Park Service consulted with four specialized departments and persons and requested comments from some 30 conservation organizations, government agencies and citizens groups.

Wildlife proposals were made in consultation with the California Department of Fish and Game, the range trend survey with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Petaluma, the tule elk proposal with Dr. Dale McCullough of the University of Michigan Department of Zoology, and fire management with Dr. Harold Biswell of the School of Forestry and Conservation at the University of California at Berkeley.

Comments on the draft environmental statement were requested from the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Army Corps of Engineers, Department of Commerce, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Mines, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Bureau of Reclamation, National Fish and Wildlife Service, Geological Survey, Department of Transportation, Environmental Protection Agency.

Also the California State Historic Preservation Office, California State Clearinghouse, Metropolitan Clearinghouse, Conservation Foundation, Equestrian Trails, Inc., California State Horsemen's Association, National Audubon Society, Nationals Parks and Conservations Association, Sierra Club, Wilderness Society, Marin County Parks Department, Environmental Action Committee of West Marin, Point Reyes Bird Observatory.

And Marin Conservation League West Marin units, College of Marin Biology Department, California Native Plant Society, Nature Conservancy, People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission, Regional Parks Association, Inverness Improvement Association, Vedanta Society of Northern California, League of Women Voters of the Bay Area and Marin County Resource Conservation District.

GRAPE FESTIVAL ATTRACTS MOB

Throngs of people jam the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, site of Saturday's annual Sunny Hills Grape Festival, where huge displays of balloons massed like bunches of grapes adorned the hall. Outside were additional booths. Chairman Edna Frush of Greenbrae said the festival attendance and receipts were the largest in the 75-year history of the event, but the exact figures were not available. Some products, like the jars of chutney, were so popular they were sold out within an hour.

Conservationists To Be Honored At Public Picnic

Bay Area conservationists will hold a public picnic on Angel Island Saturday to honor the founding of the Marin Conservation League 40 years ago and the four Marin women who launched the league.

The picnic, beginning at noon and ending at 4 p.m. on a knoll above Ayala Cove, will climax a two-month membership drive held by the league to commemorate its anniversary.

About 4,500 invitations to the picnic were mailed out, according to league President Robert F. Raab of San Anselmo, but anyone may attend. Representatives from federal, state and local government are expected.

Ceremonies will begin at 2 p.m. with an address by the event's chairman, Putnam Livermore, son of one of the league founders, the late Caroline (Mrs. Norman B.) Livermore. He will talk on his boyhood memories of the founders.

Then a group of large-leafed maple trees will be planted as a special "Founders' Grove" on the hillside above Ayala Cove. A plaque at the Grove will give the names of the founders: Mrs. Livermore; the late Mrs. Helen Van Pelt and Mrs. Portia (John F.) Forbes, and Mrs. Sepha (Albert J.) Evers, now of San Francisco.

Mrs. Evers, now in her 80s, will attend.

The grove's first four trees will be put in the ground by the founders' sons: Livermore; David Van Pelt of Nicasio, a Marin County planning consultant and former league director; William D. Evers, a San Francisco attorney and chairman of the state Bay Conservation and Development Commission, and John D. Forbes, a professor at the University of Virginia.

During the ceremonies, league officials will receive a State Senate resolution commending the league and a framed commendation from the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

The league was founded in 1934 as the Marin Planning Survey Committee by the four women who were concerned then about the effect of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge on sparsely populated Marin.

With fellow workers, the four raised $2,500 to pay for a study setting up the county planning department and Marin's first zoning ordinance in 1935.

The league went on to work for acquiring such state parks as Samuel P. Taylor, Stinson Beach, Tomales Bay and Angel Island, where the highest peak eventually was renamed Mount Caroline S. Livermore.

It also worked for establishment of the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary; Point Reyes National Seashore; Kent Island County Park in Bolinas Lagoon, and the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Today these parks are visited annually by 10 million persons.

Picnickers have been asked to pack lunches and bring their children, according to league officials. Barbecue pits will be ready with hot coals for those wishing to cook out. The island snack bar, which serves sandwiches and beverages will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

There will be entertainment by strolling musicians and free lemonade for children.

Many guests are expected to arrive by private boat. Others may take the Angel Island State Park ferry which travels every 30 minutes between Tiburon and the island from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Style Decrees Skirts But Pants Are Still In

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The arbiters of style decree that this is the year women get out of pants and into skirts.

Whether they succeed in the switch depends not so much on their dictates as on the changes in society involving both sexes. Matter of fact, men might end up in skirts.

This is the viewpoint put forth by fashion historian Moira Johnston.

"It is not just women's limited role that is being challenged but the values and priorities of an entire civilization," says Ms. Johnston. "The barricades phase of this revolution liberation began for women when they put on jeans, hoping by a symbolic "taking-on-of-pants' to absorb male power and privilege by osmosis.

"Armed with the pill, these women fighting a large bank for the right not to wear 'cute' uniforms or take the bank's charm course . . .

"There are some signs though that as soon as basic goals have been achieved, women might not want pants; men might end up in some form of skirt . . .

"Some women are convinced that long skirts can be freer than pants as long as they're not stretched over hoops or dragging coronation trains."

Ms. Johnston's review of style changes through the centuries and the forces that created them is featured in the current issue of the "Journal of Home Economics," official publication of the American Home Economics Association (AHEA). She is based in San Francisco.

She reviews the way women got where they are in dress "for thousands of years women of many cultures have been willing participants in their own mutilation . . . hidden under a cloak of words like fashion, modesty and femininity.

Ms. Johnston writes that, "We have seen pants as male symbols for so long that it's hard for us to grasp the fact that it's a peculiar thing to have happened."

Men have not always worn pants in the rest of the world "for thousands of years the wrapped skirt has draped the hips of men in Egypt, the Middle East, Africa, Southeast Asia and many other regions," she says.

As for today, she continues, "Men are coming to meet women more than halfway as the business suit comes to seem a hollow shell.

"It is the aggressive, trousers-wearing men of science and reason who have brought the world to the brink of environmental and spiritual crisis. Suddenly the so-called 'feminine' characteristics are beginning to look like the answer, not the problem."

Misspent Youth Could Be Aid

A so-called misspent youth may be the most profitable investment a young person can make, according to author James A. Michener. Attributing his career as a writer to a general lack of direction during college years and an unwillingness to "settle down" after that, Michener believes you have until age age 35 to decide finally on what you are going to do, and any exploration you pursue in the end turn out to have been creative.

Yeast Bread Class Planned

A class in yeast bread preparation will be sponsored through the Petaluma Adult Education Department beginning tomorrow night at Rohnert Park Junior High School.

Some Products May Disappear

Americans accustomed to living in the land of plenty need to take another look at their shopping lists and find substitutes for many products. Even items that don't disappear altogether may be hard to find, and the consumer will need ingenuity and patience to come up with alternatives, according to a recent magazine article.

Shoppers will face periodic shortages in food and higher prices; a scarcity of do-it-yourself tools and supplies, and a shortage of wood and paper products, the article said.

Exercise Could Dull Appetite

In contrast to the belief that exercise makes you so hungry that you'll eat more than usual and put on weight, an October Reader's Digest article reveals that physically taxing exercise just before a meal can dull the appetite and cause caloric intake to fall below expenditure.

Quoting the Harvard School of Public Health, the article notes that as little as one half-hour of moderate exercise each day can take off as much as 26 pounds in a year if you don't increase your caloric intake.

Propositions 4 And 8 Qualify For 'Yes, But'

Two of the 17 state propositions on the Nov. 5 ballot belong in the "yes, but" category.

First of the "yes, but" proposals is Proposition 4, which would increase the membership of the University of California board of regents and reduce the regents' terms from 16 to 12 years.

REFORM of the board of regents is long overdue. Sixteen-year terms are ridiculous. But Proposition 4 does not reduce the terms sufficiently, and it muddles things up in other ways.

There are now 24 regents. Proposition 4 would increase the number required to 25, but would allow the regents themselves to add two more. We may be sure there would always be 27.

It adds two governor-appointed members (there are now 16). It removes the presidents of the State Board of Agriculture and the San Francisco Mechanics Institute. It adds the vice president of the U.C. Alumni Association (the president already is a member). And it provides that the regents may, at their own discretion, add one representative each from U.C. faculty and student governments.

It provides for a 13-member advisory committee with whom the governor must consult before making appointments. But it does not require the governor to follow the committee's recommendations.

The over-all effect will be to make the board more unwieldy than it is already. Allowing board appointments of faculty and student members will unbalance the system under which control of institutions of learning is supposed to rest with the public representatives while conduct of the schools, subject to the veto power of these public representatives, is in the hands of the educators.

The saving grace of Proposition 4 is that it cuts the regents terms to 12 years. That is not far enough. We would much prefer to see them cut to eight years, with the number of regents reduced to perhaps 17. We can give Proposition 4 a "yes" only because it is a small, stumbling step in the right direction.

ALSO IN the "yes, but" category is Proposition 8, revising constitutional provisions on property taxation.

It extends the $10,000 exemption for blind veterans and those who have lost their legs or arms to all totally disabled veterans. It extends exemption of church property to rented property used for religious worship. It changes the method of taxing timberlands. It gives the legislature more control over departmental budgets and state investments.

Some of its provisions may result in complicating an already complicated tax law. The extension of church exemptions to rental property, particularly, may result in a flood of exemption applications from so-called churches pretending to worship everything from Satan to the human body.

However, the general improvements contained in Proposition 8 qualify it for a "yes, but" recommendation.

More Japanese Food

Marinites are becoming more and more aware of Japanese food through the markets, and now through several good restaurants. The basics of traditional Japanese cuisine are built around glutinous rice, fish, bean cake, vegetables and seaweed. It is delicately flavored and low in saturated fat. Their diet is assumed to be partly responsible for the relatively low incidence of heart disease among the Japanese.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

'Cut, Trim And Squeeze' —But Government Grows

By EARL G. WATERS

As the administration of Ronald Reagan, governor of California, draws to a close, various assessments as to its success or failure will be advanced.

Reagan, now embarked on a crusade as the conservative voice of the Republican Party with the not-too-well-hidden secret ambition of being a presidential candidate in 1976, lays great claim to having "restored fiscal responsibility" in state government.

He rode into office condemning high taxes and wastefulness in government.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that Reagan meant what he said and had every intention of turning the tide of ever-growing, ever-increasing costly government. His record is now ready for examination.

One measurement is the number of state employees. This had been increasing for many years. The growth was always justified on the basis of population increases. But the state's population has peaked and levelled off and its growth in the past several years has been insignificant. Yet, despite Reagan's "cut, trim and squeeze" policies, there has been a near one-third increase in state workers during Reagan's eight years in office. At the start there were 158,000 employees, including those at the university. This number is now almost 200,000. Even in his own office the staff grew from 87 to 96.

So, in providing services for the people, it has taken nearly a third more employees in the Reagan administration although the population has remained relatively constant. Further, many of the services provided by the state when Reagan took office have since been shifted to local government.

In the matter of state expenditures, the budget when Reagan took office was slightly over $4½ billion. He will leave with a budget in excess of $10 billion.

To provide for this more than 100 per cent increase in state spending, tax collections have been increased from the $3½ billion in 1966 to $9 billion, an almost 300 per cent rise. Bonded indebtedness has grown from $¼ billion to $5½ billion.

In terms of individual burden, taxes have risen from $5.25 per $100 of personal income to $7.43, a 42 per cent increase. Under the previous administration this rise was only 3.5 per cent.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM that the figures demonstrate a shift of the tax burden away from the corporations, banks and insurance companies to direct taxes upon the people. They say that personal income and sales taxes paid only 38 per cent of the cost of government when Reagan took office and that these taxes today provide 62 per cent of that cost.

While increased costs cannot be blamed on population explosions, the inflationary spiral which has taken place, and is continuing, undeniably distorts the comparisons beyond recognition.

One conclusion which can be reached is that the tendency of government to expand defies even the most determined conservative efforts to contain it.

"Give each one a little pad and pencil. Two of them just might agree on something."

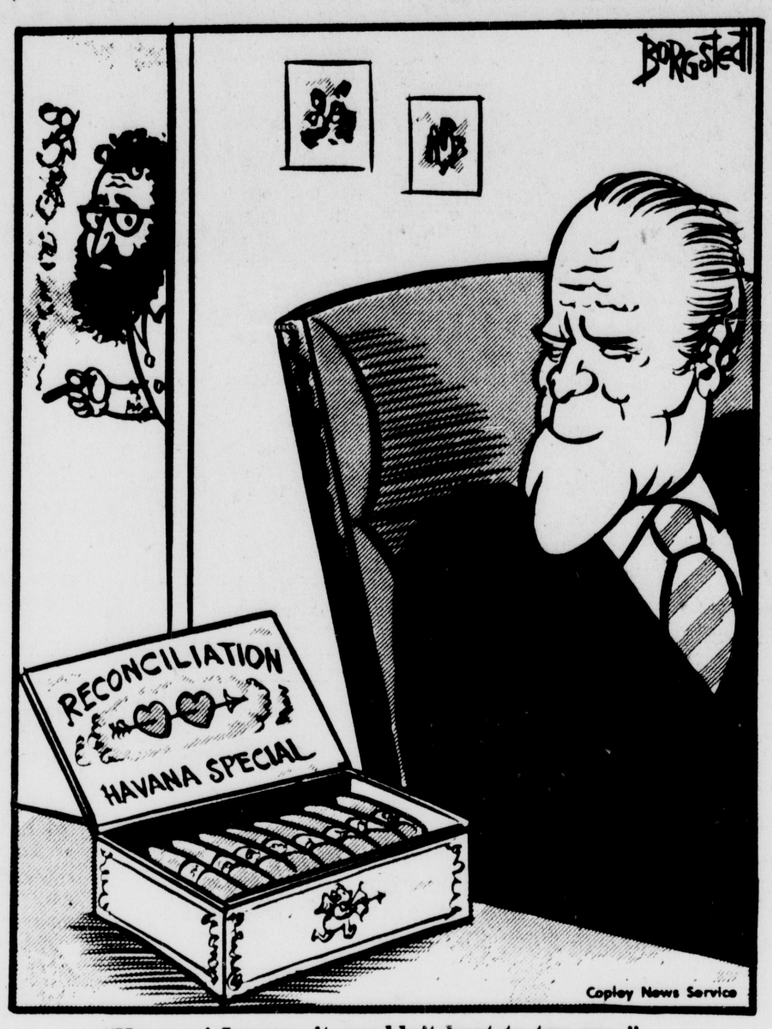
ERNEST B. FURGURSON:

Ford's Pragmatism Assures Recognition Of Cuba

WASHINGTON — If Mr. Ford's actions speak as loud as his words, the long U.S. economic-political boycott of Cuba is about over.

Speculation to this end is common currency by now, fed by Fidel Castro's audience with two visiting senators. But without addressing the question directly, the president himself already has erased the principal stated reason for the 13½ years of unsuccessful effort to freeze Castro out of business.



"Hmmm! I guess it wouldn't hurt to try one."

He did so by conceding that realpolitik still operates in world affairs, and that he subscribes to it. The news was not in the simple fact, but in his public acknowledgment of it.

QUESTION: "Mr. President, recent congressional testimony has indicated that the CIA . . . attempted to destabilize the government of Chile under former President Allende. Is it the policy of your administration to attempt to destabilize the governments of other democracies?"

The President: "Our government, like other governments, does take certain action in the intelligence field to help implement foreign policy and protect natural security. I am informed reliably that Communist nations spend vastly more money than we do for the same kind of purposes. . .

"I am not going to pass judgment on whether it is permitted under international law. It is a recognized fact that historically, as well as presently, such actions are taken in the best interests of the countries involved."

Historically, the reasons for the Eisenhower administration to break off relations with Cuba as one of its last diplomatic moves (Jan. 3, 1961) included political executions, Castro's failure to hold elections, verbal attacks on the United States, confiscation of U.S. property, and praise of communism.

But lately, Washington's rationale has been that Castro was pledged to spread communism by subversion in the Western Hemisphere, and that to prevent such subversion we were obliged to keep him in isolation.

NOW MR. FORD has admitted openly, in his press conference, that the United States itself played the game in Chile and obviously intends to go on playing it where appropriate, regardless of whether it is legal.

That removes the last external pretext for continuing the would-be freeze. If our foreign policy were ruled by consistency, developments elsewhere would have demanded long ago that it be ended.

Political executions? Failure to hold elections? Verbal attacks on the United States? Confiscation of U.S. property? Praise of communism? There is too little space to list all the embassies in Washington representing countries where such erstwhile outrages are standard procedure.

And as Mr. Ford implies, anyone aspiring to political subversion in foreign lands has far more to learn about big-time operations in Moscow, Peking — and Washington — than in Havana.

Beyond all this, now it is the United States rather than Cuba that is in danger of embarrassing isolation on this issue. Other members of the Organization of American States have voted overwhelmingly to meet in Quito next month to review its sanctions of the past decade. The United States, facing the trend, voted with the majority.

SO WHAT IS HOLDING up restoration of more or less normal economic and diplomatic relations between Washington and Havana?

First of all, Castro himself. He needs American trade, but he has proven he can exist without it. He is determiend that when the change is made, it will appear to the Cubans that he has been the victor. He wants the move, but he will not move first.

The other constraint is domestic politics in our country. But Mr. Ford has none of Nixon's personal animosity toward Castro; he knows the votes of Cuban exiles in Florida matter less to him in 1976 than the mass of swing votes elsewhere, and he knows if the GOP right could reconcile itself to recognition of China, it surely will not abandon him over the little island of Cuba.

So now it is not a matter of whether, just a matter of when.

Omissions, Distortions Alleged In Report

Paul Cane's account (I-J, Oct. 3) of the debate between developer, Thomas Schaal and George Silvestri, Jr., representing Marin Heritage, at Thursday morning's meeting of the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League contained several erroneous and/or misleading statements or ommissions.

In the interest of brevity I will simply list them.

1. Mr. Cane makes no mention of George Silvestri whatsoever. George was invited specifically by the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League to represent Marin Heritage in the debate with Thomas Schaal. Mary Dekker, whose work in historic preservation is well known and impressive, was on hand simply to present historical and architectural background.

2. The word "quaint" in reference to the Dollar Estate was not used by anybody at any time during the meeting. Is editorial comment in an article purportedly reporting facts good journalism?

3. Mr. Cane implies, by quoting City Mgr. William Bielser out of context, that the city does not know what they want to do with the Dollar property. The ballot argument for Proposition G states a series of uses including historic, cultural and recreational and since the mayor and entire city council signed the ballot argument it is unlikely that the city has no plans for the use of it . . .

Version Of What Mayor Blinder Said

I am writing you in response to Mayor (Martin G.) Blinder's request. I was most disappointed in your misquote of Blinder's words.

What he said was (council would have complete verbatim notes): "The history of drug law enforcement has no evidence of reducing the number of users. It is not like an old-fashioned epidemic where you can send out men in white suits with penicillin. It is like applying penicillin when you need tetracycline —totally ineffective.

"Therefore, I question the effectiveness of having drug laws at all for the law enforcement agencies become corrupted — as they did in prohibition.

"We could wipe out the wholesalers by giving out drugs through government as they do in England. There they have a lower rate of users than we do and about a 1 per cent rate of the crime increase. It would cost about $100 a year for heroin addicts. Opiates are cheaper than aspirin.

"I propose that San Anselmo go on record for decriminilization of drug abuse." Please note: He did not say, as you indicated in your editorial, "The remarkable suggestion by S.A. Mayor Blinder that all enforcement of laws against narcotics be abandoned." . . .

He said he is not against laws that punish dealers who are often totally amoral profiteers but for decriminilization of drug abuse for the proposed program ruins people, aggravates the problem, e.g. one-time users.

We Need More Men Like Mayor Bettini

Your glaring "San Rafael Mayor Linked to Conflict" headline and its subsequent article by Nels Johnson is a complete affront to a man who has done so much and given so much to San Rafael.

Having been a voter in San Rafael for some 14 years, I have always found Mr. Bettini to be just what a recent reader of yours suggested in his letter to the editor (Oct. 3) and I quote: "We must search out men of high moral principles and proven good character to run our affairs, or our system of government will be destroyed." Mr. Bettini is just that.

The Bettini family is not one that has "just moved" to San Rafael. The family is part of our city, pioneers at heart and the only "conflict of interest" is with those who through lies and by innuendoes are trying to destroy what our forefathers have worked so hard to build. This also includes the I-J. I am certain that the past generation of the Browns and Creamers would certainly not condone the type of reporting and distortion of true facts by our present I-J editorial staff.

Let us not discourage men of Mr. Bettini's caliber to avoid seeking public office. We need more men like him who have the intestinal fortitude to vote for what they think is best for their constitutents and for the good of the community as a whole, not to appease any political group or any other special segment of our society, be they businessmen or otherwise; a man who will not hide behind the cloak of abstinence; a man who lets the entire community know what he believes in and how he feels about the issue; a man without fear of contradiction; a man who is honest.

Mr. Johnson, et al, pray that San Rafael will have more men like Mr. Bettini in the future so that we, of San Rafael, can be assured that "our system of government will not be destroyed."

JOSEPH A. SACCONE

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

The GOP soon will have had three vice presidents in less than a year. For what it's worth, no other party can make that statement.

Economists don't seem to be the answer. We may need a tough army sergeant to look inflation in the eye and give it a direct order: "To the rear . . . MARCH!"

George McGovern saved money from his presidential campaign to finance his race for senator. If he loses this one, maybe he'll have enough left over to run for sheriff.

Girls' names are used for hurricanes because they have individuality. Who wants tropical storms that blow in like every Tom, Dick and Harry?

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Wallace Now In Key Position Among Democratic Hopefuls

Edward Kennedy's withdrawal opens the Democratic Party's presidential nomination to all comers.

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is the most formidable contender at this stage. He has a substantial, dedicated national following, and he will have a large bloc of delegates.

If he wins the nomination, this will split the Democratic Party wide open. If he is denied both first and second place on the ticket, he can split the party wide open by running as an independent.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota will be major primary contenders. If most Democrats want to go to the political left, Mondale is their man. If they want to return the party to the political center, Jackson fits neatly.

DID NIXON TOPPLE SENATOR KENNEDY? In wide circulation today there are two contentions which are misleading:

One is that the press hounded President Nixon from office. Leave off the last two words and it would be accurate, but it was Nixon's own actions which took him from the presidency.

The other is that Senator Kennedy's decision not to run was forced by Watergate and Nixon's forced resignation. No. It was forced in part by the continuing political impact of Chappaquiddick.

STATE OF THE ECONOMY: THE LONGER VIEW. This is the view taken by Ben Wattenberg in his new book, "The Real America." He sees a "tidal wave" of affluent young couples getting married and forming new families. This, the author concludes, will push the U.S. economy to unprecedented growth in the next 10 years.

MORE CRIME DATA — ALL BAD. Here are additional facts:

—While violent crime increased 16 per cent during the first three months of this year, it increased 47 per cent during the last five years and more than 200 per cent from 1960 to 1973.

—Arrests for violent crimes are very uneven. For murder, the percentage is high — 79 per cent. But for aggravated assault it is 63 per cent; for rape, 51 per cent, and for robbery only 27 per cent.

—Surveys show that up to 50 per cent of the nation's street crime is committed by only 15 per cent of the offenders. This is why the focus of federal and state police is on the "career criminal."

BUSINESSMEN ON CONSUMERISM. They like it, or if they don't, they accept it as inevitable. This is the conclusion of a survey by the Harvard Business Review which reports:

"Consumerism is here to stay. The traditional 'buyer beware' philosophy of the marketplace is fast eroding. Businessmen see consumerism as leading to major modifications in advertising content that will make it more truthful."

GENERAL HAIG AT NATO. He will be an asset. The job is diplomatic and political as well as military. Not since General Eisenhower has NATO had a supreme commander who could get the President of the United States or the secretary of state on the phone at will.

Step In Right Direction: Combination Train-Bus Tickets

(Reprinted from Milwaukee Journal)

Here is a ceasefire worth noting. Greyhound and Amtrak have thawed their frigid relations and agreed to offer combination bus-rail tickets to their passengers.

The public will benefit. Beginning this fall, passengers will be able to buy tickets straight through to cities not served by Amtrak, rather than having to attempt their own arrangements. At first it will apply only to the most popular destinations, but the service is expected to be expanded to thousands of smaller communities.

Amtrak and Greyhound may benefit, too, if travelers are lured out of their automobiles by effective joint service. That will require sincere cooperation between competing modes of transportation, which is a worthy goal in itself.

REMEMBER WHEN?

Oct. 7, 1964

The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Yankees 9-to-5 in the opening game of baseball's World Series.

20 YEARS AGO

Oct. 7, 1954

The Mill Valley City Council discussed amending the zoning ordinance to require a use permit for any construction on the city's marshlands.

E. L. Cook, described as "czar of vice and crime" in Phenix City, Ala., was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder in the first criminal case resulting from a drive to clean up the notorious "sin city."

WILL ROGERS SAYS . . .

"It's a joke to see a homer in some of these ballparks, it ruins the whole interest in the game. It does look like that as big a game as baseball is, and as much money as they make, they would be able to have a regulation playing field, the same size all over.

"You don't see them cutting off the end of a tennis court to put in more stands, so why can't baseball have a regulation size field? Then, if a man got a home run he would know he deserved it, and everybody would have an equal chance on every field." — Oct. 12, 1924.

Propositions 4 And 8 Qualify For 'Yes, But'

Two of the 17 state propositions on the Nov. 5 ballot belong in the "yes, but" category.

First of the "yes, but" proposals is Proposition 4, which would increase the membership of the University of California board of regents and reduce the regents' terms from 16 to 12 years.

REFORM of the board of regents is long overdue. Sixteen-year terms are ridiculous. But Proposition 4 does not reduce the terms sufficiently, and it muddles things up in other ways.

There are now 24 regents. Proposition 4 would increase the number required to 25, but would allow the regents themselves to add two more. We may be sure there would always be 27.

It adds two governor-appointed members (there are now 16). It removes the presidents of the State Board of Agriculture and the San Francisco Mechanics Institute. It adds the vice president of the U.C. Alumni Association (the president already is a member). And it provides that the regents may, at their own discretion, add one representative each from U.C. faculty and student governments.

It provides for a 13-member advisory committee with whom the governor must consult before making appointments. But it does not require the governor to follow the committee's recommendations.

The over-all effect will be to make the board more unwieldy than it is already. Allowing board appointments of faculty and student members will unbalance the system under which control of institutions of learning is supposed to rest with the public representatives while conduct of the schools, subject to the veto power of these public representatives, is in the hands of the educators.

The saving grace of Proposition 4 is that it cuts the regents terms to 12 years. That is not far enough. We would much prefer to see them cut to eight years, with the number of regents reduced to perhaps 17. We can give Proposition 4 a "yes" only because it is a small, stumbling step in the right direction.

ALSO IN the "yes, but" category is Proposition 8, revising constitutional provisions on property taxation.

It extends the $10,000 exemption for blind veterans and those who have lost their legs or arms to all totally disabled veterans. It extends exemption of church property to rented property used for religious worship. It changes the method of taxing timberlands. It gives the legislature more control over departmental budgets and state investments.

Some of its provisions may result in complicating an already complicated tax law. The extension of church exemptions to rental property, particularly, may result in a flood of exemption applications from so-called churches pretending to worship everything from Satan to the human body.

However, the general improvements contained in Proposition 8 qualify it for a "yes, but" recommendation.

More Japanese Food

Marinites are becoming more and more aware of Japanese food through the markets, and now through several good restaurants. The basics of traditional Japanese cuisine are built around glutinous rice, fish, bean cake, vegetables and seaweed. It is delicately flavored and low in saturated fat. Their diet is assumed to be partly responsible for the relatively low incidence of heart disease among the Japanese.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

'Cut, Trim And Squeeze' —But Government Grows

By EARL G. WATERS

As the administration of Ronald Reagan, governor of California, draws to a close, various assessments as to its success or failure will be advanced.

Reagan, now embarked on a crusade as the conservative voice of the Republican Party with the not-too-well-hidden secret ambition of being a presidential candidate in 1976, lays great claim to having "restored fiscal responsibility" in state government.

He rode into office condemning high taxes and wastefulness in government.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that Reagan meant what he said and had every intention of turning the tide of ever-growing, ever-increasing costly government. His record is now ready for examination.

One measurement is the number of state employees. This had been increasing for many years. The growth was always justified on the basis of population increases. But the state's population has peaked and levelled off and its growth in the past several years has been insignificant. Yet, despite Reagan's "cut, trim and squeeze" policies, there has been a near one-third increase in state workers during Reagan's eight years in office. At the start there were 158,000 employees, including those at the university. This number is now almost 200,000. Even in his own office the staff grew from 87 to 96.

So, in providing services for the people, it has taken nearly a third more employees in the Reagan administration although the population has remained relatively constant. Further, many of the services provided by the state when Reagan took office have since been shifted to local government.

In the matter of state expenditures, the budget when Reagan took office was slightly over $4½ billion. He will leave with a budget in excess of $10 billion.

To provide for this more than 100 per cent increase in state spending, tax collections have been increased from the $3½ billion in 1966 to $9 billion, an almost 300 per cent rise. Bonded indebtedness has grown from $¼ billion to $5½ billion.

In terms of individual burden, taxes have risen from $5.25 per $100 of personal income to $7.43, a 42 per cent increase. Under the previous administration this rise was only 3.5 per cent.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM that the figures demonstrate a shift of the tax burden away from the corporations, banks and insurance companies to direct taxes upon the people. They say that personal income and sales taxes paid only 38 per cent of the cost of government when Reagan took office and that these taxes today provide 62 per cent of that cost.

While increased costs cannot be blamed on population explosions, the inflationary spiral which has taken place, and is continuing, undeniably distorts the comparisons beyond recognition.

One conclusion which can be reached is that the tendency of government to expand defies even the most determined conservative efforts to contain it.

"Give each one a little pad and pencil. Two of them just might agree on something."

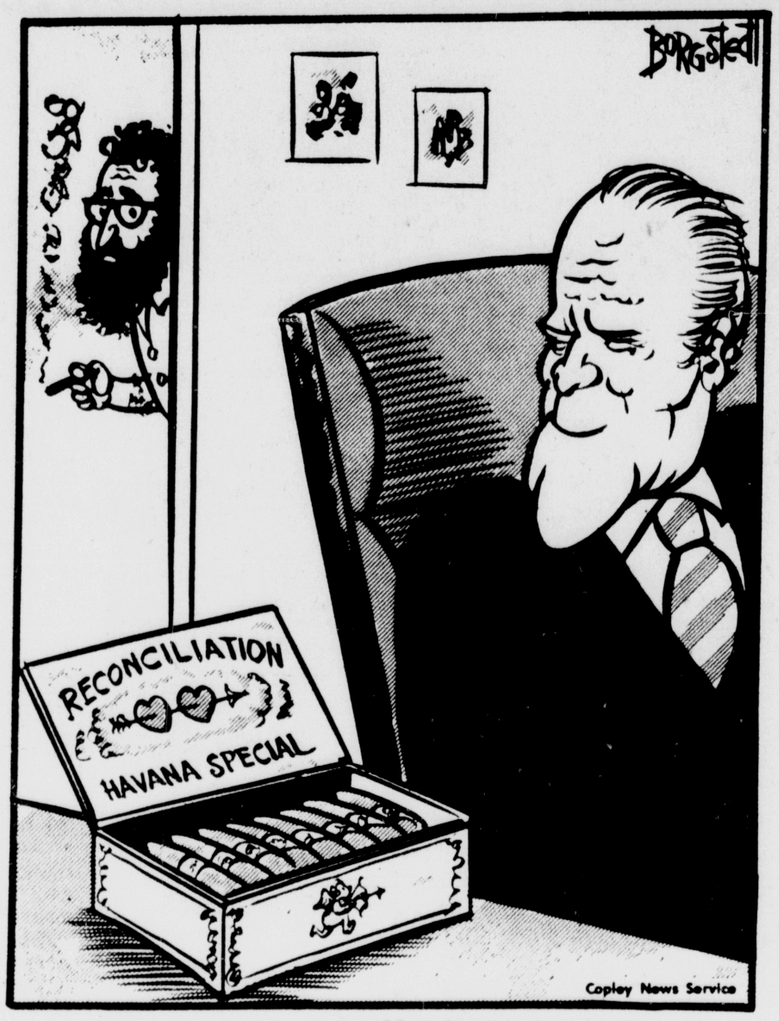
ERNEST B. FURGURSON:

Ford's Pragmatism Assures Recognition Of Cuba

WASHINGTON — If Mr. Ford's actions speak as loud as his words, the long U.S. economic-political boycott of Cuba is about over.

Speculation to this end is common currency by now, fed by Fidel Castro's audience with two visiting senators. But without addressing the question directly, the president himself already has erased the principal stated reason for the 13½ years of unsuccessful effort to freeze Castro out of business.



"Hmmm! I guess it wouldn't hurt to try one."

He did so by conceding that realpolitik still operates in world affairs, and that he subscribes to it. The news was not in the simple fact, but in his public acknowledgment of it.

QUESTION: "Mr. President, recent congressional testimony has indicated that the CIA . . . attempted to destabilize the government of Chile under former President Allende. Is it the policy of your administration to attempt to destabilize the governments of other democracies?"

The President: "Our government, like other governments, does take certain action in the intelligence field to help implement foreign policy and protect natural security. I am informed reliably that Communist nations spend vastly more money than we do for the same kind of purposes. . .

"I am not going to pass judgment on whether it is permitted under international law. It is a recognized fact that historically, as well as presently, such actions are taken in the best interests of the countries involved."

Historically, the reasons for the Eisenhower administration to break off relations with Cuba as one of its last diplomatic moves (Jan. 3, 1961) included political executions, Castro's failure to hold elections, verbal attacks on the United States, confiscation of U.S. property, and praise of communism.

But lately, Washington's rationale has been that Castro was pledged to spread communism by subversion in the Western Hemisphere, and that to prevent such subversion we were obliged to keep him in isolation.

NOW MR. FORD has admitted openly, in his press conference, that the United States itself played the game in Chile and obviously intends to go on playing it where appropriate, regardless of whether it is legal.

That removes the last external pretext for continuing the would-be freeze. If our foreign policy were ruled by consistency, developments elsewhere would have demanded long ago that it be ended.

Political executions? Failure to hold elections? Verbal attacks on the United States? Confiscation of U.S. property? Praise of communism? There is too little space to list all the embassies in Washington representing countries where such erstwhile outrages are standard procedure.

And as Mr. Ford implies, anyone aspiring to political subversion in foreign lands has far more to learn about big-time operations in Moscow, Peking — and Washington — than in Havana.

Beyond all this, now it is the United States rather than Cuba that is in danger of embarrassing isolation on this issue. Other members of the Organization of American States have voted overwhelmingly to meet in Quito next month to review its sanctions of the past decade. The United States, facing the trend, voted with the majority.

SO WHAT IS HOLDING up restoration of more or less normal economic and diplomatic relations between Washington and Havana?

First of all, Castro himself. He needs American trade, but he has proven he can exist without it. He is determiend that when the change is made, it will appear to the Cubans that he has been the victor. He wants the move, but he will not move first.

The other constraint is domestic politics in our country. But Mr. Ford has none of Nixon's personal animosity toward Castro; he knows the votes of Cuban exiles in Florida matter less to him in 1976 than the mass of swing votes elsewhere, and he knows if the GOP right could reconcile itself to recognition of China, it surely will not abandon him over the little island of Cuba.

So now it is not a matter of whether, just a matter of when.

Omissions, Distortions Alleged In Report

Paul Cane's account (I-J, Oct. 3) of the debate between developer, Thomas Schaal and George Silvestri, Jr., representing Marin Heritage, at Thursday morning's meeting of the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League contained several erroneous and/or misleading statements or ommissions.

In the interest of brevity I will simply list them.

1. Mr. Cane makes no mention of George Silvestri whatsoever. George was invited specifically by the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League to represent Marin Heritage in the debate with Thomas Schaal. Mary Dekker, whose work in historic preservation is well known and impressive, was on hand simply to present historical and architectural background.

2. The word "quaint" in reference to the Dollar Estate was not used by anybody at any time during the meeting. Is editorial comment in an article purportedly reporting facts good journalism?

3. Mr. Cane implies, by quoting City Mgr. William Bielser out of context, that the city does not know what they want to do with the Dollar property. The ballot argument for Proposition G states a series of uses including historic, cultural and recreational and since the mayor and entire city council signed the ballot argument it is unlikely that the city has no plans for the use of it . . .

Version Of What Mayor Blinder Said

I am writing you in response to Mayor (Martin G.) Blinder's request. I was most disappointed in your misquote of Blinder's words.

What he said was (council would have complete verbatim notes): "The history of drug law enforcement has no evidence of reducing the number of users. It is not like an old-fashioned epidemic where you can send out men in white suits with penicillin. It is like applying penicillin when you need tetracycline —totally ineffective.

"Therefore, I question the effectiveness of having drug laws at all for the law enforcement agencies become corrupted — as they did in prohibition.

"We could wipe out the wholesalers by giving out drugs through government as they do in England. There they have a lower rate of users than we do and about a 1 per cent rate of the crime increase. It would cost about $100 a year for heroin addicts. Opiates are cheaper than aspirin.

"I propose that San Anselmo go on record for decriminilization of drug abuse." Please note: He did not say, as you indicated in your editorial, "The remarkable suggestion by S.A. Mayor Blinder that all enforcement of laws against narcotics be abandoned." . . .

He said he is not against laws that punish dealers who are often totally amoral profiteers but for decriminilization of drug abuse for the proposed program ruins people, aggravates the problem, e.g. one-time users.

We Need More Men Like Mayor Bettini

Your glaring "San Rafael Mayor Linked to Conflict" headline and its subsequent article by Nels Johnson is a complete affront to a man who has done so much and given so much to San Rafael.

Having been a voter in San Rafael for some 14 years, I have always found Mr. Bettini to be just what a recent reader of yours suggested in his letter to the editor (Oct. 3) and I quote: "We must search out men of high moral principles and proven good character to run our affairs, or our system of government will be destroyed." Mr. Bettini is just that.

The Bettini family is not one that has "just moved" to San Rafael. The family is part of our city, pioneers at heart and the only "conflict of interest" is with those who through lies and by innuendoes are trying to destroy what our forefathers have worked so hard to build. This also includes the I-J. I am certain that the past generation of the Browns and Creamers would certainly not condone the type of reporting and distortion of true facts by our present I-J editorial staff.

Let us not discourage men of Mr. Bettini's caliber to avoid seeking public office. We need more men like him who have the intestinal fortitude to vote for what they think is best for their constitutents and for the good of the community as a whole, not to appease any political group or any other special segment of our society, be they businessmen or otherwise; a man who will not hide behind the cloak of abstinence; a man who lets the entire community know what he believes in and how he feels about the issue; a man without fear of contradiction; a man who is honest.

Mr. Johnson, et al, pray that San Rafael will have more men like Mr. Bettini in the future so that we, of San Rafael, can be assured that "our system of government will not be destroyed."

CAPITOL QUIPS

The GOP soon will have had three vice presidents in less than a year. For what it's worth, no other party can make that statement.

Economists don't seem to be the answer. We may need a tough army sergeant to look inflation in the eye and give it a direct order: "To the rear . . . MARCH!"

Wallace Now In Key Position Among Democratic Hopefuls

Edward Kennedy's withdrawal opens the Democratic Party's presidential nomination to all comers.

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is the most formidable contender at this stage. He has a substantial, dedicated national following, and he will have a large bloc of delegates.

If he wins the nomination, this will split the Democratic Party wide open. If he is denied both first and second place on the ticket, he can split the party wide open by running as an independent.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota will be major primary contenders. If most Democrats want to go to the political left, Mondale is their man. If they want to return the party to the political center, Jackson fits neatly.

DID NIXON TOPPLE SENATOR KENNEDY? In wide circulation today there are two contentions which are misleading:

One is that the press hounded President Nixon from office. Leave off the last two words and it would be accurate, but it was Nixon's own actions which took him from the presidency.

The other is that Senator Kennedy's decision not to run was forced by Watergate and Nixon's forced resignation. No. It was forced in part by the continuing political impact of Chappaquiddick.

STATE OF THE ECONOMY: THE LONGER VIEW. This is the view taken by Ben Wattenberg in his new book, "The Real America." He sees a "tidal wave" of affluent young couples getting married and forming new families. This, the author concludes, will push the U.S. economy to unprecedented growth in the next 10 years.

Irish Travel Film Slated Oct. 21

"Ireland," a feature-length color travel film, will be shown Oct. 21 at 8:15 p.m. in Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center in San Rafael.

It will be narrated by its producer, Chris Borden, former San Francisco radio personality and announcing school owner, who sold his business in 1965 to devote fulltime to producing travel films.

The film was shot in Dublin, Galway, Donegal, Cork, Bantry Bay, Killarney, Glendalough and small villages. Its highlight is segments of a 360-mile boat trip on the Shannon River from Limerick to the border of Northern Ireland.

Singers Solo

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Animals no longer can get into the act at the Cincinnati Summer Opera. For 51 years the opera was staged in a pavilion at the zoo, where caged animals often howled along with the singer. Programs now are performed at the downtown Music Hall.

The film is the first of seven to be shown at the Civic Center by Explorama of San Francisco. Others, whose dates have not been set, are: "Europe's Mini Countries" (Monaco, Andorra, San Marino, Liechtenstein); "Switzerland Today," "Inside Passage to Alaska," "Romance of Romania," "Norway" and "Magic of Venice."

Tickets cost $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for children, and a season ticket for all seven films costs $19.50. They are available from the theater box office, the Holiday Inn in San Rafael, Macy's and Explorama, 609 Sutter Street, San Francisco.

Increasing Addiction To Heroin Seen

The chairman of the House health subcommittee holding the hearings warned of another period of hard drug use "which may well surpass the nightmares of the early '70s."

Dr. Robert DuPont, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention, reported "an unexpected increase in heroin addiction in some smaller cities like Macon, Ga.; Des Moines, Iowa, and Jackson, Miss.," in recent months.

"This has led us to speculate that drug use radiates out from the major population centers, and can be expected to hit some smaller cities, and eventually perhaps even some rural areas, after a reasonably predictable time lag," DuPont told the subcommittee.

Committee Chairman Paul Rogers, D-Fla., opened the oversight hearings on drug abuse by reporting what he said were dramatic figures indicating the national epidemic of drug use, including heroin, opium and cocaine, is having a resurgence.

Rogers said one report indicated the number of heroin addicts has increased from 300,000-350,000 earlier this year to 600,000-800,000.

New York City Ballet Dancers To Appear In Marin Oct. 19

Two young principal dancers with the New York City Ballet will appear with the Marin Civic Ballet at 8 p.m. Oct. 19 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building in San Rafael.

They are Kay Mazzo and Helgi Tomasson. They will appear in Tchaikovsky's, "Pas de Deux" and John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes." Both were choreographed by George Balanchine.

Miss Mazzo was born in Chicago and received her training there and New York City. When she was 9 years old, she danced in "The Nutcracker" with the New York City Ballet. She became soloist in 1965 with the company and principal dancer in 1969.

Tomasson was born in Reykjavik, Iceland, and started ballet studies at the age of 10, the only boy in the dance school of the National Theater of Reykjavik. He studied at the School of American Ballet. He danced with the Robert Joffrey Ballet in a cross-country tour. Later he joined the Harkness Ballet.

In June 1969, he represented the United States in the first International Ballet Competition in Moscow, competing with 77 other dancers from 19 countries, placing second in the solo division.

Tickets for the program, which includes the world premiere of "Tape Suite" choreographed by Ruthanna Boris, are $4 to $6 and may be obtained at the Marin Veterans Memorial Box Office, Macy's and all Bay Area agencies.

Disclosure Time Is Coming For Other Office-Holders

If any local politican sighed with relief last week over not having to disclose specific sources of income, he will be in for a rude awakening come January.

That's when Proposition 9, approved 3-to-1 by state voters in June, becomes law.

The new law requires attorneys and brokers to list clients from whom they received more than $1,000 in income.

It thus blocks a part of the loophole in the existing disclosure law which many politicians squeezed through last week.

THE PROPOSITION does not fully define what a "broker" is, but it appears likely that three of the five supervisors, for example, will have to file fuller disclosure reports.

Supervisor Gary Giacomini, an attorney, is covered by Proposition 9. He claims his law practice has dwindled to practically nothing because of the time he spends as a supervisor. He said he would be hard pressed to think of a client who paid $1,000.

Peter R. Arrigoni, vice president of a San Francisco stock brokerage, presumably would be considered a broker under the law, which County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said he will interpret "as broadly as possible."

In his financial statement last week, Arrigoni gave a detailed accounting of his own stocks but not a word on his income from individual clients.

Robert A. Roumiguiere is part owner of a San Rafael real estate firm and also would presumably be considered a broker.

It's a little fuzzier for Arnold Baptiste, who works in estate planning and financial consulting. Maloney said the law may apply to Baptiste if he or the firm he works for is active in investing for clients.

Michael Wornum, according to the county counsel, probably won't be required to file additional information. An architect by profession, he listed his main outside income as rental properties and teaching fees.

ON A RELATED MATTER, the watered-down disclosures filed last week provide some interesting insights into several of the county planning commissioners.

The commission's leading conservationist, Jerry Friedman, reported holdings in such firms as Standard Oil, Gulf Oil, International Harvester, Pacific Gas and Electric and Alcan Aluminum.

A couple of the commission's old timers, Margaret Azevedo and Rebecca Watkin, who, at times, comes on like Mother Nature, listed substantial holdings in companies like Caterpillar-Tractor, Pacific Gas and Electric, Texaco, General Motors and Allied Chemical. Mrs. Azevedo also leases land to a duck club.

Bill Long, one of the more liberal commissioners showed stock in International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT), American Telephone and Telegraph (ATT), Chase Manhattan Corp., Exxon Corp., and International Business Machines (IBM), among others.

Traveling With Rockefeller Is Smooth Ride On Private Jet

NEW YORK (UPI) — Traveling with Nelson Rockefeller makes first class look cheap.

A half dozen long black limousines rolled through the streets of Manhattan before dawn last week, picking up their sleepy passengers and heading for the airport. Rockefeller was on the move.

The cars wheeled up to the private air terminal. Rockefeller was the last to arrive. He stepped out of his car, as if on cue, just as his $4.5 million Grumman Gulfstream jet rolled to the gate, engines roaring, ready for takeoff.

The three-man crew, four reporters, four Rockefeller aides, six Secret Servicemen and the vice president designate went aboard.

Within minutes the plane was airborne for a quick speech at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, then on to San Francisco for a speech to the UPI editors and publishers annual meeting.

The interior is more like a living room than an airplane, with big swivel reclining chairs and small couches, a well-stocked bar and a crew of three wooed away from major airlines, including a steward who serves from a mini-kitchen.

The plane travels about 100 knots faster than commercial jetliners. It is one of three jets owned by the Rockefellers and kept ready for their use.

Normally the Secret Service doesn't approve of the officials it protects taking private or chartered airlines. "Normally, chartered jets don't meet our standards for checkups and safety," said one agent. "This plane — no problem — it's in better shape than Air Force One."

The landing strip at Provo is a bit short, but no major problem for the pilot, who lands smoothly, then slams on the brakes.

After the speech, the steward brings Rockefeller his standard drink, a Dubonnet on the rocks with a twist.

The former New York governor is a light drinker, sticking to wine and seldom having more than two glasses. He beckoned reporters to join him.

The landing an hour later in San Francisco is so smooth the plane practically coasts to a stop.

At 5 a.m. the next morning, the Rockefeller team is on the move again — an early flight to get the nominee back to Washington for a luncheon.

Five hours later, a reporter compliments Rockefeller on the flight, and another asks him if after he is confirmed he will use a Convair — the somewhat outdated and much slower prop-jet used as Air Force Two.

He makes a face. "We used those back in 1960 — or was it 1950?"

Kissinger Received $50,000 Rocky Gift

NEW YORK (UPI) — The State Department has confirmed that vice-presidential nominee Nelson Rockefeller gave Henry Kissinger a $50,000 gift in 1969 in appreciation for his services as a foreign affairs adviser.

Paul Hare, a department spokesman, said Saturday the gift was received after Kissinger left Rockefeller's staff but before he became former President Richard Nixon's national security adviser.

"Before accepting it, Dr. Kissinger discussed this with the then President-elect and his counsel," Hare said.

"Dr. Kissinger put the $50,000 into trusts for his two children and filed gift tax returns covering these gifts to the children."

"He understood that Governor Rockefeller filed a gift tax return on the gift to him," he said.

Hugh Morrow, a spokesman for Rockefeller, said the former governor told Kissinger in a letter dated Jan. 17, 1969, "As a token of my friendship and appreciation for the work you have done in service to the people of this country I am arranging to have a gift made to you in the amount of $50,000."

Morrow also confirmed that Rockefeller made a $86,312.50 gift to former state official L. Judson Morehouse and a gift of an undisclosed amount to Dr. William Ronan, chairman of the Port Authority and former head of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority.

Morehouse was sentenced to prison in 1966 on bribery and other charges in connection with a scandal in the New York Liquor Authority.

His sentence was commuted by Rockefeller for medical reasons, the former governor said during his recent nomination hearings.

Morrow said the gift to Morehouse last December represented cancellation of the remainder of a $100,000 loan made in September, 1960.

He said Rockefeller loaned the money to Morehouse, who served as state Republican party chairman from 1954 until 1962, so Morehouse could invest the money and have an income, since the chairmanship was an unsalaried position.

Morrow said the Ronan gift represented a cancellation of personal notes, but did not elaborate.

The State Department comments on the Kissinger gift came in response to reports that the Senate Rules Committee had asked Rockefeller for an explanation.

The committee completed its public hearings on the nomination but has not yet voted on whether to recommend it to the full Senate.

Dempsey's Restaurant Shuts Down In New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Dempsey, the former world heavyweight champion, was kayoed last night in his fight to keep his 40-year-old restaurant open. His partner ruled out a rematch.

"I'm heartbroken and I'm disgusted," Dempsey said. "This is my second home and I've lost it. But what can you do?"

After acquiring the Brill Building when the original owners forfeited on the mortgage, Inch tried to raise the rent, even though Jack Amiel, Dempsey's partner, said the lease had seven years to run.

The lease called for $85,000 yearly rent, including taxes, but the Inch Corp. asked $130,000 a year, plus taxes, Amiel said.

"It's a sad thing," Amiel said. "This place has been here so many years and it's world famous. It's a sad thing.

"We were the only place left on Broadway that's a good, fine place with a touch of the old time," Amiel said.

Amiel said he and Dempsey would not open another restaurant. "To start from scratch again would take too much time and too much money," he said.

Dempsey, 79, who became champion when he whipped Jess Willard 55 years ago, opened his original restaurant more than 40 years ago across from the old Madison Square Garden on Eighth Avenue. He moved to the Brill Building in 1947.

While Amiel ran the business end of the restaurant, Dempsey served as host and greeted patrons on most nights.

Dempsey was by for a few hours last night, saying goodby to his customers. "He had tears in his eyes," Amiel said.

GRAPE FESTIVAL ATTRACTS MOB

Throngs of people jam the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, site of Saturday's annual Sunny Hills Grape Festival, where huge displays of balloons massed like bunches of grapes adorned the hall. Outside were additional booths. Chairman Edna Frush of Greenbrae said the festival attendance and receipts were the largest in the 75-year history of the event, but the exact figures were not available. Some products, like the jars of chutney, were so popular they were sold out within an hour.

Conservationists To Be Honored At Public Picnic

Bay Area conservationists will hold a public picnic on Angel Island Saturday to honor the founding of the Marin Conservation League 40 years ago and the four Marin women who launched the league.

The picnic, beginning at noon and ending at 4 p.m. on a knoll above Ayala Cove, will climax a two-month membership drive held by the league to commemorate its anniversary.

About 4,500 invitations to the picnic were mailed out, according to league President Robert F. Raab of San Anselmo, but anyone may attend. Representatives from federal, state and local government are expected.

Ceremonies will begin at 2 p.m. with an address by the event's chairman, Putnam Livermore, son of one of the league founders, the late Caroline (Mrs. Norman B.) Livermore. He will talk on his boyhood memories of the founders.

Then a group of large-leafed maple trees will be planted as a special "Founders' Grove" on the hillside above Ayala Cove. A plaque at the Grove will give the names of the founders: Mrs. Livermore; the late Mrs. Helen Van Pelt and Mrs. Portia (John F.) Forbes, and Mrs. Sepha (Albert J.) Evers, now of San Francisco.

Mrs. Evers, now in her 80s, will attend.

The grove's first four trees will be put in the ground by the founders' sons: Livermore; David Van Pelt of Nicasio, a Marin County planning consultant and former league director; William D. Evers, a San Francisco attorney and chairman of the state Bay Conservation and Development Commission, and John D. Forbes, a professor at the University of Virginia.

During the ceremonies, league officials will receive a State Senate resolution commending the league and a framed commendation from the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

The league was founded in 1934 as the Marin Planning Survey Committee by the four women who were concerned then about the effect of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge on sparsely populated Marin.

With fellow workers, the four raised $2,500 to pay for a study setting up the county planning department and Marin's first zoning ordinance in 1935.

The league went on to work for acquiring such state parks as Samuel P. Taylor, Stinson Beach, Tomales Bay and Angel Island, where the highest peak eventually was renamed Mount Caroline S. Livermore.

It also worked for establishment of the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary; Point Reyes National Seashore; Kent Island County Park in Bolinas Lagoon, and the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Today these parks are visited annually by 10 million persons.

Picnickers have been asked to pack lunches and bring their children, according to league officials. Barbecue pits will be ready with hot coals for those wishing to cook out. The island snack bar, which serves sandwiches and beverages will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

There will be entertainment by strolling musicians and free lemonade for children.

Many guests are expected to arrive by private boat. Others may take the Angel Island State Park ferry which travels every 30 minutes between Tiburon and the island from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

San Rafael Man Reports To Jail To Serve Term

A San Rafael man who admitted taking part in a Fairfax armed robbery reported to Marin County jail Saturday to begin serving a one-year jail sentence.

Robert Scott Morey, 23, a picture frame maker, is eligible to move to the county's honor farm and join the work furlough program under an order by Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best.

Morey pleaded guilty last month to participating in the robbery of $16 from a Fairfax couple in their home Aug. 27.

Police said Morey and two other men, all armed and wearing ski masks, robbed Stephen C. Kida and Leslie A. Bessette. The others were not found.

Absentee Balloting For Election Begins

Absentee balloting for the November general election opened today. Deadline to apply for absentee ballots is Oct. 29.

The ballots and forms to apply for them are available at the elections office in the Marin Civic Center from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Applications also may be made by mail, and must state the reason for the expected absence on Nov. 5, the applicant's Marin address and address to which the ballot is to be sent, and be signed by each person seeking a ballot.

Fence, Tule Elk Herd Questioned

By BARBARA HOSMER

Why build a seven-foot high wooden fence? What if the tule elk swim away?

Why keep non-native deer if the goal is to return Point Reyes National Seashore to its native condition?

These were among questions citizens put to National Park Service officials Saturday at a public meeting on its preliminary draft for a long-range resource management plan for Point Reyes National Seashore.

The Citizen's Advisory Commission of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area and some 50 largely environmentally-concerned persons met at Point Reyes Station at park service bidding to react to a preliminary plan for the seashore.

They hit mainly upon proposed introduction of a small herd of tule elk, an endangered species once native to West Marin, and a two-mile, seven-foot tall fence to confine them to the northerly Tomales point peninsula.

"What's to prevent the elk from swimming across Tomales Bay like the deer do?" asked several of the audience.

"That's how the last ones left the county in the 1850s," conceded park biologist Richard Brown, who worked on the park service plan and reviewed it with the public and commission.

But, said Brown, a long-term study by an inter-agency tule elk task force determined that Tomales Point has the habitat that the elk might require and that they lived in the area once. It would be an experimental step, he conceded, but a forward step, he said.

"I think the elk are exciting," said Commissioner Peter Haas, "but I sense from the audience that the fence concept may be critical."

Brown said the proposed fence was mandatory, according to the study committee, because the elk otherwise could compete with ranch cattle for grazing land on the seashore and also there could be damage to the animals, an endangered species. "It's the fence or no elk."

Seashore Supt. John L. Sunsing added that the state seemed adamant about a seven-foot high fence, but, he said, in canyon areas out of sight it could be metal. It had been planned to be partially hidden by brush areas, park service officials said.

Height and material for the fence was set by the State Department of Fish and Game, said Brown. Estimated cost is $80,000, including study pen and corral.

He said that the seashore and a site at San Luis refuge in Los Padres National Forest were the two recommended by the tule elk study committee.

The idea of having Nonnative (exotic) deer at the seashore was questioned by Commissioner Edgar Wayburn as inconsistent with the park service's proposed goal of returning the seashore to its natural state as much as possible.

A member of the audience wondered why the deer wouldn't be removed along with the proposed partial eradication of the aggressive exotic Scotch Broom. Others defended the esthetic appeal of the nonnative deer, numbering some 700 animals.

"How would you keep the deer at their present level?" asked Elizabeth Whitney from the audience.

Brown replied that the State Fish and Game Department "is competent at removing excess animals." He said that every month the state takes some from the seashore to Sacramento for study.

"What happens then? Are they returned?" asked a member of the audience.

"They give them to St. Anthony's dining room," Brown answered. The audience sat momentarily silent.

Rampant, aggressively-growing Scotch Broom, which the park service proposes to stamp out, came in for praise and damnation from the audience, some defending its yellow blooms, others hating "the weed."

The finest effect would be to allow more native vegetation to take over the grassland areas, said Brown. He added that native coyote brush could be expected to flourish and the probable long-term effect of the proposed prescribed burn in specified areas and Scotch Broom-hunt would be more forest area at Point Reyes National Seashore.

Agencies, Citizens Consulted In Preparing Point Reyes Plan

To prepare the preliminary draft of the proposed natural resources management plan for Point Reyes National Seashore, the National Park Service consulted with four specialized departments and persons and requested comments from some 30 conservation organizations, government agencies and citizens groups.

Wildlife proposals were made in consultation with the California Department of Fish and Game, the range trend survey with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Petaluma, the tule elk proposal with Dr. Dale McCullough of the University of Michigan Department of Zoology, and fire management with Dr. Harold Biswell of the School of Forestry and Conservation at the University of California at Berkeley.

Comments on the draft environmental statement were requested from the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Army Corps of Engineers, Department of Commerce, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Mines, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Bureau of Reclamation, National Fish and Wildlife Service, Geological Survey, Department of Transportation, Environmental Protection Agency.

Also the California State Historic Preservation Office, California State Clearinghouse, Metropolitan Clearinghouse, Conservation Foundation, Equestrian Trails, Inc., California State Horsemen's Association, National Audubon Society, Nationals Parks and Conservations Association, Sierra Club, Wilderness Society, Marin County Parks Department, Environmental Action Committee of West Marin, Point Reyes Bird Observatory.

And Marin Conservation League West Marin units, College of Marin Biology Department, California Native Plant Society, Nature Conservancy, People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission, Regional Parks Association, Inverness Improvement Association, Vedanta Society of Northern California, League of Women Voters of the Bay Area and Marin County Resource Conservation District.

V. K. KRISHNA MENON
'Volcano is extinct'

Cremation For Krishna Menon, 79

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The mass of mourners wound slowly through the streets behind the body of V. K. Krishna Menon, the caustic critic of the United States.

The cortege came to a halt at the bank of the Jumna River and witnessed the remains of the former defense minister placed in a waterside crematorium.

Mrs. Gandhi led hundreds of Indian leaders in paying tribute to Menon, fired in disgrace as defense minister in 1962 following India's crushing border war defeat by China.

Menon, who died a bachelor early yesterday at the age of 78, had insisted on a funeral ceremony devoid of religious rites. He was born a Hindu, but later became an atheist.

He began criticizing the United States in the 1950s after America started selling arms to Pakistan. He remained a bitter critic of Washington until his death.

Although a confidant of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and an eloquent defender of India's non-alignment policy in world forums, Menon's personality and the China debacle made him unpopular at home.

Menon's overbearing insistence on rejecting all offers of foreign military aid and achieving self-reliance on all fronts won him numerous enemies within the Nehru government.

His acid tongue-lashings, aimed mostly but not exclusively at the United States, won him more notoriety than respect abroad.

He took on everyone. With a look from beneath his menacingly bushy eyebrows, he could set presidents and peons alike quivering with fear of the biting words to come.

Momen said yesterday he was unable to give the number of deaths caused by starvation, but said he was sure the number was just under 5,000.

Good Bridge Player Uses Willingness To Take Chance

What are good bridge players made of? Maybe snips and snails and puppy dogs' tails, according to the old nursery rhyme, but an essential ingredient is a willingness to play for the extra chance.

West opened the jack of clubs, and South had his first problem. Was West leading from the king? If so, a finesse would allow South to get rid of a losing diamond.

South happened to know that West hated to make "dangerous" leads. It wasn't likely that he was leading from a king against a slam contract. (That's actually the best time to lead from a king, but it takes judgment and nerve.)

South went up with the ace of clubs, ruffed a club, cashed the king and ace of hearts, ruffed another club and then went after his extra chance.

POSTPONES FINESSE

South knew that the king of spades wouldn't run away. He could take the finesse late in the hand and could still make his slam if the finesse worked.

The extra chance was to cash the top diamonds and lead a third diamond. As it happened, West had to win the third diamond; and West was then helpless to defeat the contract.

If West returned a spade, declarer would get a free finesse and would discard his other spade on dummy's last diamond. If West returned a club (his only other choice), dummy would ruff while South discarded a spade; and then dummy's ten of diamonds would take care of South's last spade.

Propositions 4 And 8 Qualify For 'Yes, But'

Two of the 17 state propositions on the Nov. 5 ballot belong in the "yes, but" category.

First of the "yes, but" proposals is Proposition 4, which would increase the membership of the University of California board of regents and reduce the regents' terms from 16 to 12 years.

REFORM of the board of regents is long overdue. Sixteen-year terms are ridiculous. But Proposition 4 does not reduce the terms sufficiently, and it muddles things up in other ways.

There are now 24 regents. Proposition 4 would increase the number required to 25, but would allow the regents themselves to add two more. We may be sure there would always be 27.

It adds two governor-appointed members (there are now 16). It removes the presidents of the State Board of Agriculture and the San Francisco Mechanics Institute. It adds the vice president of the U.C. Alumni Association (the president already is a member). And it provides that the regents may, at their own discretion, add one representative each from U.C. faculty and student governments.

It provides for a 13-member advisory committee with whom the governor must consult before making appointments. But it does not require the governor to follow the committee's recommendations.

The over-all effect will be to make the board more unwieldy than it is already. Allowing board appointments of faculty and student members will unbalance the system under which control of institutions of learning is supposed to rest with the public representatives while conduct of the schools, subject to the veto power of these public representatives, is in the hands of the educators.

The saving grace of Proposition 4 is that it cuts the regents terms to 12 years. That is not far enough. We would much prefer to see them cut to eight years, with the number of regents reduced to perhaps 17. We can give Proposition 4 a "yes" only because it is a small, stumbling step in the right direction.

ALSO IN the "yes, but" category is Proposition 8, revising constitutional provisions on property taxation.

It extends the $10,000 exemption for blind veterans and those who have lost their legs or arms to all totally disabled veterans. It extends exemption of church property to rented property used for religious worship. It changes the method of taxing timberlands. It gives the legislature more control over departmental budgets and state investments.

Some of its provisions may result in complicating an already complicated tax law. The extension of church exemptions to rental property, particularly, may result in a flood of exemption applications from so-called churches pretending to worship everything from Satan to the human body.

However, the general improvements contained in Proposition 8 qualify it for a "yes, but" recommendation.

More Japanese Food

Marinites are becoming more and more aware of Japanese food through the markets, and now through several good restaurants. The basics of traditional Japanese cuisine are built around glutinous rice, fish, bean cake, vegetables and seaweed. It is delicately flavored and low in saturated fat. Their diet is assumed to be partly responsible for the relatively low incidence of heart disease among the Japanese.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

'Cut, Trim And Squeeze' —But Government Grows

By EARL G. WATERS

As the administration of Ronald Reagan, governor of California, draws to a close, various assessments as to its success or failure will be advanced.

Reagan, now embarked on a crusade as the conservative voice of the Republican Party with the not-too-well-hidden secret ambition of being a presidential candidate in 1976, lays great claim to having "restored fiscal responsibility" in state government.

He rode into office condemning high taxes and wastefulness in government.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that Reagan meant what he said and had every intention of turning the tide of ever-growing, ever-increasing costly government. His record is now ready for examination.

One measurement is the number of state employees. This had been increasing for many years. The growth was always justified on the basis of population increases. But the state's population has peaked and levelled off and its growth in the past several years has been insignificant. Yet, despite Reagan's "cut, trim and squeeze" policies, there has been a near one-third increase in state workers during Reagan's eight years in office. At the start there were 158,000 employees, including those at the university. This number is now almost 200,000. Even in his own office the staff grew from 87 to 96.

So, in providing services for the people, it has taken nearly a third more employees in the Reagan administration although the population has remained relatively constant. Further, many of the services provided by the state when Reagan took office have since been shifted to local government.

In the matter of state expenditures, the budget when Reagan took office was slightly over $4½ billion. He will leave with a budget in excess of $10 billion.

To provide for this more than 100 per cent increase in state spending, tax collections have been increased from the $3½ billion in 1966 to $9 billion, an almost 300 per cent rise. Bonded indebtedness has grown from $¼ billion to $5½ billion.

In terms of individual burden, taxes have risen from $5.25 per $100 of personal income to $7.43, a 42 per cent increase. Under the previous administration this rise was only 3.5 per cent.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM that the figures demonstrate a shift of the tax burden away from the corporations, banks and insurance companies to direct taxes upon the people. They say that personal income and sales taxes paid only 38 per cent of the cost of government when Reagan took office and that these taxes today provide 62 per cent of that cost.

While increased costs cannot be blamed on population explosions, the inflationary spiral which has taken place, and is continuing, undeniably distorts the comparisons beyond recognition.

One conclusion which can be reached is that the tendency of government to expand defies even the most determined conservative efforts to contain it.

"Give each one a little pad and pencil. Two of them just might agree on something."

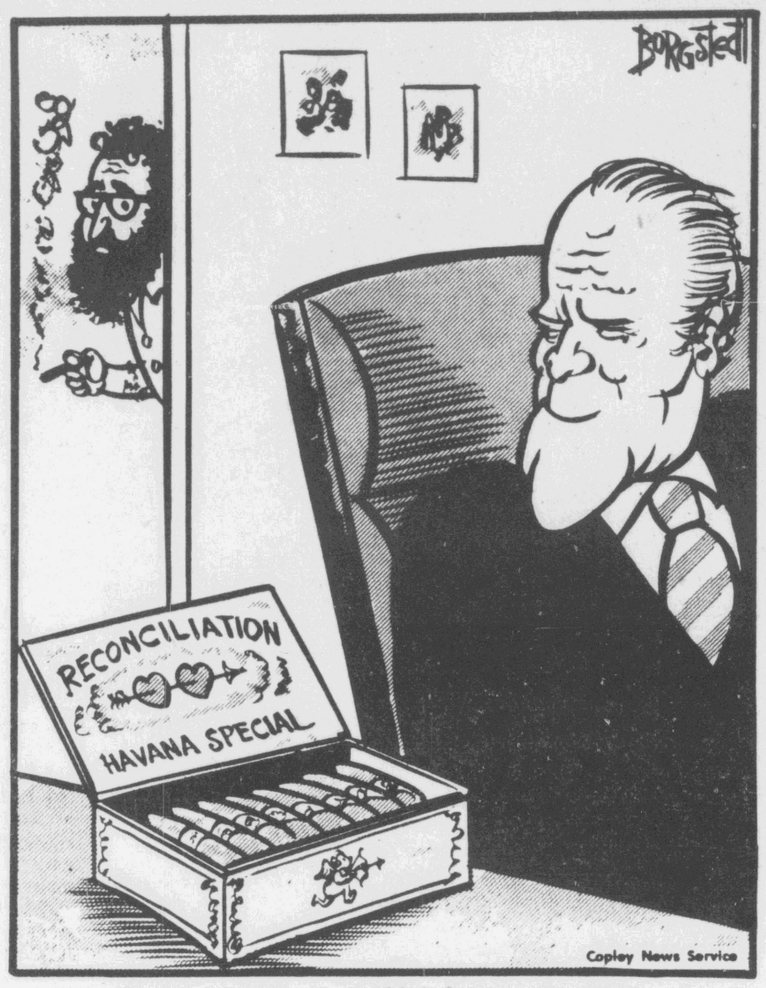
ERNEST B. FURGURSON:

Ford's Pragmatism Assures Recognition Of Cuba

WASHINGTON — If Mr. Ford's actions speak as loud as his words, the long U.S. economic-political boycott of Cuba is about over.

Speculation to this end is common currency by now, fed by Fidel Castro's audience with two visiting senators. But without addressing the question directly, the president himself already has erased the principal stated reason for the 13½ years of unsuccessful effort to freeze Castro out of business.



"Hmmm! I guess it wouldn't hurt to try one."

He did so by conceding that realpolitik still operates in world affairs, and that he subscribes to it. The news was not in the simple fact, but in his public acknowledgment of it.

QUESTION: "Mr. President, recent congressional testimony has indicated that the CIA . . . attempted to destabilize the government of Chile under former President Allende. Is it the policy of your administration to attempt to destabilize the governments of other democracies?"

The President: "Our government, like other governments, does take certain action in the intelligence field to help implement foreign policy and protect natural security. I am informed reliably that Communist nations spend vastly more money than we do for the same kind of purposes. . .

"I am not going to pass judgment on whether it is permitted under international law. It is a recognized fact that historically, as well as presently, such actions are taken in the best interests of the countries involved."

Historically, the reasons for the Eisenhower administration to break off relations with Cuba as one of its last diplomatic moves (Jan. 3, 1961) included political executions, Castro's failure to hold elections, verbal attacks on the United States, confiscation of U.S. property, and praise of communism.

But lately, Washington's rationale has been that Castro was pledged to spread communism by subversion in the Western Hemisphere, and that to prevent such subversion we were obliged to keep him in isolation.

NOW MR. FORD has admitted openly, in his press conference, that the United States itself played the game in Chile and obviously intends to go on playing it where appropriate, regardless of whether it is legal.

That removes the last external pretext for continuing the would-be freeze. If our foreign policy were ruled by consistency, developments elsewhere would have demanded long ago that it be ended.

Political executions? Failure to hold elections? Verbal attacks on the United States? Confiscation of U.S. property? Praise of communism? There is too little space to list all the embassies in Washington representing countries where such erstwhile outrages are standard procedure.

And as Mr. Ford implies, anyone aspiring to political subversion in foreign lands has far more to learn about big-time operations in Moscow, Peking — and Washington — than in Havana.

Beyond all this, now it is the United States rather than Cuba that is in danger of embarrassing isolation on this issue. Other members of the Organization of American States have voted overwhelmingly to meet in Quito next month to review its sanctions of the past decade. The United States, facing the trend, voted with the majority.

SO WHAT IS HOLDING up restoration of more or less normal economic and diplomatic relations between Washington and Havana?

First of all, Castro himself. He needs American trade, but he has proven he can exist without it. He is determiend that when the change is made, it will appear to the Cubans that he has been the victor. He wants the move, but he will not move first.

The other constraint is domestic politics in our country. But Mr. Ford has none of Nixon's personal animosity toward Castro; he knows the votes of Cuban exiles in Florida matter less to him in 1976 than the mass of swing votes elsewhere, and he knows if the GOP right could reconcile itself to recognition of China, it surely will not abandon him over the little island of Cuba.

So now it is not a matter of whether, just a matter of when.

Another School Secretary Applauded

Follow-up on the school secretary article of a couple weeks ago:

We are a most fortunate staff in having a cheerful, efficient, loving and warm school secretary.

Edna Austin radiates all of these qualities to children, teachers and parents. Edna's efficiency and personal charm adds a great deal to the smooth running of our school and the Gallinas staff is very appreciative of her conscientious service to so many people.

Omissions, Distortions Alleged In Report

Paul Cane's account (I-J, Oct. 3) of the debate between developer, Thomas Schaal and George Silvestri, Jr., representing Marin Heritage, at Thursday morning's meeting of the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League contained several erroneous and/or misleading statements or ommissions.

In the interest of brevity I will simply list them.

1. Mr. Cane makes no mention of George Silvestri whatsoever. George was invited specifically by the San Rafael Home and Business Preservation League to represent Marin Heritage in the debate with Thomas Schaal. Mary Dekker, whose work in historic preservation is well known and impressive, was on hand simply to present historical and architectural background.

2. The word "quaint" in reference to the Dollar Estate was not used by anybody at any time during the meeting. Is editorial comment in an article purportedly reporting facts good journalism?

3. Mr. Cane implies, by quoting City Mgr. William Bielser out of context, that the city does not know what they want to do with the Dollar property. The ballot argument for Proposition G states a series of uses including historic, cultural and recreational and since the mayor and entire city council signed the ballot argument it is unlikely that the city has no plans for the use of it . . .

Version Of What Mayor Blinder Said

I am writing you in response to Mayor (Martin G.) Blinder's request. I was most disappointed in your misquote of Blinder's words.

What he said was (council would have complete verbatim notes): "The history of drug law enforcement has no evidence of reducing the number of users. It is not like an old-fashioned epidemic where you can send out men in white suits with penicillin. It is like applying penicillin when you need tetracycline —totally ineffective.

"Therefore, I question the effectiveness of having drug laws at all for the law enforcement agencies become corrupted — as they did in prohibition.

"We could wipe out the wholesalers by giving out drugs through government as they do in England. There they have a lower rate of users than we do and about a 1 per cent rate of the crime increase. It would cost about $100 a year for heroin addicts. Opiates are cheaper than aspirin.

"I propose that San Anselmo go on record for decriminilization of drug abuse." Please note: He did not say, as you indicated in your editorial, "The remarkable suggestion by S.A. Mayor Blinder that all enforcement of laws against narcotics be abandoned." . . .

He said he is not against laws that punish dealers who are often totally amoral profiteers but for decriminilization of drug abuse for the proposed program ruins people, aggravates the problem, e.g. one-time users.

We Need More Men Like Mayor Bettini

Your glaring "San Rafael Mayor Linked to Conflict" headline and its subsequent article by Nels Johnson is a complete affront to a man who has done so much and given so much to San Rafael.

Having been a voter in San Rafael for some 14 years, I have always found Mr. Bettini to be just what a recent reader of yours suggested in his letter to the editor (Oct. 3) and I quote: "We must search out men of high moral principles and proven good character to run our affairs, or our system of government will be destroyed." Mr. Bettini is just that.

The Bettini family is not one that has "just moved" to San Rafael. The family is part of our city, pioneers at heart and the only "conflict of interest" is with those who through lies and by innuendoes are trying to destroy what our forefathers have worked so hard to build. This also includes the I-J. I am certain that the past generation of the Browns and Creamers would certainly not condone the type of reporting and distortion of true facts by our present I-J editorial staff.

Let us not discourage men of Mr. Bettini's caliber to avoid seeking public office. We need more men like him who have the intestinal fortitude to vote for what they think is best for their constitutents and for the good of the community as a whole, not to appease any political group or any other special segment of our society, be they businessmen or otherwise; a man who will not hide behind the cloak of abstinence; a man who lets the entire community know what he believes in and how he feels about the issue; a man without fear of contradiction; a man who is honest.

Mr. Johnson, et al, pray that San Rafael will have more men like Mr. Bettini in the future so that we, of San Rafael, can be assured that "our system of government will not be destroyed."

JOSEPH A. SACCONE

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

The GOP soon will have had three vice presidents in less than a year. For what it's worth, no other party can make that statement.

Economists don't seem to be the answer. We may need a tough army sergeant to look inflation in the eye and give it a direct order: "To the rear . . . MARCH!"

George McGovern saved money from his presidential campaign to finance his race for senator. If he loses this one, maybe he'll have enough left over to run for sheriff.

Girls' names are used for hurricanes because they have individuality. Who wants tropical storms that blow in like every Tom, Dick and Harry?

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Wallace Now In Key Position Among Democratic Hopefuls

Edward Kennedy's withdrawal opens the Democratic Party's presidential nomination to all comers.

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is the most formidable contender at this stage. He has a substantial, dedicated national following, and he will have a large bloc of delegates.

If he wins the nomination, this will split the Democratic Party wide open. If he is denied both first and second place on the ticket, he can split the party wide open by running as an independent.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota will be major primary contenders. If most Democrats want to go to the political left, Mondale is their man. If they want to return the party to the political center, Jackson fits neatly.

DID NIXON TOPPLE SENATOR KENNEDY? In wide circulation today there are two contentions which are misleading:

One is that the press hounded President Nixon from office. Leave off the last two words and it would be accurate, but it was Nixon's own actions which took him from the presidency.

The other is that Senator Kennedy's decision not to run was forced by Watergate and Nixon's forced resignation. No. It was forced in part by the continuing political impact of Chappaquiddick.

STATE OF THE ECONOMY: THE LONGER VIEW. This is the view taken by Ben Wattenberg in his new book, "The Real America." He sees a "tidal wave" of affluent young couples getting married and forming new families. This, the author concludes, will push the U.S. economy to unprecedented growth in the next 10 years.

MORE CRIME DATA — ALL BAD. Here are additional facts:

—While violent crime increased 16 per cent during the first three months of this year, it increased 47 per cent during the last five years and more than 200 per cent from 1960 to 1973.

—Arrests for violent crimes are very uneven. For murder, the percentage is high — 79 per cent. But for aggravated assault it is 63 per cent; for rape, 51 per cent, and for robbery only 27 per cent.

—Surveys show that up to 50 per cent of the nation's street crime is committed by only 15 per cent of the offenders. This is why the focus of federal and state police is on the "career criminal."

BUSINESSMEN ON CONSUMERISM. They like it, or if they don't, they accept it as inevitable. This is the conclusion of a survey by the Harvard Business Review which reports:

"Consumerism is here to stay. The traditional 'buyer beware' philosophy of the marketplace is fast eroding. Businessmen see consumerism as leading to major modifications in advertising content that will make it more truthful."

GENERAL HAIG AT NATO. He will be an asset. The job is diplomatic and political as well as military. Not since General Eisenhower has NATO had a supreme commander who could get the President of the United States or the secretary of state on the phone at will.

Step In Right Direction: Combination Train-Bus Tickets

(Reprinted from Milwaukee Journal)

Here is a ceasefire worth noting. Greyhound and Amtrak have thawed their frigid relations and agreed to offer combination bus-rail tickets to their passengers.

The public will benefit. Beginning this fall, passengers will be able to buy tickets straight through to cities not served by Amtrak, rather than having to attempt their own arrangements. At first it will apply only to the most popular destinations, but the service is expected to be expanded to thousands of smaller communities.

Amtrak and Greyhound may benefit, too, if travelers are lured out of their automobiles by effective joint service. That will require sincere cooperation between competing modes of transportation, which is a worthy goal in itself.

REMEMBER WHEN?

Oct. 7, 1964

The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Yankees 9-to-5 in the opening game of baseball's World Series.

20 YEARS AGO

Oct. 7, 1954

The Mill Valley City Council discussed amending the zoning ordinance to require a use permit for any construction on the city's marshlands.

E. L. Cook, described as "czar of vice and crime" in Phenix City, Ala., was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder in the first criminal case resulting from a drive to clean up the notorious "sin city."

WILL ROGERS SAYS . . .

"It's a joke to see a homer in some of these ballparks, it ruins the whole interest in the game. It does look like that as big a game as baseball is, and as much money as they make, they would be able to have a regulation playing field, the same size all over.

"You don't see them cutting off the end of a tennis court to put in more stands, so why can't baseball have a regulation size field? Then, if a man got a home run he would know he deserved it, and everybody would have an equal chance on every field." — Oct. 12, 1924.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By ERIK INGRAM

Disclosure Time Is Coming For Other Office-Holders

If any local politican sighed with relief last week over not having to disclose specific sources of income, he will be in for a rude awakening come January.

That's when Proposition 9, approved 3-to-1 by state voters in June, becomes law.

The new law requires attorneys and brokers to list clients from whom they received more than $1,000 in income.

It thus blocks a part of the loophole in the existing disclosure law which many politicians squeezed through last week.

THE PROPOSITION does not fully define what a "broker" is, but it appears likely that three of the five supervisors, for example, will have to file fuller disclosure reports.

Supervisor Gary Giacomini, an attorney, is covered by Proposition 9. He claims his law practice has dwindled to practically nothing because of the time he spends as a supervisor. He said he would be hard pressed to think of a client who paid $1,000.

Peter R. Arrigoni, vice president of a San Francisco stock brokerage, presumably would be considered a broker under the law, which County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said he will interpret "as broadly as possible."

In his financial statement last week, Arrigoni gave a detailed accounting of his own stocks but not a word on his income from individual clients.

Robert A. Roumiguiere is part owner of a San Rafael real estate firm and also would presumably be considered a broker.

It's a little fuzzier for Arnold Baptiste, who works in estate planning and financial consulting. Maloney said the law may apply to Baptiste if he or the firm he works for is active in investing for clients.

Michael Wornum, according to the county counsel, probably won't be required to file additional information. An architect by profession, he listed his main outside income as rental properties and teaching fees.

ON A RELATED MATTER, the watered-down disclosures filed last week provide some interesting insights into several of the county planning commissioners.

The commission's leading conservationist, Jerry Friedman, reported holdings in such firms as Standard Oil, Gulf Oil, International Harvester, Pacific Gas and Electric and Alcan Aluminum.

A couple of the commission's old timers, Margaret Azevedo and Rebecca Watkin, who, at times, comes on like Mother Nature, listed substantial holdings in companies like Caterpillar-Tractor, Pacific Gas and Electric, Texaco, General Motors and Allied Chemical. Mrs. Azevedo also leases land to a duck club.

Bill Long, one of the more liberal commissioners showed stock in International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT), American Telephone and Telegraph (ATT), Chase Manhattan Corp., Exxon Corp., and International Business Machines (IBM), among others.

Traveling With Rockefeller Is Smooth Ride On Private Jet

NEW YORK (UPI) — Traveling with Nelson Rockefeller makes first class look cheap.

A half dozen long black limousines rolled through the streets of Manhattan before dawn last week, picking up their sleepy passengers and heading for the airport. Rockefeller was on the move.

The cars wheeled up to the private air terminal. Rockefeller was the last to arrive. He stepped out of his car, as if on cue, just as his $4.5 million Grumman Gulfstream jet rolled to the gate, engines roaring, ready for takeoff.

The three-man crew, four reporters, four Rockefeller aides, six Secret Servicemen and the vice president designate went aboard.

Within minutes the plane was airborne for a quick speech at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, then on to San Francisco for a speech to the UPI editors and publishers annual meeting.

The interior is more like a living room than an airplane, with big swivel reclining chairs and small couches, a well-stocked bar and a crew of three wooed away from major airlines, including a steward who serves from a mini-kitchen.

The plane travels about 100 knots faster than commercial jetliners. It is one of three jets owned by the Rockefellers and kept ready for their use.

Normally the Secret Service doesn't approve of the officials it protects taking private or chartered airlines. "Normally, chartered jets don't meet our standards for checkups and safety," said one agent. "This plane — no problem — it's in better shape than Air Force One."

The landing strip at Provo is a bit short, but no major problem for the pilot, who lands smoothly, then slams on the brakes.

After the speech, the steward brings Rockefeller his standard drink, a Dubonnet on the rocks with a twist.

The former New York governor is a light drinker, sticking to wine and seldom having more than two glasses. He beckoned reporters to join him.

The landing an hour later in San Francisco is so smooth the plane practically coasts to a stop.

At 5 a.m. the next morning, the Rockefeller team is on the move again — an early flight to get the nominee back to Washington for a luncheon.

Five hours later, a reporter compliments Rockefeller on the flight, and another asks him if after he is confirmed he will use a Convair — the somewhat outdated and much slower prop-jet used as Air Force Two.

He makes a face. "We used those back in 1960 — or was it 1950?"

A Good Investment

SOWERBY, England (UPI) — Dorothy Stokell wagered 12 cents on an off-track accumulator bet involving six horses. All won and so did she — $33,600 on odds of 280,000 to 1.

Most airlines will help you fly SFO to the airport.

If you're flying to Southern California on PSA, you can fly SFO to San Francisco Airport for just $9.00 And park your car free at the Marin Heliport. Many airlines offer reduced rate helicopter fares. The amount depends on your connecting airline and destination. Ask your travel agent or airline about reduced fares from Marin to San Francisco Airport. They'll help take you to your plane. Or call us for information: 388-5555.

Kissinger Received $50,000 Rocky Gift

NEW YORK (UPI) — The State Department has confirmed that vice-presidential nominee Nelson Rockefeller gave Henry Kissinger a $50,000 gift in 1969 in appreciation for his services as a foreign affairs adviser.

Paul Hare, a department spokesman, said Saturday the gift was received after Kissinger left Rockefeller's staff but before he became former President Richard Nixon's national security adviser.

"Before accepting it, Dr. Kissinger discussed this with the then President-elect and his counsel," Hare said.

"Dr. Kissinger put the $50,000 into trusts for his two children and filed gift tax returns covering these gifts to the children."

"He understood that Governor Rockefeller filed a gift tax return on the gift to him," he said.

Hugh Morrow, a spokesman for Rockefeller, said the former governor told Kissinger in a letter dated Jan. 17, 1969, "As a token of my friendship and appreciation for the work you have done in service to the people of this country I am arranging to have a gift made to you in the amount of $50,000."

Morrow also confirmed that Rockefeller made a $86,312.50 gift to former state official L. Judson Morehouse and a gift of an undisclosed amount to Dr. William Ronan, chairman of the Port Authority and former head of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority.

Morehouse was sentenced to prison in 1966 on bribery and other charges in connection with a scandal in the New York Liquor Authority.

His sentence was commuted by Rockefeller for medical reasons, the former governor said during his recent nomination hearings.

Morrow said the gift to Morehouse last December represented cancellation of the remainder of a $100,000 loan made in September, 1960.

He said Rockefeller loaned the money to Morehouse, who served as state Republican party chairman from 1954 until 1962, so Morehouse could invest the money and have an income, since the chairmanship was an unsalaried position.

Morrow said the Ronan gift represented a cancellation of personal notes, but did not elaborate.

The State Department comments on the Kissinger gift came in response to reports that the Senate Rules Committee had asked Rockefeller for an explanation.

The committee completed its public hearings on the nomination but has not yet voted on whether to recommend it to the full Senate.

Dempsey's Restaurant Shuts Down In New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Dempsey, the former world heavyweight champion, was kayoed last night in his fight to keep his 40-year-old restaurant open. His partner ruled out a rematch.

"I'm heartbroken and I'm disgusted," Dempsey said. "This is my second home and I've lost it. But what can you do?"

After acquiring the Brill Building when the original owners forfeited on the mortgage, Inch tried to raise the rent, even though Jack Amiel, Dempsey's partner, said the lease had seven years to run.

The lease called for $85,000 yearly rent, including taxes, but the Inch Corp. asked $130,000 a year, plus taxes, Amiel said.

"It's a sad thing," Amiel said. "This place has been here so many years and it's world famous. It's a sad thing.

Amiel said he and Dempsey would not open another restaurant. "To start from scratch again would take too much time and too much money," he said.

Dempsey, 79, who became champion when he whipped Jess Willard 55 years ago, opened his original restaurant more than 40 years ago across from the old Madison Square Garden on Eighth Avenue. He moved to the Brill Building in 1947.

While Amiel ran the business end of the restaurant, Dempsey served as host and greeted patrons on most nights.

Dempsey was by for a few hours last night, saying goodby to his customers. "He had tears in his eyes," Amiel said.

V. K. KRISHNA MENON
'Volcano is extinct'

Cremation For Krishna Menon, 79

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The mass of mourners wound slowly through the streets behind the body of V. K. Krishna Menon, the caustic critic of the United States.

The cortege came to a halt at the bank of the Jumna River and witnessed the remains of the former defense minister placed in a waterside crematorium.

Mrs. Gandhi led hundreds of Indian leaders in paying tribute to Menon, fired in disgrace as defense minister in 1962 following India's crushing border war defeat by China.

Menon, who died a bachelor early yesterday at the age of 78, had insisted on a funeral ceremony devoid of religious rites. He was born a Hindu, but later became an atheist.

He began criticizing the United States in the 1950s after America started selling arms to Pakistan. He remained a bitter critic of Washington until his death.

Although a confidant of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and an eloquent defender of India's non-alignment policy in world forums, Menon's personality and the China debacle made him unpopular at home.

Menon's overbearing insistence on rejecting all offers of foreign military aid and achieving self-reliance on all fronts won him numerous enemies within the Nehru government.

His acid tongue-lashings, aimed mostly but not exclusively at the United States, won him more notoriety than respect abroad.

He took on everyone. With a look from beneath his menacingly bushy eyebrows, he could set presidents and peons alike quivering with fear of the biting words to come.

Soup Kitchens Open Across Bangladesh

DACCA (UPI) — More than 3,000 soup kitchens have opened throughout Bangladesh to combat famine that has already claimed nearly 5,000 lives, according to Food and Relief Minister Abdul Momen.

Momen said yesterday he was unable to give the number of deaths caused by starvation, but said he was sure the number was just under 5,000.

Today is Monday, Oct. 7, the 280th day of 1974 with 85 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

American poet James Whitcomb Riley was born Oct. 7, 1849.

On this day in history:

In 1916, in the most staggering football defeat ever recorded, Georgia Tech humbled Cumberland University 222 to 0.

In 1961, 37 persons were killed when a British airliner crashed in the French Pryenees.

In 1963, Bobby Baker resigned as Senate Democratic secretary after being charged in a $300,000 civil suit with using his influence for personal monetary gains.

In 1971, President Nixon announced an economic control system to follow the 90-day wage-price freeze he imposed in mid-August.

A thought for the day: American poet James Whitcomb Riley said, "The ripest peach is highest on the tree."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Good Bridge Player Uses Willingness To Take Chance

What are good bridge players made of? Maybe snips and snails and puppy dogs' tails, according to the old nursery rhyme, but an essential ingredient is a willingness to play for the extra chance.

Opening lead – ♣ J

West opened the jack of clubs, and South had his first problem. Was West leading from the king? If so, a finesse would allow South to get rid of a losing diamond.

South happened to know that West hated to make "dangerous" leads. It wasn't likely that he was leading from a king against a slam contract. (That's actually the best time to lead from a king, but it takes judgment and nerve.)

South went up with the ace of clubs, ruffed a club, cashed the king and ace of hearts, ruffed another club and then went after his extra chance.

POSTPONES FINESSE

South knew that the king of spades wouldn't run away. He could take the finesse late in the hand and could still make his slam if the finesse worked.

The extra chance was to cash the top diamonds and lead a third diamond. As it happened, West had to win the third diamond; and West was then helpless to defeat the contract.

If West returned a spade, declarer would get a free finesse and would discard his other spade on dummy's last diamond. If West returned a club (his only other choice), dummy would ruff while South discarded a spade; and then dummy's ten of diamonds would take care of South's last spade.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one no trump and you hold:

♥ - 7 3
♦ - 8 7 5
♣ - K 7 6 4 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

Let partner stew in his own juice. If doubled, however, you should run to two clubs.

Philippines Intends To Recognize China

MANILA (UPI) — The Philippines today formally informed the United States and its allies in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations of its decision to recognize China soon.

A government announcement said President Ferdinand E. Marcos conveyed the Philippine decision to establish diplomatic ties with China to ambassadors of the United States and association partners Indonesia, Singapore, Thailand and Malaysia in a series of meetings at the presidential palace.

TONIGHT'S TELEVISION

Unusual on television tonight:

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 9 p.m. — Sammy Davis Jr. and Peter Lawford star in the mystery-comedy "Salt and Pepper," to be seen on the "NBC Monday Night at the Movies." The movie revolves around the smartest night-club in London's Soho district, the Salt and Pepper, named for its owners Charles Salt (Sammy Davis, Jr.) and Christopher Pepper (Peter Lawford).

KTVU (2), 10 p.m. — "San Francisco: The City That Knows How" has, for years, been a frequently seen and heard phrase heavily promoted by the Chamber of Commerce and local columnists. But does the city still know how? KTVU reporter Gar Pill went to investigate and reports his findings in a three-part documentary beginning tonight within the Action News broadcast. Pill's report will survey the effects of crime and the economy on the tourist trade, especially in the area of North Beach.

THE UNEXPLAINED

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

On Campus In 1963, A Secretary Stepped Back Into The 1920s

Mrs. Coleen Buterbaugh is one of those people who have stepped through the invisible doorway that leads to the past.

On the morning of Oct. 23, 1963, Mrs. Buterbaugh was walking briskly across the campus of Nebraska Wesleyan College where she served as secretary to the dean, Dr. Samuel Dahl. She was on her way to start work for the day.

It was, Mrs. Buterbaugh recalled later, exactly 8:30 a.m. when she walked up the steps of the C. C. White Building which housed her office and also served as campus music center. As she strode down the long hallway she passed several yawning students shuffling to early classes. Some were still emptying their paper cups of morning coffee.

Mrs. Buterbaugh's first destination on this particular day was the office of Dr. Tom McCourt, a visiting lecturer from Scotland. It was an office she knew weell.

As she stepped through the door she knew immediately that something was wrong. Uncanny.

She was almost suffocated by an overwhelming odor of stale, musty air, as though someone had opened an old trunk full of mouldering junk. Then Mrs. Buterbaugh was taken aback to see a woman in the office standing with her back to her and bending over to reach into a filing cabinet drawer.

The woman, whoever she was, struck Mrs. Buterbaugh as being very odd. She was tall, slender and dark-haired but dressed in the style of another era — a long-sleeved white shirtwaist and an ankle-length brown skirt.

What in the world's going on here, thought Mrs. Buterbaugh? Who is this woman? And why does the office look so utterly strange?

Nothing about the place was normal. The desk, the filing cabinets, the curtains they all looked incredibly old.

It was when she glanced at the curtains that Mrs. Buterbaugh noted, with alarm, that even the scene outside the window was different. This was crazy! Why, there were no streets out there. And Willard Sorority House, one of the familiar campus buildings, wasn't anywhere to be seen.

Badly frightened by this time, Mrs. Buterbaugh wheeled and rushed out of the office. She headed straight to the dean, Dr. Dahl, and blurted out of her bizarre story.

He listened attentively, then asked her to accompany him to the office of Dr. Glenn Callan, head of the college's social science department, who had been on the faculty since 1900.

The elderly professor head Mrs. Buterbaugh's account, cross-examining her about details. Then he said that she had described the office and campus as they had been in the 1920s. The women fitted the description of Miss Clara Mills, whose office it once was. She died in the late 1930s.

When Mrs. Buterbaugh later returned to the office, everything was back to normal.

Parapsychologists (scientists who study psychic phenomena) call her experience retrocognition — the projection of the mind backward through time.

How or why did it happen?

This is part of the unexplained.

Morton: U.S. Should Expand, Exploit Energy

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (AP) — America should exploit its energy potential and expand, U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton says.

"Let's not let the Democrats kid us and tell us we are going into a depression," Morton told a Nevada Republican fund-raising party yesterday. "This is no time to slow down. This is a time for the country to expand."

Morton said enough energy can be developed in America for centuries without destroying the environment.

He said, "America can no longer remain a hostage to a cartel of oil-rich sheiks who produce a 30-cent gallon of oil and sell it as $13 oil."

President Readies Economic Message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has made the major decisions on his anti-inflation message, which one White House aide said will ask for "restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice" from all sectors of the nation.

The proposals will be presented tomorrow in a speech to Congress.

The problem is big. Ford's goals are to curtail inflation, head off a recession, reverse the U.S. dependence on foreign oil, revive a depressed housing industry, bring interest rates down, stimulate the stock market, help power companies expand, shelter the worst victims —the jobless and the working poor —from inflation's pains and keep the Republicans from taking a shellacking in next month's elections.

Time Magazine said yesterday that the economic proposals would include a 5 per cent surtax on individual income taxes for persons in higher income brackets and on corporations.

The plan, according to Time, also would provide some form of tax relief for low-income families, expand public-service employment programs, provide federal financial aid for the mortgage market, new energy conservation measures and propose a $5 billion cut in the federal budget.

Ford spent one hour and 15 minutes with economic advisers yesterday afternoon, making final choices on economic and energy conservation programs.

"Almost all major decisions have been made," said press secretary Ron Nessen.

He said Ford would ask Americans "to exhibit restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice, and I want to emphasize that the government itself is not exempt from any of these three."

Arriving at Bethesda Naval Hospital for a visit with his wife, Ford was asked about the proposals. "We expect to have a fair program," the President said.

Nessen said the burdens "will be distributed equally ... so that everybody bears their just share."

Some sort of big, broad and probably temporary tax increase appeared inevitable — the first general income tax increase since the Vietnam War.

Additional revenues are necessary to offset the losses arising from new tax incentives for business investment, while still decreasing federal borrowing so as to reduce pressure on interest rates.

Some White House advisers said a short term surtax —a percentage increase on regular federal income taxes —might be sought for all tax payers with income over a specified level, perhaps, $15,000.

The President is certain to seek to reawaken interest in conserving energy.

He has been urged by energy adviser John Sawhill to use the tax laws to induce people to consume less gasoline and heating fuels. But the White House ruled out rationing or any increase in gasoline taxes.

Other uses of the tax laws to save energy—such as a horsepower tax on new cars seemed unlikely for the time being.

"Inflation strikes society unevenly" Ford told his economic summit a week ago. "We must provide productive work for those without jobs ... and correct inflation-caused inequities."

That statement suggested Ford would propose a tax cut for low-income working people and a multi-billion dollar program to enable state and local governments to hire people who lose their jobs in a stagnant economy.

More generous unemployment benefits are likely.

These ideas were generally endorsed at the economic summit and take on new urgency with last month's sharp jump in the unemployment rate to 5.8 per cent.

For the poor who earn too little to pay taxes, such steps as increased food stamp rations may be proposed.

Ford also is thought likely to revive the Nixon administration's proposal for taxes on oil industry windfall profits. Oil-state Democrats in congress have blocked that idea for nearly a year.

The housing and banking industries are pressing for an incentive to savers so that increased deposits would make more mortgage money available.

An exemption from taxation for up to $500 in interest earned by savings accounts has been proposed, but it would cost the Treasury billions.

Law Students At New College Pass 'Baby Bar'

Seventy per cent of law students from New College in Sausalito who took the "baby bar" exam in June recorded passing scores, College President John Leary has announced.

"Baby bar" exam is a test administered by state Bar Association that all law students studying at unaccredited schools or on their own must take after their first year of study. They must pass to continue their law work.

Of the 2,200 students from throughout the state who took the test, only 37 per cent passed, Leary said.

This year, the 50 students in the New College law school will be attending classes at a new facility in San Francisco, 1254 Market Street.

Cocaine Ring Said Smashed

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the arrest of 150 persons since last February,including 45 this weekend, authorities say they have smashed an international narcotics ring responsible for selling more than 300 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $35 million.

Manhattan District Attorney Richard Kuh said yesterday the arrests "should have a major impact on the traffic from Colombia, a major source of cocaine —if not the major source of cocaine" in the metropolitan area.

Officials declined to characterize all the suspects as being part of a single narcotics ring but Kuh said there is some indication of interrelationships.

The President's Golfing Weekend

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford played a game of golf with comedian Bob Hope last weekend and one of the players said he won a little money.

Hope and a friend of his, Hugh Davis, played golf Saturday with Ford and former Rep. John Byrnes, R-Wis. Davis said he and Ford "managed to take a buck from Bob."

The comedian praised Ford's golf game, saying: "I know one thing — that if the President didn't have this job and could practice, he could be probably a pro. He is so muscular and he plays golf like Arnold Palmer and swims like Mark Spitz."

THE UNEXPLAINED

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

On Campus In 1963, A Secretary Stepped Back Into The 1920s

Mrs. Coleen Buterbaugh is one of those people who have stepped through the invisible doorway that leads to the past.

On the morning of Oct. 23, 1963, Mrs. Buterbaugh was walking briskly across the campus of Nebraska Wesleyan College where she served as secretary to the dean, Dr. Samuel Dahl. She was on her way to start work for the day.

It was, Mrs. Buterbaugh recalled later, exactly 8:30 a.m. when she walked up the steps of the C. C. White Building which housed her office and also served as campus music center. As she strode down the long hallway she passed several yawning students shuffling to early classes. Some were still emptying their paper cups of morning coffee.

Mrs. Buterbaugh's first destination on this particular day was the office of Dr. Tom McCourt, a visiting lecturer from Scotland. It was an office she knew weell.

As she stepped through the door she knew immediately that something was wrong. Uncanny.

She was almost suffocated by an overwhelming odor of stale, musty air, as though someone had opened an old trunk full of mouldering junk. Then Mrs. Buterbaugh was taken aback to see a woman in the office standing with her back to her and bending over to reach into a filing cabinet drawer.

The woman, whoever she was, struck Mrs. Buterbaugh as being very odd. She was tall, slender and dark-haired but dressed in the style of another era — a long-sleeved white shirtwaist and an ankle-length brown skirt.

What in the world's going on here, thought Mrs. Buterbaugh? Who is this woman? And why does the office look so utterly strange?

Nothing about the place was normal. The desk, the filing cabinets, the curtains they all looked incredibly old.

It was when she glanced at the curtains that Mrs. Buterbaugh noted, with alarm, that even the scene outside the window was different. This was crazy! Why, there were no streets out there. And Willard Sorority House, one of the familiar campus buildings, wasn't anywhere to be seen.

Badly frightened by this time, Mrs. Buterbaugh wheeled and rushed out of the office. She headed straight to the dean, Dr. Dahl, and blurted out of her bizarre story.

He listened attentively, then asked her to accompany him to the office of Dr. Glenn Callan, head of the college's social science department, who had been on the faculty since 1900.

The elderly professor head Mrs. Buterbaugh's account, cross-examining her about details. Then he said that she had described the office and campus as they had been in the 1920s. The women fitted the description of Miss Clara Mills, whose office it once was. She died in the late 1930s.

When Mrs. Buterbaugh later returned to the office, everything was back to normal.

Parapsychologists (scientists who study psychic phenomena) call her experience retrocognition — the projection of the mind backward through time.

How or why did it happen?

This is part of the unexplained.

Morton: U.S. Should Expand, Exploit Energy

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (AP) — America should exploit its energy potential and expand, U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton says.

"Let's not let the Democrats kid us and tell us we are going into a depression," Morton told a Nevada Republican fund-raising party yesterday. "This is no time to slow down. This is a time for the country to expand."

Morton said enough energy can be developed in America for centuries without destroying the environment.

He said, "America can no longer remain a hostage to a cartel of oil-rich sheiks who produce a 30-cent gallon of oil and sell it as $13 oil."

President Readies Economic Message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has made the major decisions on his anti-inflation message, which one White House aide said will ask for "restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice" from all sectors of the nation.

The proposals will be presented tomorrow in a speech to Congress.

The problem is big. Ford's goals are to curtail inflation, head off a recession, reverse the U.S. dependence on foreign oil, revive a depressed housing industry, bring interest rates down, stimulate the stock market, help power companies expand, shelter the worst victims —the jobless and the working poor —from inflation's pains and keep the Republicans from taking a shellacking in next month's elections.

Time Magazine said yesterday that the economic proposals would include a 5 per cent surtax on individual income taxes for persons in higher income brackets and on corporations.

The plan, according to Time, also would provide some form of tax relief for low-income families, expand public-service employment programs, provide federal financial aid for the mortgage market, new energy conservation measures and propose a $5 billion cut in the federal budget.

Ford spent one hour and 15 minutes with economic advisers yesterday afternoon, making final choices on economic and energy conservation programs.

"Almost all major decisions have been made," said press secretary Ron Nessen.

He said Ford would ask Americans "to exhibit restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice, and I want to emphasize that the government itself is not exempt from any of these three."

Arriving at Bethesda Naval Hospital for a visit with his wife, Ford was asked about the proposals. "We expect to have a fair program," the President said.

Nessen said the burdens "will be distributed equally ... so that everybody bears their just share."

Some sort of big, broad and probably temporary tax increase appeared inevitable — the first general income tax increase since the Vietnam War.

Additional revenues are necessary to offset the losses arising from new tax incentives for business investment, while still decreasing federal borrowing so as to reduce pressure on interest rates.

Some White House advisers said a short term surtax —a percentage increase on regular federal income taxes —might be sought for all tax payers with income over a specified level, perhaps, $15,000.

The President is certain to seek to reawaken interest in conserving energy.

He has been urged by energy adviser John Sawhill to use the tax laws to induce people to consume less gasoline and heating fuels. But the White House ruled out rationing or any increase in gasoline taxes.

Other uses of the tax laws to save energy—such as a horsepower tax on new cars seemed unlikely for the time being.

"Inflation strikes society unevenly" Ford told his economic summit a week ago. "We must provide productive work for those without jobs ... and correct inflation-caused inequities."

That statement suggested Ford would propose a tax cut for low-income working people and a multi-billion dollar program to enable state and local governments to hire people who lose their jobs in a stagnant economy.

More generous unemployment benefits are likely.

These ideas were generally endorsed at the economic summit and take on new urgency with last month's sharp jump in the unemployment rate to 5.8 per cent.

For the poor who earn too little to pay taxes, such steps as increased food stamp rations may be proposed.

Ford also is thought likely to revive the Nixon administration's proposal for taxes on oil industry windfall profits. Oil-state Democrats in congress have blocked that idea for nearly a year.

The housing and banking industries are pressing for an incentive to savers so that increased deposits would make more mortgage money available.

An exemption from taxation for up to $500 in interest earned by savings accounts has been proposed, but it would cost the Treasury billions.

Law Students At New College Pass 'Baby Bar'

Seventy per cent of law students from New College in Sausalito who took the "baby bar" exam in June recorded passing scores, College President John Leary has announced.

"Baby bar" exam is a test administered by state Bar Association that all law students studying at unaccredited schools or on their own must take after their first year of study. They must pass to continue their law work.

Of the 2,200 students from throughout the state who took the test, only 37 per cent passed, Leary said.

This year, the 50 students in the New College law school will be attending classes at a new facility in San Francisco, 1254 Market Street.

Colson Seeking Term Reduction On 'Even-Handed Justice' Basis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing former President Richard M. Nixon's pardon, Charles W. Colson today asked for a reduction in his prison sentence in the interest of "even-handed justice."

Colson, former special counsel and political operative for Nixon, pleaded guilty in June to obstruction of justice by spreading derogatory information about Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg. He was given a $5,000 fine and a 1-3 year sentence, and now is at the federal prison farm at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

"President Ford's action in pardoning former President Nixon raises serious questions with respect to even-handed justice for former subordinates of Mr. Nixon who have been prosecuted for offenses in which he was a participant," Colson's lawyer said in a one-sentence motion filed in U.S. District Court.

"This is particularly troubling in the case of Mr. Colson, who was convicted for disseminating derogatory information about Daniel Ellsberg's attorney at Mr. Nixon's direct request."

After Ford's full pardon of Nixon for any Watergate-connected crimes he may have committed, Colson's lawyer asked the White House about a pardon but the Justice Department recommended against it.

A 10-page memorandum in support of the motion also cited the death of Colson's father Aug. 19 as a reason for a reduction. It said Colson's 73-year-old mother was "wholly dependent emotionally" on her only child.

It also said U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell had received erroneous data about the average sentences given other defendents in obstruction of justice cases in fiscal 1973. It said the average sentence for defendants who pleaded guilty was only 13 months.

But the main thrust of the memorandum dealt with the comparative fairness in treatment that Colson received.

"We do not mean to suggest that Mr. Colson's actions were in any sense legitimized by virtue of the fact that they were done at the request of the President," it said.

Blinder Responds To Critics

San Anselmo Mayor Martin G. Blinder today issued a formal statement in response to a charge by the San Rafael city administration that his proposal for decriminalization of drug use is a "morally and socially bankrupt position."

The San Rafael charge that Blinder's views also amount to "a violation of the oath of office" is contained in a memo by City Mgr. William J. Bielser and Chief Lawrence R. Kelly. The memo recommends the city dump its proposal for a countywide narcotics unit, a move that will be considered at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Blinder responded: "Aside from the question of whether we hire policemen to determine for us what is a correct moral and social position, I have always believed that the police must enforce any law on the books — consistently and without exception. My quarrel is with the drug laws themselves, which, by driving the addict to burglaries and muggings to finance a habit made prohibitively expensive by such laws, create crime rather than reduce it.

"Rather than face the situation squarely ourselves, we pass it on to police. We make a police problem of what is in reality a social-medical-behavioral problem... Those who support such laws and the costly, futile narc squads to enforce them doubtless are well intended, but their urge to punish may exceed their urge to solve the drug problem."

DAVID KUNST

Man Who Walked Around The World

WASECA, Minn. (UPI) — David Kunst, the first man ever to walk around the world, was back in his hometown today, planning to go some place else to write a book about his adventures and thinking of a new feat to top the old one.

The 15,000-mile walk cost Kunst a brother and a wife but he still called it "a human thing, a fantastic accomplishment for man."

Townspeople, irritated earlier by a newspaper article in which the 35-year-old Kunst had made outspoken comments about marriage, Waseca and "damn dumb foreigners," turned out by the thousands Saturday to welcome him back.

However, absent or inconspicuous was his wife, Jan, whom he left alone with their two sons and a daughter to make the walk which took four and one-half years.

In the article, Kunst said marriage was a "bad idea" and added, "I've known a lot of women all over the world, and it didn't always end with a handshake."

This weekend Kunst said his wife had done a "helluva job," but that her "domestication" and his "liberal ways" caused mutual resentment.

"I have three great kids and maybe someday they'll reflect back and realize that they had an honest father and that people can have differences in a relationship and still have a greater understanding," he said.

Kunst and a brother, John, left Waseca June 20, 1970, in the company of a mule named Willie Make It, primarily for a colossal adventure and also to raise donations for UNICEF.

John was shot to death by bandits in Afghanistan. After recouperating from serious injuries David resumed the walk with brother, Peter, Santa Ana, Calif., who walked through Pakistan, India and Australia where he dropped out due to foot trouble. He rejoined David a few miles from home.

this trip, and we said two Kunst brothers would finish it," David told the crowd while Peter stood in the background weeping quietly for the slain brother.

Kunst's size 13A final pair of walking shoes were actioned off — the right for $150, the left for $170.

Willie Make It was sold to a couple of Minneapolis women for $140, with the funds joining the thousands of dollars already collected for UNICEF during the walk.

Auto Workers In Madrid Stage A Warning Strike

MADRID (UPI) — More than 4,000 workers at the Seat autobile factory, Spain's largest, stopped work today in a warning strike.

In Madrid, police released most of the 170 persons, including three priests, who were arrested Saturday in a church when they met to discuss labor problems at a local factory.

Labor sources estimated 30,000 workers were idled throughout the nation during the second week of labor troubles, either on illegal strikes or locked out of their factories.

Some of the work stoppages were called to press wage demands and others in support of the 13,600 auto workers locked out of the Fasa-Renault plant in Valladolid. Last week some of the workers clashed with police in street demonstrations that injured 10 policemen and led to 37 arrests.

Representatives of the auto workers and Fasa-Renault have agreed to reopen the plant tomorrow while negotiations continue for a new contract. The workers seek an extra $17 addition to their average weekly wage of $70.

They were supported by striking workers at the Fasa-Renault plant in Seville, which was evacuated Friday and shut indefinitely, and by aviation workers there. Strikes are illegal in Spain.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Baseball players in general and managers in particular like to talk about momentum, that undefinable emotional state they claim decides championships.

In the first two games of the American League playoffs here, which the A's and Orioles split, both managers, Al Dark of Oakland and Earl Weaver of Baltimore, talked about momentum.

Weaver claimed his club had it coming into the playoffs because the Orioles had won their last nine regular season games to clinch the East.

Then yesterday, after the A's had beaten the Orioles, 5-0, behind the five-hit pitching of lefty Ken Holtzman, Dark claimed his club now had the momentum.

"I think winning the second game of any short series is the most important," said Dark, "because it gives you momentum."

Weaver didn't exactly buy that.

"All it means is that we are now 1-1 and the club that wins two of the next three will play in the World Series," he said.

The day before, though, after the Orioles had opened the playoffs with a 6-3 victory, Weaver said "momentum is on our side."

No matter, the series is squared at one victory apiece and now the scene shifts to Baltimore where the next three games are scheduled to be played, starting tomorrow with Vida Blue pitching for Oakland and Jim Palmer for Baltimore.

Yesterday's game wasn't as onesided as the final score would indicate.

Lefty Dave McNally matched Holtzman almost serve for serve through three innings in a scoreless tie. Then in the fourth, Oakland got a break when sure-handed second baseman Bobby Grich dropped a high foul popup behind first by Sal Bando.

On the very next pitch, the Oakland strongman lined a homer over the left field fence. It stayed 1-0 until the sixth when Billy North walked to open the inning, went to second on a wild pitch and scored easily on a two-out triple off the right centerfield fence by Joe Rudi.

The blow finished McNally as Weaver rushed in Wayne Garland, Bob Reynolds and Grant Jackson from the bullpen in an effort to keep the A's within range on the hopes that Holtzman might crack in the late innings.

Holtzman, who retired 16 batters in a row from the third through two out in the eighth, did crack a bit when Enos Cabell and Andy Etchebarren singled. But Holtzman got pinch-hitter Curt Motton on a roller to first and seemed home free.

Not that he needed it, but the A's gave him three insurance runs in the bottom of the eighth, again as a result of a break.

Gene Tenace walked after two out and stole second while the Baltimore infield played back on Claudell Washington. The rookie outfielder, who played right in place of hobbling Reggie Jackson, hit a sharp grounder to short but Frank Baker, spiked above the left knee earlier in the inning as he tagged out pinch-runner Herb Washington on a steal attempt, booted it for an error. That brought Ray Fosse to the plate and he jumped at the chance with a long homer to left that finished the Orioles and evened the series.

"It just turned out not being our day," moaned Weaver. "We wanted both games here. How else can you see it? We didn't play bad ball. Two errors were the big plays."

After Palmer tomorrow, Weaver will pitch Mike Cuellar, the opening game winner in game four, with McNally or Ross Grimsley for the fifth game, if it goes that far. Dark will follow Blue with Jim Hunter, who lost to Cuellar on Saturday, with Holtzman coming back for the fifth game.

Baker took a couple of stitches on his cut after yesterday's game and should be ready for backup duty behind Mark Belanger if needed. Jackson, who pulled a hamstring muscle late in the season, was the designated hitter yesterday and probably will fill the same role tomorrow.

Blue To Pitch For A's Tomorrow

Crucial Series For Manager Dark's Future

By GARY HUGHES

OAKLAND — What started as three out of five series is now down to two out of three. Tomorrow in Baltimore Vida Blue will go to the mound attempting to get the A's on top in the American League Championship series. Blue is 2-0 against the Orioles this year.

The question prior to the series was whether Oakland could stop Baltimore's momentum. The Orioles finished league play by winning their last nine games.

Saturday's game in the coliseum saw Baltimore extend its streak to 10 on the basis of some great hitting (three home runs), good, and at times sensational, defense and a very big mistake by Campy Campaneris.

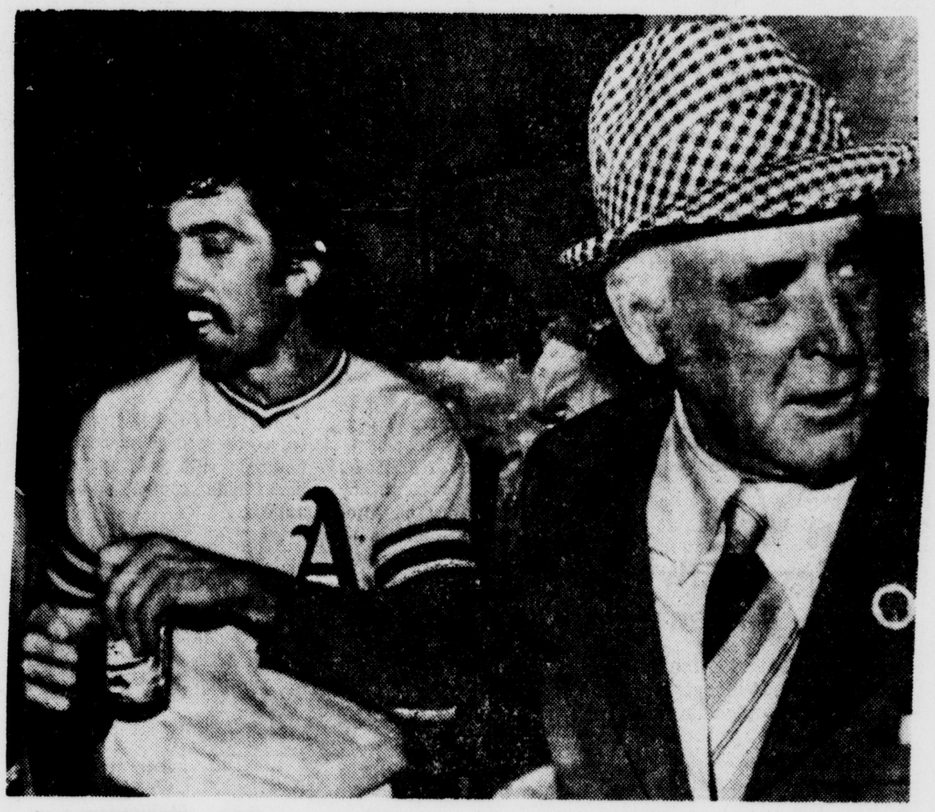
Paul Blair, Brooks Robinson, and Bobby Grich hit home runs off Oakland's ace Catfish Hunter. The top defensive plays were turned in by Don Baylor in left field and Mr. Third Base Brooks Robinson. The key play happened in the fifth inning. With the score 6-3, Campaneris was picked off first base by Mike Cuellar. He had just driven in Billy North for his third run batted in. There were no outs at the time and with Jackson, Bando, and Tenace coming up, the possibility of a big inning was very real. After that kickoff play, the wind was taken out of the A's sails. As Billy North said after the game, "You don't get picked off with the score 6-3."

Yesterday the A's came back, 5-0. Kenny Holtzman pitched a masterful five-hitter and home runs by Sal Bando and Ray Fosse paced the offense. North in centerfield was the defensive standout.

Just as an A's mistake was the key to Saturday's game, a bad Baltimore break cost the Orioles the game yesterday and possibly stopped their momentum. In the eighth inning, with runners on first and second, two out and pinch batter Curt Motton at bat with a two-ball, one-strike count, Holtzman let up on a fast ball that missed badly inside. As Motton ducked to get out of the way the ball hit his bat and rolled harmlessly to Gene Tenace at first base and Tenace made an unassisted putout to end the inning. Ray Fosse's three-run home run allowed Holtzman to coast in the ninth.

Alvin Dark is in Baltimore tonight with his job resting on the outcome of the next two or three games. I think he has to win the World Series to be back next year. If the A's don't get there, Dark will be gone. In a three-hour meeting with A's owner Charles Finley on Friday Dark fought to make sure Ray Fosse was in the lineup. It is to his credit that he did because it's beginning to look like Fosse may be the guy who will save his manager's job.

As he was leaving the clubhouse yesterday second baseman Dick Green said, "The reason we played so inconsistently this year was because Fosse was out hurt. The only person around here who doesn't think Ray can play is Finley."



CLUBHOUSE JOY — Catcher Ray Fosse and A's owner Charles O. Finley celebrated in the clubhouse yesterday after Oakland defeated Baltimore, 5-0, in the second game of the American League playoffs. Fosse's three-run homer helped pitcher Ken Holtzman, who threw a five-hitter. (UPI Telephoto)

FOR DON CORYELL

Young Cardinals May Make Dream Come True

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The young St. Louis Cardinals are making their coach's dreams come true while the San Francisco 49ers' passing attack is turning into a nightmare for Dick Nolan.

St. Louis scored 24 points in the third quarter yesterday on the way to a 34-9 romp over San Francisco to give St. Louis a 4-0 mark atop the National Conference East. Only Minnesota and New England remain unbeaten along with the Cards.

"Every coach is a dreamer," said Cards Coach Don Coryell, "but I don't know if I would have thought we would be 4-0 at this time if you had asked me before the season.

Coryell called it, "our best game—certainly in the second half it was" and said it will give confidence to his young team, which he pointed out averages only about three years' experience per starter.

Diminutive speedsters Terry Metcalf and Mel Gray were the gamebreakers.

Metcalf, second-year sensation from Long Beach State, piled up 95 yards rushing. He scored on a 24-yard run and his 42-yard punt return set up another TD.

Gray scored on passes of 57 and 59 yards from Jim Hart. Each time, Gray caught the ball in front of the defenders but outraced them to the end zone.

A four-yard Hart to Donny Anderson pass and two Jim Bakken field goals rounded out the scoring for the Cards, who tallied on five consecutive drives during one stretch.

But while the Cards rolled, the 49ers offense stalled.

Rookie Wilbur Jackson again looked like the 49ers' top runner in a decade by going 91 yards on 14 carries, but quarterback Joe Reed had another disastrous day.

He started out by hitting Gene Washington on a 58-yard bomb to open the day's point-making but managed only 1-for-6 for 5 yards after that while being sacked four times by a tough front four sparked by Council Rudolph and Larry Brooks.

The 49ers managed only a 20-yard Bruce Gossett field goal the rest of the way while a frustrated Nolan put Dennis Morrison at the helm in the third quarter. He responded with a promising 4-for-8 with one interception before leaving with a bruised rib. Rookie Tom Owen finished up.

Nolan announced after the game that the southpaw Morrison would start a week from tonight at Detroit if he were able to play. Nolan said "Dennis was throwing better than the others in practice last week."

The 49er defense forced a trio of early turnovers as San Francisco took a short-lived 9-0 lead. The turning point came when veteran cornerback Jim Johnson intercepted a pass and then had to leave with a bruised shoulder following the return.

The 49ers emerged with a 2-2 record, one game back of Los Angeles in the NFC West.

QB Morrison To Open For Niners

By RALPH CHATOIAN
I-J Sports Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — About the last thing 49er reserve quarterback Dennis Morrison could have imagined prior to the start of the season was that he would be the starter on a nationally televised Monday night game.

But that's exactly what is happening to the 23-year-old southpaw from Kansas State. After yesterday's humiliating 34-9 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals at Candlestick Park, head coach Dick Nolan named Morrison to replace Joe Reed at the helm for the Niners' next game, next Monday night at Detroit.

Morrison replaced the stumbling Reed yesterday in the third quarter and completed four of eight passes for 56 yards before being forced from the game with a bruised rib. He suffered the injury just after releasing a pass, "a helmet right here," said Morrison pointing to his ribs under his throwing arm.

Morrison was a 14th round draft choice in 1973 and spent last year on the taxi squad. He is as raw as they come, but he looked impressive in his debut yesterday.

Even Nolan had good words to say about Morrison and after the team's showing yesterday, good words from Nolan were few.

"Yes, Morrison played well. I was pleased with his performance," said Nolan. "If Dennis is able to go we'll start him against Detroit. If he can't play because of that rib injury (Tom) Owen would start."

Where does that leave Reed, the man who replaced the injured Steve Spurrier five games ago? Nolan said he is still in the 49er plans, but for now, he's the No. 3 man.

Morrison, dressing in the stall next to Reed, was the center of attention for the press. He said he was waiting for such a chance to perform, "but I was hoping Joe would have a good game." He said he got the wind knocked out of him when he took that helmet in the ribs but when asked if he thought he would be okay for the next game he smiled, "I just got some good news. I had better be ready to play." He was referring to the word that filtered down to him that he would start Monday.

One of the passes he completed went to Danny Abramowicz and it carried Danny's string to 95 straight NFL games in which he has caught at least one pass. The league record of 96, held to

Stabler Discusses His Game Thoughts

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Down 10-0 with less than four minutes gone in the first quarter, Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler had just one thing going though his mind.

"All I was saying to myself was not to get panicky because it was just a matter of time knowing that we would get rolling and score points and we did," Stabler said. "Now, that may sound a bit cocky, but we did score and we did win, right?"

Stabler, in hitting on 19-of-33 passes for 237 yards, went on to throw touchdown passes to Fred Biletnikoff, Clarence Davis and Cliff Branch as the Raiders defeated the Cleveland Browns 40-24 yesterday.

The victory put Oakland, now 3-1, in first place in the American Football Conference West Division as the faltering Browns, 1-3, fell into a tie with Houston for third in the AFC Central Division.

"I'd rather be in first place now with a 4-0 mark instead of 3-1, but I guess I'll have to be satisfied," said Oakland Coach John Madden, who picked up his 50th regular-season victory against only 17 defeats and seven ties. "But I'm real proud of the way our guys came back and won."

Not only did the Raiders have nearly twice as many offensive plays as the Browns (90-46), Oakland's net yards rushing and net yards passing also were about 100 per cent more than Cleveland's.

Besides Stabler's three TD passes, Davis — who carried 18 times for 116 yards — also scored on a one-yard burst in

Blue To Pitch For A's Tomorrow

Crucial Series For Manager Dark's Future

By GARY HUGHES

OAKLAND — What started as three out of five series is now down to two out of three. Tomorrow in Baltimore Vida Blue will go to the mound attempting to get the A's on top in the American League Championship series. Blue is 2-0 against the Orioles this year.

The question prior to the series was whether Oakland could stop Baltimore's momentum. The Orioles finished league play by winning their last nine games.

Saturday's game in the coliseum saw Baltimore extend its streak to 10 on the basis of some great hitting (three home runs), good, and at times sensational, defense and a very big mistake by Campy Campaneris.

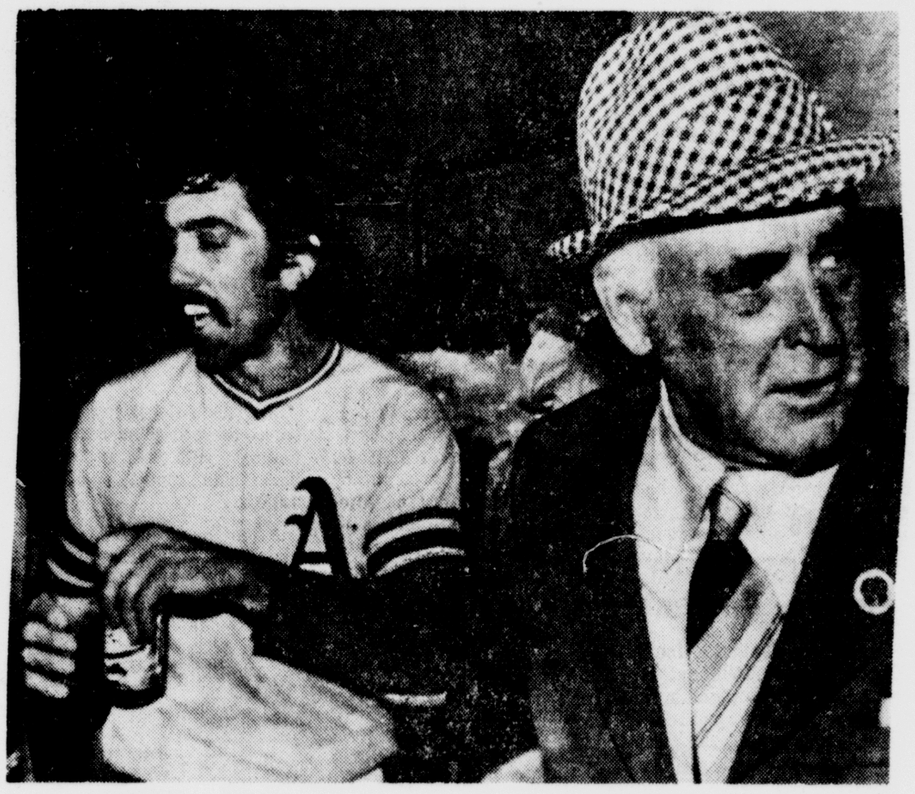
Paul Blair, Brooks Robinson, and Bobby Grich hit home runs off Oakland's ace Catfish Hunter. The top defensive plays were turned in by Don Baylor in left field and Mr. Third Base Brooks Robinson. The key play happened in the fifth inning. With the score 6-3, Campaneris was picked off first base by Mike Cuellar. He had just driven in Billy North for his third run batted in. There were no outs at the time and with Jackson, Bando, and Tenace coming up, the possibility of a big inning was very real. After that kickoff play, the wind was taken out of the A's sails. As Billy North said after the game, "You don't get picked off with the score 6-3."

Yesterday the A's came back, 5-0. Kenny Holtzman pitched a masterful five-hitter and home runs by Sal Bando and Ray Fosse paced the offense. North in centerfield was the defensive standout.

Just as an A's mistake was the key to Saturday's game, a bad Baltimore break cost the Orioles the game yesterday and possibly stopped their momentum. In the eighth inning, with runners on first and second, two out and pinch batter Curt Motton at bat with a two-ball, one-strike count, Holtzman let up on a fast ball that missed badly inside. As Motton ducked to get out of the way the ball hit his bat and rolled harmlessly to Gene Tenace at first base and Tenace made an unassisted putout to end the inning. Ray Fosse's three-run home run allowed Holtzman to coast in the ninth.

Alvin Dark is in Baltimore tonight with his job resting on the outcome of the next two or three games. I think he has to win the World Series to be back next year. If the A's don't get there, Dark will be gone. In a three-hour meeting with A's owner Charles Finley on Friday Dark fought to make sure Ray Fosse was in the lineup. It is to his credit that he did because it's beginning to look like Fosse may be the guy who will save his manager's job.

As he was leaving the clubhouse yesterday second baseman Dick Green said, "The reason we played so inconsistently this year was because Fosse was out hurt. The only person around here who doesn't think Ray can play is Finley."



CLUBHOUSE JOY — Catcher Ray Fosse and A's owner Charles O. Finley celebrated in the clubhouse yesterday after Oakland defeated Baltimore, 5-0, in the second game of the American League playoffs. Fosse's three-run homer helped pitcher Ken Holtzman, who threw a five-hitter. (UPI Telephoto)

Young Cardinals May Make Dream Come True

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The young St. Louis Cardinals are making their coach's dreams come true while the San Francisco 49ers' passing attack is turning into a nightmare for Dick Nolan.

St. Louis scored 24 points in the third quarter yesterday on the way to a 34-9 romp over San Francisco to give St. Louis a 4-0 mark atop the National Conference East. Only Minnesota and New England remain unbeaten along with the Cards.

"Every coach is a dreamer," said Cards Coach Don Coryell, "but I don't know if I would have thought we would be 4-0 at this time if you had asked me before the season.

Coryell called it, "our best game—certainly in the second half it was" and said it will give confidence to his young team, which he pointed out averages only about three years' experience per starter.

Diminutive speedsters Terry Metcalf and Mel Gray were the gamebreakers.

Metcalf, second-year sensation from Long Beach State, piled up 95 yards rushing. He scored on a 24-yard run and his 42-yard punt return set up another TD.

Gray scored on passes of 57 and 59 yards from Jim Hart. Each time, Gray caught the ball in front of the defenders but outraced them to the end zone.

A four-yard Hart to Donny Anderson pass and two Jim Bakken field goals rounded out the scoring for the Cards, who tallied on five consecutive drives during one stretch.

But while the Cards rolled, the 49ers offense stalled.

Rookie Wilbur Jackson again looked like the 49ers' top runner in a decade by going 91 yards on 14 carries, but quarterback Joe Reed had another disastrous day.

He started out by hitting Gene Washington on a 58-yard bomb to open the day's point-making but managed only 1-for-6 for 5 yards after that while being sacked four times by a tough front four sparked by Council Rudolph and Larry Brooks.

The 49ers managed only a 20-yard Bruce Gossett field goal the rest of the way while a frustrated Nolan put Dennis Morrison at the helm in the third quarter. He responded with a promising 4-for-8 with one interception before leaving with a bruised rib. Rookie Tom Owen finished up.

Nolan announced after the game that the southpaw Morrison would start a week from tonight at Detroit if he were able to play. Nolan said "Dennis was throwing better than the others in practice last week."

The 49er defense forced a trio of early turnovers as San Francisco took a short-lived 9-0 lead. The turning point came when veteran cornerback Jim Johnson intercepted a pass and then had to leave with a bruised shoulder following the return.

The 49ers emerged with a 2-2 record, one game back of Los Angeles in the NFC West.

QB Morrison To Open For Niners

By RALPH CHATOIAN
I-J Sports Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — About the last thing 49er reserve quarterback Dennis Morrison could have imagined prior to the start of the season was that he would be the starter on a nationally televised Monday night game.

But that's exactly what is happening to the 23-year-old southpaw from Kansas State. After yesterday's humiliating 34-9 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals at Candlestick Park, head coach Dick Nolan named Morrison to replace Joe Reed at the helm for the Niners' next game, next Monday night at Detroit.

Morrison replaced the stumbling Reed yesterday in the third quarter and completed four of eight passes for 56 yards before being forced from the game with a bruised rib. He suffered the injury just after releasing a pass, "a helmet right here," said Morrison pointing to his ribs under his throwing arm.

Morrison was a 14th round draft choice in 1973 and spent last year on the taxi squad. He is as raw as they come, but he looked impressive in his debut yesterday.

Even Nolan had good words to say about Morrison and after the team's showing yesterday, good words from Nolan were few.

"Yes, Morrison played well. I was pleased with his performance," said Nolan. "If Dennis is able to go we'll start him against Detroit. If he can't play because of that rib injury (Tom) Owen would start."

Where does that leave Reed, the man who replaced the injured Steve Spurrier five games ago? Nolan said he is still in the 49er plans, but for now, he's the No. 3 man.

Morrison, dressing in the stall next to Reed, was the center of attention for the press. He said he was waiting for such a chance to perform, "but I was hoping Joe would have a good game." He said he got the wind knocked out of him when he took that helmet in the ribs but when asked if he thought he would be okay for the next game he smiled, "I just got some good news. I had better be ready to play." He was referring to the word that filtered down to him that he would start Monday.

One of the passes he completed went to Danny Abramowicz and it carried Danny's string to 95 straight NFL games in which he has caught at least one pass. The league record of 96, held to

Stabler Discusses His Game Thoughts

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Down 10-0 with less than four minutes gone in the first quarter, Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler had just one thing going though his mind.

"All I was saying to myself was not to get panicky because it was just a matter of time knowing that we would get rolling and score points and we did," Stabler said. "Now, that may sound a bit cocky, but we did score and we did win, right?"

Stabler, in hitting on 19-of-33 passes for 237 yards, went on to throw touchdown passes to Fred Biletnikoff, Clarence Davis and Cliff Branch as the Raiders defeated the Cleveland Browns 40-24 yesterday.

The victory put Oakland, now 3-1, in first place in the American Football Conference West Division as the faltering Browns, 1-3, fell into a tie with Houston for third in the AFC Central Division.

"I'd rather be in first place now with a 4-0 mark instead of 3-1, but I guess I'll have to be satisfied," said Oakland Coach John Madden, who picked up his 50th regular-season victory against only 17 defeats and seven ties. "But I'm real proud of the way our guys came back and won."

Not only did the Raiders have nearly twice as many offensive plays as the Browns (90-46), Oakland's net yards rushing and net yards passing also were about 100 per cent more than Cleveland's.

Besides Stabler's three TD passes, Davis — who carried 18 times for 116 yards — also scored on a one-yard burst in

THE UNEXPLAINED

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

On Campus In 1963, A Secretary Stepped Back Into The 1920s

Mrs. Coleen Buterbaugh is one of those people who have stepped through the invisible doorway that leads to the past.

On the morning of Oct. 23, 1963, Mrs. Buterbaugh was walking briskly across the campus of Nebraska Wesleyan College where she served as secretary to the dean, Dr. Samuel Dahl. She was on her way to start work for the day.

It was, Mrs. Buterbaugh recalled later, exactly 8:30 a.m. when she walked up the steps of the C. C. White Building which housed her office and also served as campus music center. As she strode down the long hallway she passed several yawning students shuffling to early classes. Some were still emptying their paper cups of morning coffee.

Mrs. Buterbaugh's first destination on this particular day was the office of Dr. Tom McCourt, a visiting lecturer from Scotland. It was an office she knew weell.

As she stepped through the door she knew immediately that something was wrong. Uncanny.

She was almost suffocated by an overwhelming odor of stale, musty air, as though someone had opened an old trunk full of mouldering junk. Then Mrs. Buterbaugh was taken aback to see a woman in the office standing with her back to her and bending over to reach into a filing cabinet drawer.

The woman, whoever she was, struck Mrs. Buterbaugh as being very odd. She was tall, slender and dark-haired but dressed in the style of another era — a long-sleeved white shirtwaist and an ankle-length brown skirt.

What in the world's going on here, thought Mrs. Buterbaugh? Who is this woman? And why does the office look so utterly strange?

Nothing about the place was normal. The desk, the filing cabinets, the curtains they all looked incredibly old.

It was when she glanced at the curtains that Mrs. Buterbaugh noted, with alarm, that even the scene outside the window was different. This was crazy! Why, there were no streets out there. And Willard Sorority House, one of the familiar campus buildings, wasn't anywhere to be seen.

Badly frightened by this time, Mrs. Buterbaugh wheeled and rushed out of the office. She headed straight to the dean, Dr. Dahl, and blurted out of her bizarre story.

He listened attentively, then asked her to accompany him to the office of Dr. Glenn Callan, head of the college's social science department, who had been on the faculty since 1900.

The elderly professor head Mrs. Buterbaugh's account, cross-examining her about details. Then he said that she had described the office and campus as they had been in the 1920s. The women fitted the description of Miss Clara Mills, whose office it once was. She died in the late 1930s.

When Mrs. Buterbaugh later returned to the office, everything was back to normal.

Parapsychologists (scientists who study psychic phenomena) call her experience retrocognition — the projection of the mind backward through time.

How or why did it happen?

This is part of the unexplained.

Morton: U.S. Should Expand, Exploit Energy

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (AP) — America should exploit its energy potential and expand, U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton says.

"Let's not let the Democrats kid us and tell us we are going into a depression," Morton told a Nevada Republican fund-raising party yesterday. "This is no time to slow down. This is a time for the country to expand."

Morton said enough energy can be developed in America for centuries without destroying the environment.

He said, "America can no longer remain a hostage to a cartel of oil-rich sheiks who produce a 30-cent gallon of oil and sell it as $13 oil."

President Readies Economic Message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has made the major decisions on his anti-inflation message, which one White House aide said will ask for "restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice" from all sectors of the nation.

The proposals will be presented tomorrow in a speech to Congress.

The problem is big. Ford's goals are to curtail inflation, head off a recession, reverse the U.S. dependence on foreign oil, revive a depressed housing industry, bring interest rates down, stimulate the stock market, help power companies expand, shelter the worst victims —the jobless and the working poor —from inflation's pains and keep the Republicans from taking a shellacking in next month's elections.

Time Magazine said yesterday that the economic proposals would include a 5 per cent surtax on individual income taxes for persons in higher income brackets and on corporations.

The plan, according to Time, also would provide some form of tax relief for low-income families, expand public-service employment programs, provide federal financial aid for the mortgage market, new energy conservation measures and propose a $5 billion cut in the federal budget.

Ford spent one hour and 15 minutes with economic advisers yesterday afternoon, making final choices on economic and energy conservation programs.

"Almost all major decisions have been made," said press secretary Ron Nessen.

He said Ford would ask Americans "to exhibit restraint, self-discipline and sacrifice, and I want to emphasize that the government itself is not exempt from any of these three."

Arriving at Bethesda Naval Hospital for a visit with his wife, Ford was asked about the proposals. "We expect to have a fair program," the President said.

Nessen said the burdens "will be distributed equally ... so that everybody bears their just share."

Some sort of big, broad and probably temporary tax increase appeared inevitable — the first general income tax increase since the Vietnam War.

Additional revenues are necessary to offset the losses arising from new tax incentives for business investment, while still decreasing federal borrowing so as to reduce pressure on interest rates.

Some White House advisers said a short term surtax —a percentage increase on regular federal income taxes —might be sought for all tax payers with income over a specified level, perhaps, $15,000.

The President is certain to seek to reawaken interest in conserving energy.

He has been urged by energy adviser John Sawhill to use the tax laws to induce people to consume less gasoline and heating fuels. But the White House ruled out rationing or any increase in gasoline taxes.

Other uses of the tax laws to save energy—such as a horsepower tax on new cars seemed unlikely for the time being.

"Inflation strikes society unevenly" Ford told his economic summit a week ago. "We must provide productive work for those without jobs ... and correct inflation-caused inequities."

That statement suggested Ford would propose a tax cut for low-income working people and a multi-billion dollar program to enable state and local governments to hire people who lose their jobs in a stagnant economy.

More generous unemployment benefits are likely.

These ideas were generally endorsed at the economic summit and take on new urgency with last month's sharp jump in the unemployment rate to 5.8 per cent.

For the poor who earn too little to pay taxes, such steps as increased food stamp rations may be proposed.

Ford also is thought likely to revive the Nixon administration's proposal for taxes on oil industry windfall profits. Oil-state Democrats in congress have blocked that idea for nearly a year.

The housing and banking industries are pressing for an incentive to savers so that increased deposits would make more mortgage money available.

An exemption from taxation for up to $500 in interest earned by savings accounts has been proposed, but it would cost the Treasury billions.

Law Students At New College Pass 'Baby Bar'

Seventy per cent of law students from New College in Sausalito who took the "baby bar" exam in June recorded passing scores, College President John Leary has announced.

"Baby bar" exam is a test administered by state Bar Association that all law students studying at unaccredited schools or on their own must take after their first year of study. They must pass to continue their law work.

Of the 2,200 students from throughout the state who took the test, only 37 per cent passed, Leary said.

This year, the 50 students in the New College law school will be attending classes at a new facility in San Francisco, 1254 Market Street.

Cocaine Ring Said Smashed

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the arrest of 150 persons since last February,including 45 this weekend, authorities say they have smashed an international narcotics ring responsible for selling more than 300 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $35 million.

Manhattan District Attorney Richard Kuh said yesterday the arrests "should have a major impact on the traffic from Colombia, a major source of cocaine —if not the major source of cocaine" in the metropolitan area.

Officials declined to characterize all the suspects as being part of a single narcotics ring but Kuh said there is some indication of interrelationships.

The President's Golfing Weekend

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford played a game of golf with comedian Bob Hope last weekend and one of the players said he won a little money.

Hope and a friend of his, Hugh Davis, played golf Saturday with Ford and former Rep. John Byrnes, R-Wis. Davis said he and Ford "managed to take a buck from Bob."

The comedian praised Ford's golf game, saying: "I know one thing — that if the President didn't have this job and could practice, he could be probably a pro. He is so muscular and he plays golf like Arnold Palmer and swims like Mark Spitz."

REDWOOD BLANKED

Terra Linda's Defense Tough

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Terra Linda High School, bullying on defense and opportunistic on offense, defeated Redwood, 15-0 Saturday night in a Marin County Athletic League opening football game at San Rafael's Miller Field.

Linebacker Larry Loberg joined linemen Tim Larkey, Rich Mart: and Jim Sullivan in a search-and-destroy mission that ignored the Redwood offensive line, while forcing three fumbles and blocking two punts.

Two of the fumbles led to touchdowns, and one of the blocks produced a safety as Terra Linda did all the scoring in the second quarter.

Without help from the defense, Terra Linda might never have scored. Despite 68 yards rushing by Dick Labarthe, the Trojans gained only 110 total yards (unofficially). But the Giants, suffering from the same woes on offense that plagued them in an 0-3 preseason, managed only 19 yards passing and -6 rushing.

Labarthe also recovered the fumble, on the Redwood 44 yard line, that led to the first touchdown. It came seven plays later, with less than a minute gone in the second period, as quarterback Brad Lucchi dove in from one yard out.

Redwood's next three series ended with an interception, the blocked punt-safety and finally with the fumble that set up the last touchdown. Larkey cuaght Giant quarterback Mark Chapman 23 yards behind the line of scrimmage and knocked the ball loose, whereupon Trojan end Dave Losk fell on it at the Redwood 25.

It took nine plays to score, with Labarthe plunging the final yard.

Although inexperienced and outplayed, Redwood's defending MCAL co-champions showed admirable spirit and determination. The team has scored just once in four games this season, but they displayed tenacity.

YUBA 49ERS

Marin Tars Defeated , 3-0, In Football

By BRIAN SOBEL

It was a football game marred by offensive miscues and misery. The Yuba College 49ers edged the College of Marin Tars, 3-0, Saturday.

The non-league contest and home opener for the Tars (0-3) was almost 50 minutes old before the 49ers' Bob Holland kicked a 26-yard field goal, much to the disappointment of some 375 fans.

The field goal was set up by two long gains: the first a 42-yard bomb from Yuba quarterback Mike Worley to the receiver and kicker Bob Holland and the second a 21-yard sprint by Steve Razo a 6-foot-1, 200-pound fullback. After Marin held Yuba for three consecutive plays, Holland booted the game-decider with 10:04 remaining.

Although the contest was low scoring, there was plenty of action based on the number of turnovers. Yuba fumbled the football away three times. Two out of five Marin bobbles were recovered by the 49ers.

Marin quarterback Hoza Wright completed seven out of 19 passes for 101 yards. Tar fullback Steve D'Ambra led Marin runners with 73 yards.

Meanwhile, Yuba's quarterback Mike Worley completed seven of 18 passes for 84 yards while the 49ers's backs rushed for 173 yards in 55 efforts.

Scoring was also limited by penalties. Yuba was called for 10 penalties accounting for 90 yards and Marin was assessed nine penalties for 72 yards.

BLOCKED PUNT HELPS

Wildcats Trip Lincoln '11'

By DAVID DEL GRANDE

The Marin Catholic High School football team, coming to life after blocking a Lincoln punt late in the first half, stormed past the Mustangs 23-6 in Greenbrae Saturday, before 300 Wildcat fans.

The Wildcats trailed 6-0 with 10 seconds to go in the second quarter when defensive end John Roche blocked a Mustang punt at the nine yard line. The ball then rolled through the end zone for a safety and Marin Catholic trailed 6-2 at the half.

With thoughts of its first victory of the season, Marin Catholic dominated the second half. Led by a devastating ground game that netted 229 yards on the day, the Wildcats scored twice in the middle of the third period and then coasted in.

On the first play following a Mustang punt with five minutes to go in the third quarter, senior Steve Lombardi swept right end for 31 yards and a touchdown giving Marin a 9-6 advantage. Just seven plays later, following Terry O'Brien's fumble recovery, sophomore Ed Ugarte put the Wildcats (1-3) ahead 16-6 with a four-yard touchdown run. On the afternoon, Lombardi rushed for 91 yards, Ugarte 71.

Surprise! Analy Tops Rancho '11'

By DIANE FISHER

Based on pre-season play, Rancho Cotate High School should have beaten Analy in the Sonoma County League football opener Saturday in Rohnert Park.

But such was not the case as the Tigers upset Rancho, 6-0.

Rancho Cotate (1-1-2) was strongly favored over Analy, coming out of the pre-season with a win and two ties compared to the Tigers one non-league victory and two losses.

After a lackluster first half, Analy (2-2-0) recovered an Eric Mogel fumble to gain possession on the Rancho 35.

Operating out of a short-punt formation, the Tigers scored on an eight-yard run by running back Ron Schoen.

Late in the fourth quarter the Cougars threatened but they were stopped by a tough Analy defense.

REDWOOD BLANKED

Terra Linda's Defense Tough

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Terra Linda High School, bullying on defense and opportunistic on offense, defeated Redwood, 15-0 Saturday night in a Marin County Athletic League opening football game at San Rafael's Miller Field.

Linebacker Larry Loberg joined linemen Tim Larkey, Rich Mart: and Jim Sullivan in a search-and-destroy mission that ignored the Redwood offensive line, while forcing three fumbles and blocking two punts.

Two of the fumbles led to touchdowns, and one of the blocks produced a safety as Terra Linda did all the scoring in the second quarter.

Without help from the defense, Terra Linda might never have scored. Despite 68 yards rushing by Dick Labarthe, the Trojans gained only 110 total yards (unofficially). But the Giants, suffering from the same woes on offense that plagued them in an 0-3 preseason, managed only 19 yards passing and -6 rushing.

Labarthe also recovered the fumble, on the Redwood 44 yard line, that led to the first touchdown. It came seven plays later, with less than a minute gone in the second period, as quarterback Brad Lucchi dove in from one yard out.

Redwood's next three series ended with an interception, the blocked punt-safety and finally with the fumble that set up the last touchdown. Larkey cuaght Giant quarterback Mark Chapman 23 yards behind the line of scrimmage and knocked the ball loose, whereupon Trojan end Dave Losk fell on it at the Redwood 25.

It took nine plays to score, with Labarthe plunging the final yard.

Although inexperienced and outplayed, Redwood's defending MCAL co-champions showed admirable spirit and determination. The team has scored just once in four games this season, but they displayed tenacity.

YUBA 49ERS

By BRIAN SOBEL

It was a football game marred by offensive miscues and misery. The Yuba College 49ers edged the College of Marin Tars, 3-0, Saturday.

The non-league contest and home opener for the Tars (0-3) was almost 50 minutes old before the 49ers' Bob Holland kicked a 26-yard field goal, much to the disappointment of some 375 fans.

The field goal was set up by two long gains: the first a 42-yard bomb from Yuba quarterback Mike Worley to the receiver and kicker Bob Holland and the second a 21-yard sprint by Steve Razo a 6-foot-1, 200-pound fullback. After Marin held Yuba for three consecutive plays, Holland booted the game-decider with 10:04 remaining.

Although the contest was low scoring, there was plenty of action based on the number of turnovers. Yuba fumbled the football away three times. Two out of five Marin bobbles were recovered by the 49ers.

Marin quarterback Hoza Wright completed seven out of 19 passes for 101 yards. Tar fullback Steve D'Ambra led Marin runners with 73 yards.

Meanwhile, Yuba's quarterback Mike Worley completed seven of 18 passes for 84 yards while the 49ers's backs rushed for 173 yards in 55 efforts.

Scoring was also limited by penalties. Yuba was called for 10 penalties accounting for 90 yards and Marin was assessed nine penalties for 72 yards.

BLOCKED PUNT HELPS

Wildcats Trip Lincoln '11'

By DAVID DEL GRANDE

The Marin Catholic High School football team, coming to life after blocking a Lincoln punt late in the first half, stormed past the Mustangs 23-6 in Greenbrae Saturday, before 300 Wildcat fans.

The Wildcats trailed 6-0 with 10 seconds to go in the second quarter when defensive end John Roche blocked a Mustang punt at the nine yard line. The ball then rolled through the end zone for a safety and Marin Catholic trailed 6-2 at the half.

With thoughts of its first victory of the season, Marin Catholic dominated the second half. Led by a devastating ground game that netted 229 yards on the day, the Wildcats scored twice in the middle of the third period and then coasted in.

On the first play following a Mustang punt with five minutes to go in the third quarter, senior Steve Lombardi swept right end for 31 yards and a touchdown giving Marin a 9-6 advantage. Just seven plays later, following Terry O'Brien's fumble recovery, sophomore Ed Ugarte put the Wildcats (1-3) ahead 16-6 with a four-yard touchdown run. On the afternoon, Lombardi rushed for 91 yards, Ugarte 71.

Surprise! Analy Tops Rancho '11'

By DIANE FISHER

Based on pre-season play, Rancho Cotate High School should have beaten Analy in the Sonoma County League football opener Saturday in Rohnert Park.

But such was not the case as the Tigers upset Rancho, 6-0.

Rancho Cotate (1-1-2) was strongly favored over Analy, coming out of the pre-season with a win and two ties compared to the Tigers one non-league victory and two losses.

After a lackluster first half, Analy (2-2-0) recovered an Eric Mogel fumble to gain possession on the Rancho 35.

Operating out of a short-punt formation, the Tigers scored on an eight-yard run by running back Ron Schoen.

Late in the fourth quarter the Cougars threatened but they were stopped by a tough Analy defense.

Colson Seeking Term Reduction On 'Even-Handed Justice' Basis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing former President Richard M. Nixon's pardon, Charles W. Colson today asked for a reduction in his prison sentence in the interest of "even-handed justice."

Colson, former special counsel and political operative for Nixon, pleaded guilty in June to obstruction of justice by spreading derogatory information about Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg. He was given a $5,000 fine and a 1-3 year sentence, and now is at the federal prison farm at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

"President Ford's action in pardoning former President Nixon raises serious questions with respect to even-handed justice for former subordinates of Mr. Nixon who have been prosecuted for offenses in which he was a participant," Colson's lawyer said in a one-sentence motion filed in U.S. District Court.

"This is particularly troubling in the case of Mr. Colson, who was convicted for disseminating derogatory information about Daniel Ellsberg's attorney at Mr. Nixon's direct request."

After Ford's full pardon of Nixon for any Watergate-connected crimes he may have committed, Colson's lawyer asked the White House about a pardon but the Justice Department recommended against it.

A 10-page memorandum in support of the motion also cited the death of Colson's father Aug. 19 as a reason for a reduction. It said Colson's 73-year-old mother was "wholly dependent emotionally" on her only child.

It also said U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell had received erroneous data about the average sentences given other defendents in obstruction of justice cases in fiscal 1973. It said the average sentence for defendants who pleaded guilty was only 13 months.

But the main thrust of the memorandum dealt with the comparative fairness in treatment that Colson received.

"We do not mean to suggest that Mr. Colson's actions were in any sense legitimized by virtue of the fact that they were done at the request of the President," it said.

Blinder Responds To Critics

San Anselmo Mayor Martin G. Blinder today issued a formal statement in response to a charge by the San Rafael city administration that his proposal for decriminalization of drug use is a "morally and socially bankrupt position."

The San Rafael charge that Blinder's views also amount to "a violation of the oath of office" is contained in a memo by City Mgr. William J. Bielser and Chief Lawrence R. Kelly. The memo recommends the city dump its proposal for a countywide narcotics unit, a move that will be considered at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Blinder responded: "Aside from the question of whether we hire policemen to determine for us what is a correct moral and social position, I have always believed that the police must enforce any law on the books — consistently and without exception. My quarrel is with the drug laws themselves, which, by driving the addict to burglaries and muggings to finance a habit made prohibitively expensive by such laws, create crime rather than reduce it.

"Rather than face the situation squarely ourselves, we pass it on to police. We make a police problem of what is in reality a social-medical-behavioral problem... Those who support such laws and the costly, futile narc squads to enforce them doubtless are well intended, but their urge to punish may exceed their urge to solve the drug problem."

DAVID KUNST

Man Who Walked Around The World

WASECA, Minn. (UPI) — David Kunst, the first man ever to walk around the world, was back in his hometown today, planning to go some place else to write a book about his adventures and thinking of a new feat to top the old one.

The 15,000-mile walk cost Kunst a brother and a wife but he still called it "a human thing, a fantastic accomplishment for man."

Townspeople, irritated earlier by a newspaper article in which the 35-year-old Kunst had made outspoken comments about marriage, Waseca and "damn dumb foreigners," turned out by the thousands Saturday to welcome him back.

However, absent or inconspicuous was his wife, Jan, whom he left alone with their two sons and a daughter to make the walk which took four and one-half years.

In the article, Kunst said marriage was a "bad idea" and added, "I've known a lot of women all over the world, and it didn't always end with a handshake."

This weekend Kunst said his wife had done a "helluva job," but that her "domestication" and his "liberal ways" caused mutual resentment.

"I have three great kids and maybe someday they'll reflect back and realize that they had an honest father and that people can have differences in a relationship and still have a greater understanding," he said.

Kunst and a brother, John, left Waseca June 20, 1970, in the company of a mule named Willie Make It, primarily for a colossal adventure and also to raise donations for UNICEF.

John was shot to death by bandits in Afghanistan. After recouperating from serious injuries David resumed the walk with brother, Peter, Santa Ana, Calif., who walked through Pakistan, India and Australia where he dropped out due to foot trouble. He rejoined David a few miles from home.

this trip, and we said two Kunst brothers would finish it," David told the crowd while Peter stood in the background weeping quietly for the slain brother.

Kunst's size 13A final pair of walking shoes were actioned off — the right for $150, the left for $170.

Auto Workers In Madrid Stage A Warning Strike

MADRID (UPI) — More than 4,000 workers at the Seat autobile factory, Spain's largest, stopped work today in a warning strike.

In Madrid, police released most of the 170 persons, including three priests, who were arrested Saturday in a church when they met to discuss labor problems at a local factory.

Labor sources estimated 30,000 workers were idled throughout the nation during the second week of labor troubles, either on illegal strikes or locked out of their factories.

Some of the work stoppages were called to press wage demands and others in support of the 13,600 auto workers locked out of the Fasa-Renault plant in Valladolid. Last week some of the workers clashed with police in street demonstrations that injured 10 policemen and led to 37 arrests.

Representatives of the auto workers and Fasa-Renault have agreed to reopen the plant tomorrow while negotiations continue for a new contract. The workers seek an extra $17 addition to their average weekly wage of $70.

They were supported by striking workers at the Fasa-Renault plant in Seville, which was evacuated Friday and shut indefinitely, and by aviation workers there. Strikes are illegal in Spain.

More Successes For Cards, Pats

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For the first few weeks, winning was an experience. Now it's becoming commonplace for the New England Patriots and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The two clubs, both picked to finish near the bottom of their divisions, continued to rate as pro football's biggest stories as they ran their records to 4-0 yesterday with impressive victories.

New England, which numbers Super Bowl champion Miami and powerhouse Los Angeles among its victims, annihilated the winless Baltimore Colts 42-3, even pulling its first team midway through the third period.

And St. Louis, trailing 9-0 at halftime, erupted for 24 points in the third period to swamp the San Francisco 49ers 34-9.

Jim Plunkett, who left the game in the third period, threw three touchdown passes, two of them to Reggie Rucker, as the Patriots took a 21-3 lead at the half and then tacked on 14 more points in the third period to turn the game into a rout and ruin Joe Thomas' head coaching debut.

Vikings 23, Cowboys 21

Bengals 28, Redskins 17

Bills 27, Packers 7

Jim Braxton scored on three short runs and Joe Ferguson passed nine yards to Ahmad Rashad for another score as Buffalo trounced Green Bay.

Steelers 13, Oilers 7

Falcons 14, Giants 7

Bears 24, Saints 10

Broncos 17, Chiefs 14

Rookie Jon Keyworth scored twice on short bursts in the second half as Denver beat Kansas City for its first win.

Rams 16, Lions 13

John Hadl, who had his 2,000th career completion, threw four yards to Bob Klein as Los Angeles jumped to a 16-0 lead

Eagles 13, Chargers 7

Defensive tackle Bill Dunstan returned a fumble 46 yards for a touchdown and Tommy Sullivan plunged a yard to lead Philadelphia past San Diego.

MIXUP — Cleveland quarterback Mike Phipps (15) and halfback Billy Lefear ran into each other on what was supposed to be a handoff yesterday against Oakland. The play typified the Browns' frustration as they lost to the Raiders, 40-24. (UPI Telephoto)

'Penguin' Cey Is On The Rise

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — They call Ron Cey "The Penguin," but in the eyes of the Los Angeles Dodgers he stands more like an eagle today.

Cey, whose squatty 5-foot-9, 185-pound frame certainly belies his ability as one of baseball's premier run producers, turned in one of the best hitting performances in National League playoff history yesterday and because of it the Dodgers now are only one victory away from their first pennant since 1966.

The 26-year-old third baseman, nicknamed "Penguin" because of his unusual walk, collected four hits, including a pair of doubles and a homer, while leading the Dodgers to a 5-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was their second straight victory in the best-of-five series, and they return home now needing only one win in three games to wrap up the NL flag.

Lefthander Doug Rau, a 13-game winner during the regular season, will try to get the Dodgers a sweep of the series tomorrow at Los Angeles. He will be opposed by Bruce Kison, a righthander who posted a 9-8 record.

It was not too surprising to those who had seen Cey play during the regular season that he should emerge as the hero of game No. 2, but it was a bit strange to Cey himself. He had been so ill the past two weeks he was beginning to wonder if he could contribute anything to the Dodger effort.

Saturday, for example, he made two errors in the field for the first time this season and went hitless in three at-bats. And, in his first at-bat yesterday he popped out with the bases loaded.

"I've had a virus the last two weeks and was not feeling up to par," said Cey. "I didn't miss any playing time but developed an ulcerated tongue and didn't eat. I lost about six pounds. It's hard to say if it's significant, but I switched to a lighter bat today, from 34 ounces to 32. When you get tired you have a tendency to uppercut. I was much quicker today."

After failing in his first at-bat, Cey was unstoppable. He homered off the leftfield foul pole leading off the fourth, doubled in the sixth, triggered the decisive three-run eighth with another double and singled in the ninth. He joins Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson as the only National Leaguers to collect four hits in a playoff game.

The Browns other two touchdowns came on a 34-yard pass from Mike Phipps to Greg Pruitt and a 44-yard run by Hugh McKinnis 52 seconds into the final period. Don Cockroft's 46-yard field goal completed the Browns' scoring.

Branch and the Browns' Cliff Brooks were ejected from the game following a fight in the third period after Branch beat Brooks for a touchdown.

More Successes For Cards, Pats

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For the first few weeks, winning was an experience. Now it's becoming commonplace for the New England Patriots and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The two clubs, both picked to finish near the bottom of their divisions, continued to rate as pro football's biggest stories as they ran their records to 4-0 yesterday with impressive victories.

New England, which numbers Super Bowl champion Miami and powerhouse Los Angeles among its victims, annihilated the winless Baltimore Colts 42-3, even pulling its first team midway through the third period.

And St. Louis, trailing 9-0 at halftime, erupted for 24 points in the third period to swamp the San Francisco 49ers 34-9.

Jim Plunkett, who left the game in the third period, threw three touchdown passes, two of them to Reggie Rucker, as the Patriots took a 21-3 lead at the half and then tacked on 14 more points in the third period to turn the game into a rout and ruin Joe Thomas' head coaching debut.

Vikings 23, Cowboys 21

Bengals 28, Redskins 17

Bills 27, Packers 7

Jim Braxton scored on three short runs and Joe Ferguson passed nine yards to Ahmad Rashad for another score as Buffalo trounced Green Bay.

Steelers 13, Oilers 7

Preston Pearson ran nine yards for the deciding TD early in the fourth period as Pittsburgh overcame stubborn Houston.

Falcons 14, Giants 7

Safety Ray Brown returned an interception 59 yards for the go-ahead score as Atlanta recorded its first victory by beating the Giants.

Bears 24, Saints 10

Broncos 17, Chiefs 14

Rookie Jon Keyworth scored twice on short bursts in the second half as Denver beat Kansas City for its first win.

Rams 16, Lions 13

John Hadl, who had his 2,000th career completion, threw four yards to Bob Klein as Los Angeles jumped to a 16-0 lead

Eagles 13, Chargers 7

'Penguin' Cey Is On The Rise

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — They call Ron Cey "The Penguin," but in the eyes of the Los Angeles Dodgers he stands more like an eagle today.

Cey, whose squatty 5-foot-9, 185-pound frame certainly belies his ability as one of baseball's premier run producers, turned in one of the best hitting performances in National League playoff history yesterday and because of it the Dodgers now are only one victory away from their first pennant since 1966.

The 26-year-old third baseman, nicknamed "Penguin" because of his unusual walk, collected four hits, including a pair of doubles and a homer, while leading the Dodgers to a 5-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was their second straight victory in the best-of-five series, and they return home now needing only one win in three games to wrap up the NL flag.

Lefthander Doug Rau, a 13-game winner during the regular season, will try to get the Dodgers a sweep of the series tomorrow at Los Angeles. He will be opposed by Bruce Kison, a righthander who posted a 9-8 record.

It was not too surprising to those who had seen Cey play during the regular season that he should emerge as the hero of game No. 2, but it was a bit strange to Cey himself. He had been so ill the past two weeks he was beginning to wonder if he could contribute anything to the Dodger effort.

Saturday, for example, he made two errors in the field for the first time this season and went hitless in three at-bats. And, in his first at-bat yesterday he popped out with the bases loaded.

"I've had a virus the last two weeks and was not feeling up to par," said Cey. "I didn't miss any playing time but developed an ulcerated tongue and didn't eat. I lost about six pounds. It's hard to say if it's significant, but I switched to a lighter bat today, from 34 ounces to 32. When you get tired you have a tendency to uppercut. I was much quicker today."

After failing in his first at-bat, Cey was unstoppable. He homered off the leftfield foul pole leading off the fourth, doubled in the sixth, triggered the decisive three-run eighth with another double and singled in the ninth. He joins Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson as the only National Leaguers to collect four hits in a playoff game.

The Browns other two touchdowns came on a 34-yard pass from Mike Phipps to Greg Pruitt and a 44-yard run by Hugh McKinnis 52 seconds into the final period. Don Cockroft's 46-yard field goal completed the Browns' scoring.

Branch and the Browns' Cliff Brooks were ejected from the game following a fight in the third period after Branch beat Brooks for a touchdown.

When asked if he said anything to Morrison after that pass, Abramowicz said, "No, he knows how I feel." He said the record, "of course goes through my mind. I'll be glad when that's over with."

Danny said he would be very proud to set such a record. "It takes eight years for a record like this. It means you have to stay healthy for every game, in addition to catching a pass."

Different Views In A.L. Playoffs

Sports
Monday, October 7, 1974
Independent-Journal, 33

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI) — Baseball players in general and managers in particular like to talk about momentum, that undefinable emotional state they claim decides championships.

In the first two games of the American League playoffs here, which the A's and Orioles split, both managers, Al Dark of Oakland and Earl Weaver of Baltimore, talked about momentum.

Weaver claimed his club had it coming into the playoffs because the Orioles had won their last nine regular season games to clinch the East.

Then yesterday, after the A's had beaten the Orioles, 5-0, behind the five-hit pitching of lefty Ken Holtzman, Dark claimed his club now had the momentum.

"I think winning the second game of any short series is the most important," said Dark, "because it gives you momentum."

Weaver didn't exactly buy that.

"All it means is that we are now 1-1 and the club that wins two of the next three will play in the World Series," he said.

The day before, though, after the Orioles had opened the playoffs with a 6-3 victory, Weaver said "momentum is on our side."

No matter, the series is squared at one victory apiece and now the scene shifts to Baltimore where the next three games are scheduled to be played, starting tomorrow with Vida Blue pitching for Oakland and Jim Palmer for Baltimore.

Yesterday's game wasn't as onesided as the final score would indicate.

Lefty Dave McNally matched Holtzman almost serve for serve through three innings in a scoreless tie. Then in the fourth, Oakland got a break when sure-handed second baseman Bobby Grich dropped a high foul popup behind first by Sal Bando.

On the very next pitch, the Oakland strongman lined a homer over the left field fence. It stayed 1-0 until the sixth when Billy North walked to open the inning, went to second on a wild pitch and scored easily on a two-out triple off the right centerfield fence by Joe Rudi.

The blow finished McNally as Weaver rushed in Wayne Garland, Bob Reynolds and Grant Jackson from the bullpen in an effort to keep the A's within range on the hopes that Holtzman might crack in the late innings.

Holtzman, who retired 16 batters in a row from the third through two out in the eighth, did crack a bit when Enos Cabell and Andy Etchebarren singled. But Holtzman got pinch-hitter Curt Motton on a roller to first and seemed home free.

Not that he needed it, but the A's gave him three insurance runs in the bottom of the eighth, again as a result of a break.

Gene Tenace walked after two out and stole second while the Baltimore infield played back on Claudell Washington. The rookie outfielder, who played right in place of hobbling Reggie Jackson, hit a sharp grounder to short but Frank Baker, spiked above the left knee earlier in the inning as he tagged out pinch-runner Herb Washington on a steal attempt, booted it for an error. That brought Ray Fosse to the plate and he jumped at the chance with a long homer to left that finished the Orioles and evened the series.

"It just turned out not being our day," moaned Weaver. "We wanted both games here. How else can you see it? We didn't play bad ball. Two errors were the big plays."

After Palmer tomorrow, Weaver will pitch Mike Cuellar, the opening game winner in game four, with McNally or Ross Grimsley for the fifth game, if it goes that far. Dark will follow Blue with Jim Hunter, who lost to Cuellar on Saturday, with Holtzman coming back for the fifth game.

Baker took a couple of stitches on his cut after yesterday's game and should be ready for backup duty behind Mark Belanger if needed. Jackson, who pulled a hamstring muscle late in the season, was the designated hitter yesterday and probably will fill the same role tomorrow.

See A's box score on inside page.

Blue To Pitch For A's Tomorrow

Crucial Series For Manager Dark's Future

By GARY HUGHES

OAKLAND — What started as three out of five series is now down to two out of three. Tomorrow in Baltimore Vida Blue will go to the mound attempting to get the A's on top in the American League Championship series. Blue is 2-0 against the Orioles this year.

The question prior to the series was whether Oakland could stop Baltimore's momentum. The Orioles finished league play by winning their last nine games.

Saturday's game in the coliseum saw Baltimore extend its streak to 10 on the basis of some great hitting (three home runs), good, and at times sensational, defense and a very big mistake by Campy Campaneris.

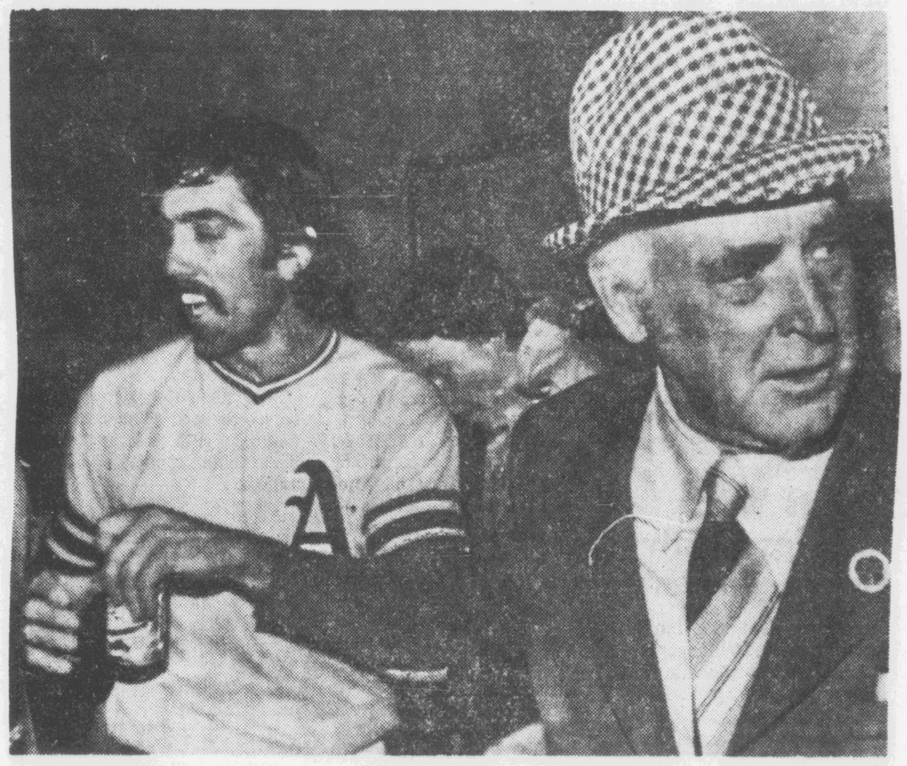
Paul Blair, Brooks Robinson, and Bobby Grich hit home runs off Oakland's ace Catfish Hunter. The top defensive plays were turned in by Don Baylor in left field and Mr. Third Base Brooks Robinson. The key play happened in the fifth inning. With the score 6-3, Campaneris was picked off first base by Mike Cuellar. He had just driven in Billy North for his third run batted in. There were no outs at the time and with Jackson, Bando, and Tenace coming up, the possibility of a big inning was very real. After that kickoff play, the wind was taken out of the A's sails. As Billy North said after the game, "You don't get picked off with the score 6-3."

Yesterday the A's came back, 5-0. Kenny Holtzman pitched a masterful five-hitter and home runs by Sal Bando and Ray Fosse paced the offense. North in centerfield was the defensive standout.

Just as an A's mistake was the key to Saturday's game, a bad Baltimore break cost the Orioles the game yesterday and possibly stopped their momentum. In the eighth inning, with runners on first and second, two out and pinch batter Curt Motton at bat with a two-ball, one-strike count, Holtzman let up on a fast ball that missed badly inside. As Motton ducked to get out of the way the ball hit his bat and rolled harmlessly to Gene Tenace at first base and Tenace made an unassisted putout to end the inning. Ray Fosse's three-run home run allowed Holtzman to coast in the ninth.

Alvin Dark is in Baltimore tonight with his job resting on the outcome of the next two or three games. I think he has to win the World Series to be back next year. If the A's don't get there, Dark will be gone. In a three-hour meeting with A's owner Charles Finley on Friday Dark fought to make sure Ray Fosse was in the lineup. It is to his credit that he did because it's beginning to look like Fosse may be the guy who will save his manager's job.

As he was leaving the clubhouse yesterday second baseman Dick Green said, "The reason we played so inconsistently this year was because Fosse was out hurt. The only person around here who doesn't think Ray can play is Finley."



CLUBHOUSE JOY — Catcher Ray Fosse and A's owner Charles O. Finley celebrated in the clubhouse yesterday after Oakland defeated Baltimore, 5-0, in the second game of the American League playoffs. Fosse's three-run homer helped pitcher Ken Holtzman, who threw a five-hitter. (UPI Telephoto)

FOR DON CORYELL

Young Cardinals May Make Dream Come True

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The young St. Louis Cardinals are making their coach's dreams come true while the San Francisco 49ers' passing attack is turning into a nightmare for Dick Nolan.

St. Louis scored 24 points in the third quarter yesterday on the way to a 34-9 romp over San Francisco to give St. Louis a 4-0 mark atop the National Conference East. Only Minnesota and New England remain unbeaten along with the Cards.

"Every coach is a dreamer," said Cards Coach Don Coryell, "but I don't know if I would have thought we would be 4-0 at this time if you had asked me before the season.

Coryell called it, "our best game—certainly in the second half it was" and said it will give confidence to his young team, which he pointed out averages only about three years' experience per starter.

Diminutive speedsters Terry Metcalf and Mel Gray were the gamebreakers.

Metcalf, second-year sensation from Long Beach State, piled up 95 yards rushing. He scored on a 24-yard run and his 42-yard punt return set up another TD.

Gray scored on passes of 57 and 59 yards from Jim Hart. Each time, Gray caught the ball in front of the defenders but outraced them to the end zone.

A four-yard Hart to Donny Anderson pass and two Jim Bakken field goals rounded out the scoring for the Cards, who tallied on five consecutive drives during one stretch.

But while the Cards rolled, the 49ers offense stalled.

Rookie Wilbur Jackson again looked like the 49ers' top runner in a decade by going 91 yards on 14 carries, but quarterback Joe Reed had another disastrous day.

He started out by hitting Gene Washington on a 58-yard bomb to open the day's pointmaking but managed only 1-for-6 for 5 yards after that while being sacked four times by a tough front four sparked by Council Rudolph and Larry Brooks.

The 49ers managed only a 20-yard Bruce Gossett field goal the rest of the way while a frustrated Nolan put Dennis Morrison at the helm in the third quarter. He responded with a promising 4-for-8 with one interception before leaving with a bruised rib. Rookie Tom Owen finished up.

Nolan announced after the game that the southpaw Morrison would start a week from tonight at Detroit if he were able to play. Nolan said "Dennis was throwing better than the others in practice last week."

The 49er defense forced a trio of early turnovers as San Francisco took a short-lived 9-0 lead. The turning point came when veteran cornerback Jim Johnson intercepted a pass and then had to leave with a bruised shoulder following the return.

The 49ers emerged with a 2-2 record, one game back of Los Angeles in the NFC West.

QB Morrison To Open For Niners

By RALPH CHATOIAN
I-J Sports Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — About the last thing 49er reserve quarterback Dennis Morrison could have imagined prior to the start of the season was that he would be the starter on a nationally televised Monday night game.

But that's exactly what is happening to the 23-year-old southpaw from Kansas State. After yesterday's humiliating 34-9 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals at Candlestick Park, head coach Dick Nolan named Morrison to replace Joe Reed at the helm for the Niners' next game, next Monday night at Detroit.

Morrison replaced the stumbling Reed yesterday in the third quarter and completed four of eight passes for 56 yards before being forced from the game with a bruised rib. He suffered the injury just after releasing a pass, "a helmet right here," said Morrison pointing to his ribs under his throwing arm.

Morrison was a 14th round draft choice in 1973 and spent last year on the taxi squad. He is as raw as they come, but he looked impressive in his debut yesterday.

Even Nolan had good words to say about Morrison and after the team's showing yesterday, good words from Nolan were few.

"Yes, Morrison played well. I was pleased with his performance," said Nolan. "If Dennis is able to go we'll start him against Detroit. If he can't play because of that rib injury (Tom) Owen would start."

Where does that leave Reed, the man who replaced the injured Steve Spurrier five games ago? Nolan said he is still in the 49er plans, but for now, he's the No. 3 man.

Morrison, dressing in the stall next to Reed, was the center of attention for the press. He said he was waiting for such a chance to perform, "but I was hoping Joe would have a good game." He said he got the wind knocked out of him when he took that helmet in the ribs but when asked if he thought he would be okay for the next game he smiled, "I just got some good news. I had better be ready to play." He was referring to the word that filtered down to him that he would start Monday.

One of the passes he completed went to Danny Abramowicz and it carried Danny's string to 95 straight NFL games in which he has caught at least one pass. The league record of 96, held to

Stabler Discusses His Game Thoughts

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Down 10-0 with less than four minutes gone in the first quarter, Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler had just one thing going though his mind.

"All I was saying to myself was not to get panicky because it was just a matter of time knowing that we would get rolling and score points and we did," Stabler said. "Now, that may sound a bit cocky, but we did score and we did win, right?"

Stabler, in hitting on 19-of-33 passes for 237 yards, went on to throw touchdown passes to Fred Biletnikoff, Clarence Davis and Cliff Branch as the Raiders defeated the Cleveland Browns 40-24 yesterday.

The victory put Oakland, now 3-1, in first place in the American Football Conference West Division as the faltering Browns, 1-3, fell into a tie with Houston for third in the AFC Central Division.

"I'd rather be in first place now with a 4-0 mark instead of 3-1, but I guess I'll have to be satisfied," said Oakland Coach John Madden, who picked up his 50th regular-season victory against only 17 defeats and seven ties. "But I'm real proud of the way our guys came back and won."

Not only did the Raiders have nearly twice as many offensive plays as the Browns (90-46), Oakland's net yards rushing and net yards passing also were about 100 per cent more than Cleveland's.

Besides Stabler's three TD passes, Davis — who carried 18 times for 116 yards — also scored on a one-yard burst in

Another Boston Racial Flareup

BOSTON (UPI) — Racial disturbances broke out in the Roslindale section of Boston today as the city entered its fourth full week of classes under a court-ordered busing plan to desegregates its schools.

Officials said a group of 200 whites were dispersed by police when they hurled rocks at buses of black students arriving at Roslindale High School. There were no reports of arrests or injuries.

Following the incidents fighting between blacks and whites broke out inside the school and the situation at mid morning was described as "tense."

Some of the white youths involved in the Roslindale High School incident reportedly went to the nearby Washington Irving Junior High School and threw stones at the building.

At the same time, officials said roving bands of whites in South Boston were causing disruptions in that racially troubled neighborhood and blacks assigned to South Boston High School and its annexes were taken instead to University of Massachusetts at Columbia Point for their safety.

The decision not to bring blacks into South Boston was made Sunday by Supt. William J. Leary after consultation with police. Officials said the request that blacks be taken to UMass was made by Boston NAACP President Thomas I. Atkins.

Yesterday, busing opponents held an ecumenical prayer service and school officials said they expected citywide attendance to increase today over Friday when a white classroom boycott plunged the attendance rate to 51.3 percent.

Another group of more than 1,000 whites from South Boston picketed police headquarters protesting the performance of tactical police in quelling a barroom brawl Saturday night. The group demanded that the tactical force, which is a special riot control unit, be removed from South Boston. They called upon the U.S. Justice Department to investigate the incident.

Oktoberfest Ends Peacefully

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — The most peaceful Oktoberfest in decades ended yesterday with beer hall owners reporting less business than usual at the world's biggest beer bust.

Police said that for the first time in decades, nobody was killed in fistfights, other kinds of altercations or excessive drinking.

By contrast, six Oktoberfest visitors died of injuries suffered in beer hall brawls or of heart attacks suffered from heavy drinking last year.

Russ Allow 90 Jews To Have Picnic

MOSCOW (UPI) — Authorities yesterday permitted 90 Jews to picnic unmolested outside Moscow to mark the Jewish Succoth harvest holiday, a Jewish source said today.

In May, police and plainclothesmen broke up a similar attempt to hold a picnic together with a visiting group of Americans.

Mathematician Alexander Lunts, a Jewish activist, told Western newsmen that the only sign that authorities were aware of yesterday's excursion was the presence of 15 men, apparently KGB secret police agents, standing among nearby trees. They did not interfere, he said.

"This is the first time for many years that we have been allowed to hold such a gathering without interference," Lunts said.

He said he and his colleagues believed the picnic was permitted as a sign of goodwill toward the U.S. Congress.

Congressional critics are delaying granting of most favored-nation trade status to Moscow until it eases its emigration policies.

PARIS (UPI) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and President Ford will meet Dec. 14-16 in the French Caribbean island of Martinique, the Elysee Palace announced today.

Capitol Hill Awaits Visit By President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will make two visits to Capitol Hill this week. At one of them he will answer questions about his pardon of Richard M. Nixon — perhaps the first time ever that a president in office appeared before a congressional committee as a formal witness.

The estimated two-hour visit is to be televised in the same room where millions of viewers saw members of the House Judiciary Committee vote articles of impeachment charging Nixon with the Watergate cover-up and misuse of his presidential power.

The votes led to Nixon's Aug. 9 resignation.

Now the panel's subcommittee on criminal justice wants to know why Ford, a month later, gave Nixon a "free and full" pardon for all crimes committed during his term of office.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. William Hungate, D-Mo., asked Ford a series of questions to explain his decision.

The subcommittee got a response that angered them — that Ford had spoken publicly and at length about the pardon — and a sheaf of clippings.

Hungate demanded that Ford send one of his top aides, but the President, a 25-year veteran of the House and comfortable with its procedures, offered to make the visit himself.

The White House had said both George Washington and Abraham Lincoln appeared before congressional committees, but the Library of Congress says this is the first presidential visit in history.

Washington, the library contends, appeared before the full Senate and Lincoln's appearance before the House Judiciary Committee was informal.

For the second time since he became President two months ago, Ford has scheduled an address to a joint session of Congress.

Such sessions usually are confined to annual State of the Union speeches and these have not been frequent in recent years.

Ron Nessen, Ford's press secretary, said the President will ask Congress to bite the bullet on several mandatory anti-inflation measures.

Nessen ruled out a gasoline tax increase, but left open the possibility Ford might seek other tax increases and propose measures to make more loan money available and reduce interest rates.

After that, Congress plans to start a month-long election recess Friday without taking action on trade or tax reform or the confirmation of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be vice president.

Both houses plan action this week on a campaign reform measure which would finance presidential elections, primaries and conventions with public funds and limit contributions and candidate spending.

Both houses also must pass a continuing resolution to finance foreign aid and other agencies which have not yet received permanent appropriations.

REDWOOD BLANKED

Terra Linda's Defense Tough

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Terra Linda High School, bullying on defense and opportunistic on offense, defeated Redwood, 15-0 Saturday night in a Marin County Athletic League opening football game at San Rafael's Miller Field.

Linebacker Larry Loberg joined linemen Tim Larkey, Rich Mart: and Jim Sullivan in a search-and-destroy mission that ignored the Redwood offensive line, while forcing three fumbles and blocking two punts.

Two of the fumbles led to touchdowns, and one of the blocks produced a safety as Terra Linda did all the scoring in the second quarter.

Without help from the defense, Terra Linda might never have scored. Despite 68 yards rushing by Dick Labarthe, the Trojans gained only 110 total yards (unofficially). But the Giants, suffering from the same woes on offense that plagued them in an 0-3 preseason, managed only 19 yards passing and -6 rushing.

Labarthe also recovered the fumble, on the Redwood 44 yard line, that led to the first touchdown. It came seven plays later, with less than a minute gone in the second period, as quarterback Brad Lucchi dove in from one yard out.

Redwood's next three series ended with an interception, the blocked punt-safety and finally with the fumble that set up the last touchdown. Larkey cuaght Giant quarterback Mark Chapman 23 yards behind the line of scrimmage and knocked the ball loose, whereupon Trojan end Dave Losk fell on it at the Redwood 25.

It took nine plays to score, with Labarthe plunging the final yard.

Although inexperienced and outplayed, Redwood's defending MCAL co-champions showed admirable spirit and determination. The team has scored just once in four games this season, but they displayed tenacity.

BLOCKED PUNT HELPS

Wildcats Trip Lincoln '11'

By DAVID DEL GRANDE

The Marin Catholic High School football team, coming to life after blocking a Lincoln punt late in the first half, stormed past the Mustangs 23-6 in Greenbrae Saturday, before 300 Wildcat fans.

The Wildcats trailed 6-0 with 10 seconds to go in the second quarter when defensive end John Roche blocked a Mustang punt at the nine yard line. The ball then rolled through the end zone for a safety and Marin Catholic trailed 6-2 at the half.

With thoughts of its first victory of the season, Marin Catholic dominated the second half. Led by a devastating ground game that netted 229 yards on the day, the Wildcats scored twice in the middle of the third period and then coasted in.

On the first play following a Mustang punt with five minutes to go in the third quarter, senior Steve Lombardi swept right end for 31 yards and a touchdown giving Marin a 9-6 advantage. Just seven plays later, following Terry O'Brien's fumble recovery, sophomore Ed Ugarte put the Wildcats (1-3) ahead 16-6 with a four-yard touchdown run. On the afternoon, Lombardi rushed for 91 yards, Ugarte 71.

Surprise! Analy Tops Rancho '11'

By DIANE FISHER

Based on pre-season play, Rancho Cotate High School should have beaten Analy in the Sonoma County League football opener Saturday in Rohnert Park.

But such was not the case as the Tigers upset Rancho, 6-0.

Rancho Cotate (1-1-2) was strongly favored over Analy, coming out of the pre-season with a win and two ties compared to the Tigers one non-league victory and two losses.

After a lackluster first half, Analy (2-2-0) recovered an Eric Mogel fumble to gain possession on the Rancho 35.

Operating out of a short-punt formation, the Tigers scored on an eight-yard run by running back Ron Schoen.

Late in the fourth quarter the Cougars threatened but they were stopped by a tough Analy defense.

YUBA 49ERS

Marin Tars Defeated , 3-0, In Football

By BRIAN SOBEL

It was a football game marred by offensive miscues and misery. The Yuba College 49ers edged the College of Marin Tars, 3-0, Saturday.

The non-league contest and home opener for the Tars (0-3) was almost 50 minutes old before the 49ers' Bob Holland kicked a 26-yard field goal, much to the disappointment of some 375 fans.

The field goal was set up by two long gains: the first a 42-yard bomb from Yuba quarterback Mike Worley to the receiver and kicker Bob Holland and the second a 21-yard sprint by Steve Razo a 6-foot-1, 200-pound fullback. After Marin held Yuba for three consecutive plays, Holland booted the game-decider with 10:04 remaining.

Although the contest was low scoring, there was plenty of action based on the number of turnovers. Yuba fumbled the football away three times. Two out of five Marin bobbles were recovered by the 49ers.

Marin quarterback Hoza Wright completed seven out of 19 passes for 101 yards. Tar fullback Steve D'Ambra led Marin runners with 73 yards.

Meanwhile, Yuba's quarterback Mike Worley completed seven of 18 passes for 84 yards while the 49ers's backs rushed for 173 yards in 55 efforts.

Scoring was also limited by penalties. Yuba was called for 10 penalties accounting for 90 yards and Marin was assessed nine penalties for 72 yards.

Willits Wins; Fumbles Costly For St. Vincent

Although St. Vincent had 408 total yards compared to 150 for the Wolverines, the Mustangs kept the ball only two of the 10 times they had possession.

Wolverine quarterback Dave Gellinger directed the Willits attack, scoring in the first half on a dive into the end zone from the one, and passing to John Meyer for the two-point conversion.

Meyer subsequently caught two touchdown passes, covering 47 and 33 yards respectively.

St. Vincent's lone touchdown came in the second quarter when Tim Burnett broke loose for 62 yards and ran for the two-point coversion.

More Successes For Cards, Pats

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For the first few weeks, winning was an experience. Now it's becoming commonplace for the New England Patriots and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The two clubs, both picked to finish near the bottom of their divisions, continued to rate as pro football's biggest stories as they ran their records to 4-0 yesterday with impressive victories.

New England, which numbers Super Bowl champion Miami and powerhouse Los Angeles among its victims, annihilated the winless Baltimore Colts 42-3, even pulling its first team midway through the third period.

And St. Louis, trailing 9-0 at halftime, erupted for 24 points in the third period to swamp the San Francisco 49ers 34-9.

Jim Plunkett, who left the game in the third period, threw three touchdown passes, two of them to Reggie Rucker, as the Patriots took a 21-3 lead at the half and then tacked on 14 more points in the third period to turn the game into a rout and ruin Joe Thomas' head coaching debut.

Vikings 23, Cowboys 21

Bengals 28, Redskins 17

Bills 27, Packers 7

Jim Braxton scored on three short runs and Joe Ferguson passed nine yards to Ahmad Rashad for another score as Buffalo trounced Green Bay.

Steelers 13, Oilers 7

Preston Pearson ran nine yards for the deciding TD early in the fourth period as Pittsburgh overcame stubborn Houston.

Falcons 14, Giants 7

Safety Ray Brown returned an interception 59 yards for the go-ahead score as Atlanta recorded its first victory by beating the Giants.

Bears 24, Saints 10

Broncos 17, Chiefs 14

Rookie Jon Keyworth scored twice on short bursts in the second half as Denver beat Kansas City for its first win.

Rams 16, Lions 13

John Hadl, who had his 2,000th career completion, threw four yards to Bob Klein as Los Angeles jumped to a 16-0 lead.

Eagles 13, Chargers 7

'Penguin' Cey Is On The Rise

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — They call Ron Cey "The Penguin," but in the eyes of the Los Angeles Dodgers he stands more like an eagle today.

Cey, whose squatty 5-foot-9, 185-pound frame certainly belies his ability as one of baseball's premier run producers, turned in one of the best hitting performances in National League playoff history yesterday and because of it the Dodgers now are only one victory away from their first pennant since 1966.

The 26-year-old third baseman, nicknamed "Penguin" because of his unusual walk, collected four hits, including a pair of doubles and a homer, while leading the Dodgers to a 5-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was their second straight victory in the best-of-five series, and they return home now needing only one win in three games to wrap up the NL flag.

Lefthander Doug Rau, a 13-game winner during the regular season, will try to get the Dodgers a sweep of the series tomorrow at Los Angeles. He will be opposed by Bruce Kison, a righthander who posted a 9-8 record.

It was not too surprising to those who had seen Cey play during the regular season that he should emerge as the hero of game No. 2, but it was a bit strange to Cey himself. He had been so ill the past two weeks he was beginning to wonder if he could contribute anything to the Dodger effort.

Saturday, for example, he made two errors in the field for the first time this season and went hitless in three at-bats. And, in his first at-bat yesterday he popped out with the bases loaded.

"I've had a virus the last two weeks and was not feeling up to par," said Cey. "I didn't miss any playing time but developed an ulcerated tongue and didn't eat. I lost about six pounds. It's hard to say if it's significant, but I switched to a lighter bat today, from 34 ounces to 32. When you get tired you have a tendency to uppercut. I was much quicker today."

After failing in his first at-bat, Cey was unstoppable. He homered off the leftfield foul pole leading off the fourth, doubled in the sixth, triggered the decisive three-run eighth with another double and singled in the ninth. He joins Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson as the only National Leaguers to collect four hits in a playoff game.

the second quarter and Pete Banaszak rambled nine yards for another score. Three interceptions by George Atkinson stopped the Browns' final drives, one of them setting up George Blanda's 30-yard field goal.

The Browns other two touchdowns came on a 34-yard pass from Mike Phipps to Greg Pruitt and a 44-yard run by Hugh McKinnis 52 seconds into the final period. Don Cockroft's 46-yard field goal completed the Browns' scoring.

Branch and the Browns' Cliff Brooks were ejected from the game following a fight in the third period after Branch beat Brooks for a touchdown.

When asked if he said anything to Morrison after that pass, Abramowicz said, "No, he knows how I feel." He said the record, "of course goes through my mind. I'll be glad when that's over with."

Danny said he would be very proud to set such a record. "It takes eight years for a record like this. It means you have to stay healthy for every game, in addition to catching a pass."

Another Boston Racial Flareup

BOSTON (UPI) — Racial disturbances broke out in the Roslindale section of Boston today as the city entered its fourth full week of classes under a court-ordered busing plan to desegregates its schools.

Officials said a group of 200 whites were dispersed by police when they hurled rocks at buses of black students arriving at Roslindale High School. There were no reports of arrests or injuries.

Following the incidents fighting between blacks and whites broke out inside the school and the situation at mid morning was described as "tense."

Some of the white youths involved in the Roslindale High School incident reportedly went to the nearby Washington Irving Junior High School and threw stones at the building.

At the same time, officials said roving bands of whites in South Boston were causing disruptions in that racially troubled neighborhood and blacks assigned to South Boston High School and its annexes were taken instead to University of Massachusetts at Columbia Point for their safety.

The decision not to bring blacks into South Boston was made Sunday by Supt. William J. Leary after consultation with police. Officials said the request that blacks be taken to UMass was made by Boston NAACP President Thomas I. Atkins.

Yesterday, busing opponents held an ecumenical prayer service and school officials said they expected citywide attendance to increase today over Friday when a white classroom boycott plunged the attendance rate to 51.3 percent.

Another group of more than 1,000 whites from South Boston picketed police headquarters protesting the performance of tactical police in quelling a barroom brawl Saturday night. The group demanded that the tactical force, which is a special riot control unit, be removed from South Boston. They called upon the U.S. Justice Department to investigate the incident.

Oktoberfest Ends Peacefully

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — The most peaceful Oktoberfest in decades ended yesterday with beer hall owners reporting less business than usual at the world's biggest beer bust.

Police said that for the first time in decades, nobody was killed in fistfights, other kinds of altercations or excessive drinking.

By contrast, six Oktoberfest visitors died of injuries suffered in beer hall brawls or of heart attacks suffered from heavy drinking last year.

Russ Allow 90 Jews To Have Picnic

MOSCOW (UPI) — Authorities yesterday permitted 90 Jews to picnic unmolested outside Moscow to mark the Jewish Succoth harvest holiday, a Jewish source said today.

In May, police and plainclothesmen broke up a similar attempt to hold a picnic together with a visiting group of Americans.

Mathematician Alexander Lunts, a Jewish activist, told Western newsmen that the only sign that authorities were aware of yesterday's excursion was the presence of 15 men, apparently KGB secret police agents, standing among nearby trees. They did not interfere, he said.

"This is the first time for many years that we have been allowed to hold such a gathering without interference," Lunts said.

He said he and his colleagues believed the picnic was permitted as a sign of goodwill toward the U.S. Congress.

Conference Slated

PARIS (UPI) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and President Ford will meet Dec. 14-16 in the French Caribbean island of Martinique, the Elysee Palace announced today.

Capitol Hill Awaits Visit By President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will make two visits to Capitol Hill this week. At one of them he will answer questions about his pardon of Richard M. Nixon — perhaps the first time ever that a president in office appeared before a congressional committee as a formal witness.

The estimated two-hour visit is to be televised in the same room where millions of viewers saw members of the House Judiciary Committee vote articles of impeachment charging Nixon with the Watergate cover-up and misuse of his presidential power.

The votes led to Nixon's Aug. 9 resignation.

Now the panel's subcommittee on criminal justice wants to know why Ford, a month later, gave Nixon a "free and full" pardon for all crimes committed during his term of office.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. William Hungate, D-Mo., asked Ford a series of questions to explain his decision.

The subcommittee got a response that angered them — that Ford had spoken publicly and at length about the pardon — and a sheaf of clippings.

Hungate demanded that Ford send one of his top aides, but the President, a 25-year veteran of the House and comfortable with its procedures, offered to make the visit himself.

The White House had said both George Washington and Abraham Lincoln appeared before congressional committees, but the Library of Congress says this is the first presidential visit in history.

Washington, the library contends, appeared before the full Senate and Lincoln's appearance before the House Judiciary Committee was informal.

For the second time since he became President two months ago, Ford has scheduled an address to a joint session of Congress.

Such sessions usually are confined to annual State of the Union speeches and these have not been frequent in recent years.

Ron Nessen, Ford's press secretary, said the President will ask Congress to bite the bullet on several mandatory anti-inflation measures.

Nessen ruled out a gasoline tax increase, but left open the possibility Ford might seek other tax increases and propose measures to make more loan money available and reduce interest rates.

After that, Congress plans to start a month-long election recess Friday without taking action on trade or tax reform or the confirmation of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be vice president.

Both houses plan action this week on a campaign reform measure which would finance presidential elections, primaries and conventions with public funds and limit contributions and candidate spending.

Both houses also must pass a continuing resolution to finance foreign aid and other agencies which have not yet received permanent appropriations.
